who NEEDS THIS SIGN?

On a clear day when you turn into a dual-highway you know well, the "wrong way" sign may seem superfluous. Yet, for the stranger who doesn't know the area, when visibility is limited or driving conditions poor — that sign may avert a head-on collision.

The divided thoroughfare requires a new assessment of the dangers of confusion. It wasn't enough to design better highways. Men had to anticipate a whole new set of circumstances in which human error could invite disaster.

Our churches have been conscious of that kind of forward thinking for years. Religion is more than the quest for truth. It is the sound recognition of the costs, the hazards, of moral and spiritual confusion.

Part of following the right way is understanding why the wrong way is wrong.

Advance Care Can Prevent Crib Accidents

Parents buying a new crib or fixing up an old one for their baby should remember that the consumer product safety commission set strict standards for any crib manufactured after early 1974.

These regulations required that (1) crib slats be no further apart than two and three-eighths inches, and (2) locks and latches to drop the side of the crib must be out of the way and secure to prevent accidental release by the baby from inside the crib.

Look for a crib with very narrow spaces between slats, and as much distance as possible between the mattress and the top of the side rail to discourage climbing out, the commission suggests.

If you have an older crib or antique, take time and carefully look at the general condition of the crib. Are there any missing parts? Are any slats, bolts, or fasteners loose? The kind of paint you use is very important. Be sure to look for paints marked "non-toxic" and "lead-free" to prevent poisoning when baby is chewing on things.

Whether the crib is new or old, a good, firm mattress that fits tightly is necessary. If you can put two or more fingers between the mattress and the crib, the mattress is too small. Babies have wriggled down into such space, become caught and suffocated.

Bumper pads aren't just luxuries. They're an investment in safety, especially in older cribs with wider spaced slats. They prevent small babies from slipping between the slats and strangling. The pads need to run around the entire inside of the crib and be fastened firmly with at least six straps.

Never use plastic bags over the mattress. If the sheet comes loose, baby can suffocate. Pillows do not belong in cribs. As soon as your baby can pull to stand, set the crib as low as you can and don't leave toys or other objects in the crib that your little one can use to help climb out.

It's a good idea to check these points not only when you first get a crib, but also from time to time.

Bright Ideas In Home Decorating

HELPFUL HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

ELEGANT AND PRACTICAL SKYLIGHTS

A LASTING SKYLIGHT can enhance your home.

Even when the weather is frightful, skylights are delightful if you've got the right kind.

A new material is now available for the installation of a skylight into your roof that won't let the outside in when the weather gets rough. This new material is a double-skinned acrylic sheet that's both lightweight and load-bearing with excellent impact resistance. It's one material that will stay on your skylight a long time, looking great. It lets in as much light as glass, and lets out much less heat. It's easy to install, and can be kept clean with just soap and water.

Installed by experienced fabricators and specially constructed to help insulate against noise, this ACRYLITE® SDP® sheet is made by CY/RO Industries in clear, white and decorator shades of solar bronze. Its ribs help block vision, protecting your privacy as well.

For the name of the nearest authorized fabricator and a free booklet about this new material, write for "News in Transparent Plastics," CY/RO Industries, 697 Route 46, Clifton, New Jersey 07015.

All Things Connected

Following is taken from a speech by William Millikan, governor of Michigan:

It is easy, I think, to allow ourselves to forget our interdependence and to become preoccupied with superficial differences. Most states with major cities experience some rural-urban conflicts. Nationally, we have often settled into north-south or east-west divisions.

But the fact is we do share the same planet, the same country and, more importantly, the same air, water and land.

It has always been that way, even if we have not recognized the truth.

No one has articulated our situation better than Seattle, Chief of the Squamish Tribe, did in 1854.

"This we know," he said. "The Earth does not belong to man; man belongs to the Earth. This we know. All things are connected like the blood which unites one family. All things are connected."

We are entering nationally an age of limits. Some people today are arguing that an age of limits must result in a slowing down of our efforts to revitalize urban areas or to protect the environment.

In fact, the truth is just the opposite.

The guiding concept of the age of limits is that we should use what we already have to the utmost and we should be very prudent about commandeering new resources.

We have learned that our resources are limited, that we have only a finite amount of land, water and air on this earth and we had better use that wisely. We are recognizing that taxes which go too high can suffocate the society in which they are levied.

And we are recognizing that a throw-away mentality is wasteful and in the long run impractical, whether it applies to bottles and cans or to cities.

We have been developing a throw-away society for most of our history as a nation. For so many years it seemed our resources were limitless. There were always new frontiers to be conquered and new lands to be settled.

It was easier to abandon neighborhoods and move to the suburbs than to work to keep them vital. It was easier to package goods in throwaway containers than to return the containers. It was easier to bury toxic chemicals in a quickly forgotten landfill than to safely dispose of them.

But we have learned that the throwaway approach costs much more in the long run both in economic terms and, more importantly, in human terms.

Oil Company Trial

Columnist Bob Johnson of the Wadena Pioneer-Journal takes a dim view of an offer recently received in the mail. This is what he writes about his reaction:

The gasoline shortage controversy has raised an important question in my mind concerning sanitation: What does an oil company do with dirty towels returned by unsatisfied customers?

And there's another important energy question: Can the oil company's nine 15-day free trial offers be served concurrently, or must they be taken one at a time, thus requiring 135 days instead of only 15.

All this came about when the oil company, in one fat envelope along with my monthly bill, offered me free use of:

1. Four bath towels, six dish towels, four hand towels, four dish cloths, eight washcloths, four pot holders and six guest towels.
2. An "entertainment center" including a cassette recorder-player, an FM-AM-CB radio and a three-inch solid state black and white TV.
3. A five-piece luggage set in tan or burgundy vinyl.
4. A wall-mantel clock.
5. A fire-protective chest.
6. A play-record stereo system.
7. A 13-inch color TV with remote control.
8. A deluxe camera outfit.
9. A porcelain-on-steel cookware set.

Each of these nine free offers was livingly described in nine full color, multipaged brochures. If, after a 15-day trial, I want to purchase one of these items, I can charge it to my oil company card and pay only a few dollars a month.

And — the best part of all — the towels and everything else can be ordered simply by dialing a toll-free number at any time of the day or night, including Sundays.

It was this last point that prompted me to slap my wife on the head with the nine oil company brochures. She'd just explained that she drove the family car home on an empty tank because the oil company's station was closed at 6 p.m. Saturday.

"Are you trying to tell me that the oil company will sell me a towel at 2 o'clock Sunday morning, but won't sell me a gallon of gas Saturday night?" I asked.

"Maybe we can buy some gas at a Cannon towel factory," she suggested.

I don't like it when I'm begged to buy towels from a gasoline company that will no longer wipe my windshield, not even with a greasy rag. I know I'm being unreasonable. I know pot holders don't grow on fossil trees in Saudi Arabia. I don't care. There is something to be said for being unreasonable and I just said it.

I also don't like it when a business firm sticks its credit card inside my door to sell me a necessity of life. If I want to buy a $450 TV set, I'll go to a TV store. If the manager says he's out of TVs, but tries to sell me gasoline, I'll get by with my old TV.

If a luggage manufacturer says he can't sell me a burgundy bag on Tuesdays because the world supply of burgundy is dangerously low, I'll sympathize. But if I see that luggage manufacturer pumping gas on Tuesdays, I'll be irked. I'll wonder why he is moonlighting at a gas station when he should be spending his Tuesdays and his luggage profits searching for more burgundy or for a good substitute.

"I'm going to accept the oil company's free trial, but I won't buy. After 15 days, I'll send the towel package back with a note complaining that the potholders jammed my carburetor.

Hours That Change Lives

Bob Conklin, chairman of the board of Personal Dynamics, makes some good points in an article in the Minnesota Business Journal. He tells about an acquaintance who was disgruntled with his job — the same job he held six years before.

The boss was insensitive and unappreciative. The work was no challenge and lacked opportunity. The man seemed steeped in futility, bitterness and self pity. He complained of having to start at a lower position if he went somewhere else and cited the family responsibilities which he believed kept him tied down.

Conklin pointed out that the man was talking about working eight hours a day.

"People whose lives are going someplace don't limit themselves to eight hours a day," he writes. "Millions of people work 40 hours a week. They'll never change. It's what you do with the other 128 hours that will set you apart from the masses. Pick out whatever you want to do and then start doing it for nothing. Soon that incidental activity will become the major force in your life. Just let it happen."

Conklin says he believes many people are like that man — they have become so caustic in their attitudes that a change in situations, no matter how drastic, would not significantly alter their outlooks on life.

He tells of a young mother who has ideas of setting goals. "My goals are all set for me," she had said. "I've got these small children to care for. I'd live to get into art and advertising but I don't have anything to say about what I do with my life." The children are now grown and gone but the woman now says it's too late to do the things she wanted to do. The person is the same — only the excuses are different.

"It seems to me that people are divided into two groups. When the work day begins and ends is of major importance to the first group — and of no importance to the second. The first group is possessed by a job or daily burdens that imprison them, the second is engulfed with the satisfaction of going from one activity to another.

"Whatever it is that you want to do, whether it's progress in your present work or doing something different, you have 128 hours every week after the usual 40 in which to do it. . .It's not what you do with the eight hours a day on the job that counts. It's how you spend the other 16 that will determine where you'll be five years from now!"

Interesting Opinions:

"I never did anything worth doing by accident; nor did any of my inventions come by accident; they came by work."

—Thomas Alva Edison

"Nothing is easier than spending public money. It does not appear to belong to anybody. The temptation is overwhelming to bestow it on somebody."

—Calvin Coolidge

"Money won't buy happiness, but it will pay the salaries of a large research staff to study the problem."

—Bill Vaughan

Taxpayers Can't Afford the Taj Mahal

One more time, the Senate has decided to go ahead with more funding for the new Senate office building. I voted against the increase.

Officially, the project is known as the Hart building. Informally, it's known less fondly as the Taj Mahal of modern times, Excedrin headache number 923, or a standing memorial to reckless government spending.

This was the building, you may recall, that back in 1972 was supposed to cost us about $42 million. In seven years, the price tag has more than tripled to the latest estimate of $142,627,700, with many of the building's more hardnosed critics predicting eventual costs of $200 million.

This will be the most expensive building that the U.S. government has ever built. . . even though many other buildings are far larger.

Thus, it doesn't take a lot of common sense to realize that the Senate has designed a building whose features go far beyond the usual dignity and enduring style needed in places where our nation's business is conducted. This one extends beyond those qualities into the realm of the overly-luxurious esoteric.

The latest total of $142,627,700 includes an additional appropriation of $57,480,700 since the last time more money was requested for this tower. Ironically, that $57,480,700 was passed as the so-called "economy" option. It's said to be what's needed to complete the building, but without "frills", those frills being things like furniture.

I consider that reasoning a total sham. Once again, it doesn't take a lot of smarts to know that next year Senators will be back to request more money to add those certain items usually considered essential for the conduct of business. . . such as furniture.

Also included in "reductions" to achieve the "economy" plan were subway, police facility, and artwork among others. Those will surely be eventually added into the plans again. Unfortunately, one feature which should be in the building, an energy management system was among the cut features.

Unfortunately, we new members walked into a situation already underway for many years. The building's framework is up. $70 million has already been spent. Razing the structure now would be an even more unjustified waste of taxpayers' money.

Realistically, the building will have to be completed. However, the completion need not be in the opulent style currently specified.

The House still has another chance to act and, judging from their past action on this matter, may decide to turn down this latest request.

If they do, and yet another version of Excedrin headache number 923 turns up in the Senate for consideration, I will back a move to make basic structural changes in the plans.

What's been proposed so far as "economizing" has been nothing more than a few crumbs thrown to a protesting public, a removal of some of the more elaborate features. That's a nice gesture, but it doesn't do much to cut the total costs.

Instead, we must stop, reevaluate the whole structure, and consider far-reaching design changes to make the building more simple and efficient. To really reduce costs, it must be made an office building similar to one built in the private sector where costs are measured very carefully.

I have built a lot of buildings in my business career, and I know we can achieve dignity, beauty, and usefulness without throwing money away.

Disabled Agent Orange Vets To Get Assistance

List of American casualties of the Vietnam War continues to mount, even though U.S. involvement in the fighting in Indochina ended several years ago.

Hundreds of thousands — possibly many more — American GIs were exposed to Agent Orange and other powerfully toxic defoliants while fighting in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War. Agent Orange contains dioxin, which Barry Commoner and many other scientists have called "the most toxic man-made substance known."

Dioxin has been blamed for a number of severe health problems and some deaths among Vietnam veterans, as well as birth defects among some of their children. These disabilities are showing up years after exposure to herbicides such as Agent Orange.

The 622,000-member Disabled American Veterans (DAV) has set up a nationwide program to assist these veterans in filing claims with the Veterans Administration (VA) for health care and disability benefits for illnesses that may be associated with dioxin poisoning.

The most common symptoms attributed to dioxin poisoning include:

—Numbness in fingers, toes, arms and legs in varying degrees;

—Nervous disorders, especially loss or decrease in the sensitivity of the senses;

—Psychological effects, including loss of memory, confusion, aggression or irritability;

—Skin rashes, specifically chloracne, which resembles a severe case of acne and is usually found on the face, arms, chest, back or legs;

—Altered sex drive, including diminished sex drive or impotence among men and increased sexual activity among women;

—Cancer, particularly cancer of the liver; and —Birth defects in children born to affected parents—primarily defects of the hands, fingers, feet and toes.

Some hyperactivity and psychological problems have been reported in children of affected parents.

"It will be extremely difficult to show that these disabilities are the result of exposure to Agent Orange for the purposes of claims for VA benefits," said DAV national director of services Norman B. Hartnett. "That's why it's so important that a Vietnam veteran have a veterans' benefits expert, who does not get his pay check from the government, represent him in filing this type of claim."

The services of DAV veterans' benefits experts are provided free of charge to veterans and members of their families.

Veterans of the war in Southeast Asia who have symptoms they feel may be related to exposure to such herbicides as Agent Orange should contact: National Service Headquarters, Disabled American Veterans, 807 Maine Av., S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024.

The case will then be referred to a DAV national service officer in the veteran's area, who will have the resources and expertise of the entire DAV national service program behind him in developing a claim.

Cut The Cost Of Shopping

By Carolyn Avelino

Here's some food for thought: If you're an average food shopper, you probably travel about 400 miles a year just for provisions! That's three miles per trip to the store, 2.5 times a week.

Avelino

To help cut down on these excursions and their cost, here are a few tips from Hunt-Wesson Foods.

- Plan weekly menus. Try to shop for everything you'll need during one store visit.
- Prepare shopping lists. Write down what you need. Don't wait till you're out of an item: as supplies get low, add them to your list.
- Stock up. Take advantage of sales to stock up on basics and nonperishables. However, don't buy perishables just because they're on sale. Food is no bargain if it's wasted.
- Walk or pedal. If you need just a few items, walk or bicycle to the store. You'll get great exercise, and it won't cost you a penny for gas.
- Combine trips. Do your grocery shopping while running other errands or in transit from work, or church or the laundromat.
- Pool it. Form a car pool for your weekly trip to the supermarket. Save on gas and enjoy a semi-social event. If you have children, take turns babysitting and let the others shop for the sitter.

Another way to cut expenses is to pick up a copy of Hunt-Wesson's Better Food Buys list at your local market. It tells which foods are in plentiful supply and peak season, and those foods are usually less expensive. You will also enjoy the recipes offered on the flip side of the list.

Try speeding up food economies by putting the brake on unnecessary marketing mileage.

PUBLIC RELEASE

The Plummer School today announced its policy for free and reduced price meals, free milk for children served under the National School Lunch, School Breakfast, and Special Milk Programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size income criteria for determining eligibility:

Family Size	Eligibility Scale for Free Meals and Free Milk (Dollars)	Eligibility Scale for Reduced Price Meals (Dollars)
1	$4,590	$7,160
2	6,040	9,420
3	7,490	11,680
4	8,940	13,940
5	10,390	16,200
6	11,840	18,470
7	13,290	20,730
8	14,740	22,990
Each Additional Family Member	1,450	2,260

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals or free milk. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. A simple statement of income and family size is required, plus a signed certification by the parent or guardian that the information provided is correct.

In certain cases foster childern are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, it should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy, the Superintendent will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may wish to discuss the decision with the determining official on an informal basis. If a parent wishes to make a formal appeal, a request may be made either orally or in writing to Jerry Gerardy, Chairman of the School Board, Plummer, Minn. 56748, 465-4372, for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, or for additional benefits such as free meals and milk if the family income falls to or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color or national origin.

Plummer School office has a copy of the complete policy, which may be reviewed by any interested party.

APPLE AND CHEESE RING

Food packages are good sources for recipes and helpful hints. A case in point is the Fleischmann's Yeast package which carries "Hints for Better Baking" on each strip of three packages. The recipes include how to combine the yeast with other ingredients, time and temperature recommendations, pan sizes and approximate time needed for each step. Try this tasty Apple and Cheese Ring.

APPLE AND CHEESE RING

Makes 2 rings

- 2 cups peeled chopped apples
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 1/2 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 cup dark seedless raisins
- 1/4 cup chopped walnuts
- 2/3 cup milk
- 1/2 cup water
- 1/4 cup margarine
- 4 cups unsifted flour (about)
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 packages Fleischmann's Active Dry Yeast
- 1 egg, at room temperature
- 1/2 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese
- melted margarine

Mix apples, lemon juice, brown sugar, raisins and nuts. Heat milk, water, and margarine to 120°-130°F.

Combine 1 cup flour, sugar, salt and yeast. Add liquids and beat 2 minutes. Add egg, cheese and 1/2 cup flour. Beat 2 minutes. Stir in more flour to make a soft dough. On floured board, knead 8-10 minutes, let rise until doubled, about 1 hour.

Punch dough down. On floured board, roll into two 12 x 10 inch rectangles. Brush with margarine. Top with apple mix. Roll up from long sides, sealing the seams. Form into rings on greased baking sheets. Seal ends. Cut 1-inch wide slices almost to the center. Turn slices on sides. Cover; let rise until doubled, about 1 hour. Bake at 375°F for 20-25 minutes, or until done.

LIFE-SAVING FACTS FOR WOMEN

Breast cancer will afflict one in 13 American women at some time during their lives, according to the American Cancer Society. Yet, results of a recent survey conducted by that same agency show that women generally underestimate the importance of breast cancer's early detection.

According to the survey, only three out of 10 women are aware that when breast cancer is found in its early, localized stages, the cure rate is 85 percent, contrasted to a 57 percent survival rate once the cancer advances to the lymph nodes.

Early detection saves lives, and the best protection is a program of regular breast self-examination and checkups, including mammography.

Mammography is currently the most effective means of finding early cancer, often up to a year before a lump can be felt by a woman or her physician. Now magnification mammography, an important new procedure made possible through the introduction of a unique Microfocus X-ray system developed by Pfizer/Radiologic Sciences Inc., can provide earlier and more accurate diagnosis of breast cancer. Thus, when magnification mammography is used to back-up conventional contact mammography, it can reduce the number of equivocal cases which helps lower the incidence of benign biopsies.

Despite mammography's effectiveness, however, many doctors are reporting that a significant number of women turn down the procedure, even when a lump or other breast cancer symptom exists.

Linking this attitude to unfounded fears resulting from recent controversies about mammography, Dr. Edward Sickles, Assistant Professor of Radiology at the University of California, San Francisco, points to a need for dissemination of accurate information to help women make responsible decisions about this diagnostic tool.

"Today, low-dose mammography uses a substantially lower X-ray dosage than was required three years ago," Dr. Sickles said. "Any X-ray procedure involves a theoretical risk. But medical concensus has always been that for women with breast cancer symptoms or those who have a high risk of developing breast cancer, the benefits of low-dose mammography far outweigh the risks."

Women who have a personal or family history of breast cancer are classified as having a high risk of developing the disease.

Since the incidence of breast cancer increases after age 35, and is most pronounced after age 50, Dr. Sickles recommends that women have their first, or base line, mammogram between the ages of 35 and 40. This establishes a pattern against which subsequent X-rays can be compared. The frequency of follow-up mammograms will be determined by individual risk factors and the appearance of breast tissue in the initial mammogram.

In instances when a contact mammogram is not detailed enough for a radiologist to make a decisive diagnosis, magnification mammography can be helpful.

In tests Dr. Sickles conducted with the Pfizer/RSI Microfocus X-ray system at the University of California, San Francisco, magnification mammography increased the accuracy of diagnosis by 40 percent over conventional contact mammography.

"Often conventional mammography does not show sufficient detail for a radiologist to definitely diagnose a tumor as malignant or benign, so a biopsy is necessary. Now, when a contact mammogram appears equivocal, we can use magnification mammography as a 'second opinion' before proceeding to biopsy," Dr. Sickles explained.

Since magnification mammography produces images that are so detailed and sharp, it can detect masses too small to be imaged clearly in a contact mammogram and can frequently differentiate between benign and malignant growths which appear equivocal in contact mammography. By increasing the accuracy of diagnosis, it reduces the number of equivocal cases, and thus lowers the number of biopsies.

"Magnification mammography is particularly helpful for the woman whose conventional mammograms do not give a clear indication of either a benign or malignant condition. Since four out of five biopsies turn out to be benign, magnification mammography stands to benefit a significant number of women," Dr. Sickles concluded.

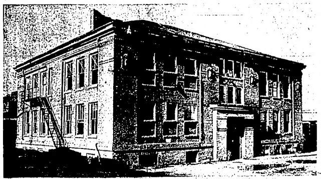
.... Coming Down



DEMOLITION HAS BEGUN on the Old Washington school building which is part of the Lincoln high school complex on Knight avenue and First street in Thief River Falls. Contract for the demolition was awarded to Nelson Construction company for $56,375 at the last meeting of the local board of education. Condition of the building caused the school board to order its use for classes discontinued earlier this year. Because the structure is nearly surrounded by other school structures, the contractor will have to exercise special care to contain the rubble to the approximate area of the building itself.

Charge Three For Soliciting Funds In TRF

Three members of the Unification church ("Moonies") who gave their address as Minneapolis were arrested in Thief River Falls Monday and charged under city ordinance with soliciting funds without a license.

Their case was scheduled for hearing in Pennington county court Thursday and they called in pleas of not guilty to the charges, according to the local police department. All were freed on $50 bond.

The police department stated that the three were arrested for soliciting funds in the Thief River Falls downtown business district. They reportedly were giving flowers to people who made contributions. The cases will be scheduled for trial at a later date.

Postmaster Is Citizen Group Guest Speaker

Ernest L. Swanson, postmaster at Goodridge and a member of the U.S. Postal Service speakers bureau, addressed the Thief River Falls senior citizens group before their noon meal at the hospital on July 25. He was accompanied by Dick McCloskey, superintendent of postal operations, at the Thief River Falls post office.

In his presentation Swanson brought out changes that have taken place in the operations since reorganization in 1970, the importance of the U.S. postal service to the rural areas of the country, new size standards, comparison of our mail service to other countries of the world, the importance of keeping private express status and other topics of interest to those attending.

The speakers bureau has recently been organized by the Fargo or Dakota district and the Thief River Falls sectional center. It is a public relations effort to better inform the public of the services available from the U.S. postal service. Any organization wishing to have a program along this line can contact the postmaster at Goodridge, Grygla, East Grand Forks or Oklee.

RECALLING EXPERIENCES from his medical practice in Thief River Falls for 20 years during a visit here recently is Dr. Orin Lynde. Dr. Lynde, who will be 81 next month, has made several return visits since moving to California in 1949.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

For many years Dr. Orin Lynde carried with him a newspaper clipping that he considered to be somewhat unusual. It was his obituary.

"I was in pretty damn tough shape," Dr. Lynde admitted in recalling the situation during a recent visit to Thief River Falls. "I had been lying in the hospital with a temperature of 106 or 107 and I guess the word got out that I had died. Anyway, I carried that clipping for many years and I always got a kick out of it."

Dr. Lynde, retired from medical practice for 30 years after serving for 20 years in Thief River Falls, will be 81 years old September 26. He gets around on his fourth artificial leg — a unit he has had since 1962 — and he enjoyed visiting with friends who came to call at the Carl Burrell residence during an informal open house in his honor. It has been 45 years since the obituary was published and it doesn't apply yet.

The incident that landed Dr. Lynde in the hospital and occasioned the ill-timed obituary took place in late September of 1934 about 12 miles northeast of Middle River. Dr. Lynde was a member of a hunting party in quest of sharptail grouse. A gun carried by Dr. Oscar F. Melby discharged at close range and the shot struck Dr. Lynde in the lower part of the leg. He was carried to the car, taken to Thief River Falls and transferred to Minneapolis. The leg was amputated and the doctor hovered near death for some time.

Memories of that incident were among many that Dr. Lynde holds of his experiences in early Thief River Falls medical history. He came here on Jan. 20, 1929, from Minneapolis General hospital, entering into a five-year contract with Dr. Axel W. Swedenburg on April 1 of that year.

After his injury he returned to practice but found it difficult to rent ground floor office space. A clinic building was built on the 300 block of LaBree avenue and was shared with photographer Tom Waale. Building construction was done by Pete and Hans Stensgard. In 1932 he had firmly established his residence by building a house on Markley avenue. The home is now owned by Wayne Rayppy.

Dr. Lynde's first case after his injury was obstetrical, making a home delivery of a baby for the Bob Johnsons.

"There weren't 10 per cent of the babies born in the hospital," Dr. Lynde recalls. "Those were tough times and people didn't have any money. And a doctor had to guarantee a patient's hospital bill. If the patient didn't pay, the doctor was stuck for it. During the first couple of years I was here I probably didn't collect two

French Students Find American Life Enjoyable

by Kim Blaeser
Times Reporter

"Homesick? Not at all. No, no, they want to stay longer," commented Therese Massot when asked about the visiting French students for which she serves as a chaperone. Nine students ranging in age from 14 to 18 have been the guests of Thief River Falls families since July 16. Purpose of the four-week summer homestay program of the North Atlantic Cultural Exchange League (NACEL) is to help students discover the realities of American life by becoming a part of the fundamental family unit.

Myths about American life that have been dissolved as a result of the students stay here include some extreme ideas about the liberated atmosphere of American life. Agnes Revol, guest of the Roger Kolden family, comments, "My parents were afraid that the United States was like New York, that crime was everywhere so they didn't want to let me come. But it isn't true at all. In France, we think that American people are very liberated, they smoke, they drink, etc. but in fact it is not true at all."

Agnes was equally surprised that women's lib had not had a wider influence in the United States. She expected women to be very independent but found young men still picking up the tab for evening entertainment with female friends. Chauvinism, she discovered, is alive and well in America.

The lack of proficiency in languages other than English was another of the surprises encountered by the visiting students. With up to eight years of English behind them before they have even completed high school, it was difficult for the French to believe the lack of emphasis placed on languages in American education. Most French students study at least three languages, many four or five; while Americans remain content to speak only English.

Although the French may be known for their gourmet cooking, enthusiasm was high among the visiting students for American junk food. Pizza, ice cream, popcorn, peanut butter and carmel rolls were high on the list of favorites with hot dogs and hamburgers earning points as well.

Other popular American items that will likely fill the suitcases of the students on their return flight are T-shirts, jeans, bibs and blazers. Although the foreign students voiced a preference for most French fashions over American, they succumbed to the temptation to stock up on American casual wear.

During their visit in the United States the students have enjoyed the summer sports and have had first

Campanula garden club picnic was held Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Herman Christopherson. Attending were eight members and two guests: Mrs. Hannah Blackwood of Floodwood and Mrs. Kristine Ness of Holt.

Vicker Competes In VICA Event

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

U.S. skill olympics contests are not just for the cosmetology department, but for all departments in vocational schools, according to Robin Vicker.

Vicker, 20, recently competed in the national cosmetology contest at Atlanta, Ga., from July 23 to 28.

Members of Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) can automatically go to the contests if schools are members of the VICA club. All students in the local vocational school are members, she said. Students have the option to compete in the skill olympics if they desire.

During the contest, contestants had to demonstrate the current hair styling trend (the "Retro") on a model. Both daytime and evening styles were done on the model's hairdo. Contestants had to bring their own mannequins and do perm wraps and mock hair coloring on them. General sessions and meetings were also conducted at the contest, and election of VICA officers was held.

Each event is judged separately by the judges, she said. Events are judged on a point system. Three prizes are given during the competition, with the first being a gold medal, second a silver medal, and third a bronze medal.

Vicker, who won a gold medal in state competition this year in March, was thereby eligible to compete nationally. She was the only contestant from Minnesota who went to Georgia for the contest and competed against girls from 34 states.

Those who place in the national competition are eligible for international competition, she said. These contests are usually conducted overseas.

Vicker, originally from Bagley, moved to Thief River Falls last August. She will finish her work at the cosmetology department this month.

"I hope to find a job in this area after that," she said.

Sheila Bowe, originally from Kelliher, was Robin's model for the competition.

"I learned a lot from watching other girls work," she said. "It is exciting to compete with different people from different states."

Doctor Recalls Early Days Of Practice Here

per cent of the bills. People just couldn't pay."

The Red River Valley medical society had established a minimum and maximum fee schedule which doctors were expected to follow, he said. The charge to deliver a baby at home was $25. Doctors were to charge a dollar a mile for one-way travel when they made house calls. Tonsillectomies were $25 and appendix removal was $75. Other common procedures were gall bladder and intestinal ulcer surgeries.

To earn a living in the early years Dr. Lynde went to Middle River twice a week, each Monday and Friday. Those were designated as "cream days" when the Middle River cooperative creamery accepted cream and farmers brought the cream from their dairy herds to town for sale.

"Middle River had a little money around then because of the cream sales and because people in that area cut and sold wood," he said. "I would get paid enough to keep going. I remember one time they asked me to come up and give inoculations against diphtheria. I told them I would need 50 people to make it worthwhile and they said they could get 100.

"I had to send out twice for more vaccine and I had people helping me sterilize needles. They didn't use disposable ones like they do now. When we got done that night we had given 967 inoculations."

The year before Dr. Lynde lost his leg, he nearly lost his life in another accident. He had purchased a 1934 Ford coupe from Frank Tunberg and, as was his usual practice at the time, he drove it just a little faster than he should. One night when returning from a late call near Wylie he fell asleep at the wheel, missed a sharp turn in the road and crashed the car through a barbed wire fence into a sweetclover field. He received only minor injuries.

After his hunting injury he was unable to drive, and so employed his cousin Melvin Griffin from Ellendale, N.D., to drive for him. Griffin purchased a farm at Middle River which Dr. Lynde had previously bought from Henry Nabben. That farm is in the Griffin family today and Melvin was one of many friends who visited with the doctor during his return visit here several weeks ago.

Dr. Lynde said he was motivated toward becoming a doctor by his uncle, Dr. Roy Lynde of Ellendale, who was an extremely popular physician in his community. He was so popular, in fact, that the community observance occasioned by Dr. Roy Lynde's 50 years of medical practice merited an article in the Reader's Digest magazine.

In the later years of his practice in Thief River Falls conditions improved for the doctor. Economic conditions strengthened from the deep depression years of the opening of his practice. Merle Lindberg became the business manager for the clinic and collections for medical services increased to 65 per cent in a short time. Dr. Milton Starekow and Dr. Harold Johnson practiced with Dr. Lynde and others later joined the clinic.

Medical advancements have been spectacular in recent years with the development and use of sulfa drugs, penicillin and antibiotics. But Dr. Lynde is convinced that the greatest life-saving practice was nasal suction developed by Dr. Wantenstein at the University of Minnesota. This now common and relatively simple practice alleviates conditions which previously caused untold numbers of deaths from pneumonia and other related maladies.

Dr. Lynde retired from active practice in 1949 and moved to California. He made a brief foray back into the medical field from 1952 to 1956 when he came here to relieve Dr. Youbert Johnson. He now resides at 5 Via Zaragosa, Monterey, Calif. 93940.

Dr. Lynde has been back to Thief River Falls for visits several times since his last practice here; the most recent before this year being in 1972 and 1976. The worn and yellowed obituary he carried for many years has disappeared. He suspects that his wife, who considered it to be somewhat morbid, had something to do with its disappearance.

But while that bit of paper would have been testimony to the hardy lifetime of this octogenarian, one of the visitors to his open house paid him a tribute he would more greatly appreciate.

"When you went to see Dr. Lynde," the visitor volunteered, "you got well."

experiences at a summer fair, rodeo, street rod display, parade and crazy days celebration. Frederic Smletan, exchange student who is living with the Art Tranby family, toured Arctic enterprises and Beatrice Gaydon, who has resided with the Ed Williamson family, tried her luck on the Arctic wet bike. "The American life is very active," she comments.

Big lakes, woods and mosquitos were also among the new experiences of the students during their summer stay in northwestern Minnesota. "In France," explains one student, "it is very hard to find a large lake where there are not many people. Here there are big lakes surrounded by forests where only a few people go down to the lake."

Expecting to find skyscrapers and fast-paced American night-life, the students discovered the slower, more conservative existence in northern Minnesota and embraced it with enthusiasm. "The month went too fast," comments one. And Therese Massot, chaperone for the program which attempts to bring students into contact with the reality of American life says, "I think it is very important for our students to go out of France. They think France is the center of the world and it is important for them to see the other wonderful countries."

Thief River Falls — Grand Forks

BADGE OF COURAGE, such as is worn by downtown business employee Diane Matson, should have been awarded to everyone who braved the crowds in Thief River Falls Thursday to take advantage of the crazy days bargains. Fine weather contributed to the success of the annual event and chamber reports indicate general satisfaction with the promotion.

CHECKOUT EMPLOYEE at Dwight's Hartz, Marge Ness, was on the alert Thursday so as not to be carried off by some near-sighted customer who mistook her for his bag of groceries. Ness was in costume for the crazy days observance in Thief River Falls and her original dress earned her fourth place and $15 in prize money.

Northwestern Bell hosted a noon luncheon for 12 at Charlie's Cafe Exceptionale in Minneapolis and an afternoon reception in the Minneapolis offices of the company. Bill Thelen, traffic manager, served as master of ceremonies for the program.

Life membership in the Telephone Pioneers of America was presented to Mrs. Lafrenz by Herb Orstad, president of C. P. Wainman Chapter 18 of the organization. Pat Winnick, district steward of the Communications and Workers of America (CWA) Local 7200, presented a life membership card and pin and an honorary membership in the CWA.

Mrs. Lafrenz also received a centerpiece for the gift table; a gift of money from Unit 3 of operator services, the district office and other friends; and a billfold and gold wristwatch from the company with presentation made by Rod Sanders, district manager of operator services, Minneapolis.

Mrs. Lafrenz began her employment with Northwestern Bell as an operator at Thief River Falls on Jan. 7, 1955, and worked here for 12½ years. She has been employed in the Twin Cities since February of 1970 and lives in St. Paul.

Among those attending the reception were her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. (Kathy) Nelson and their sons Kevin and Chris of Thief River Falls; another daughter, Ruth Ann Lafrenz of St. Paul; her brother, George E. Berge of St. Louis Park; Mr. and Mrs. Al Nelson of Austin and Mrs. Mabel Olson of Waterloo, IA.; and other friends and relatives from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Henderson, Sauk Centre and Dundee.

Congressman To Meet On Energy Crisis

Congressman Arlan Stangeland of Minnesota's seventh district announced recently that he will be meeting with seventh district service station operators, jobbers and dealers Monday, August 6, in Moorhead.

"We must find a cure to the current energy squeeze and the problems it has created, and it is my hope that through such a meeting we can listen to one another and attempt to find answers that will help insure an adequate fuel supply for everyone in the months ahead," Stangeland said.

Also attending the meeting will be George Pierman, congressional liaison for the regional office of the department of energy in Chicago; Al Johnson, director of the Minnesota energy department; Jerry Everett of the Northwest Petroleum association, St. Paul; and Brian Ettesvold, executive director of the Minnesota service station association in Minneapolis.

"I think it's important that we work together to formulate an energy plan that will work, and I encourage these people to attend this important meeting and express their ideas and concerns," Rep. Stangeland said.

The meeting will begin at 1 p.m. in the Moorhead city hall chambers.

Public attendance at the grand opening is invited.

Crops Remain Fair To Good Across State

Crop conditions remain fair to good but row crops are one to two weeks behind normal while small grains lag two to three weeks, according to the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service. Widespread rains improved moisture supplies in nearly all areas of the state last week.

Almost half of the state's corn crop is tasseling, compared with an 85 per cent normal for this date. A few of the early-tasseling fields are in the milk stage. Most corn is in good condition and, with sufficient moisture and moderate temperatures, pollination appears favorable. Usually, pollination and August rainfall are the most critical factors in assuring good yields; however, this year's final output will hinge heavily on development during September in terms of growing degree days and date of first killing frost.

About 71 per cent of the soybean crop is blooming and five per cent is setting pods. The average height is 22 inches. Condition of the crop is extremely variable.

Small grains are rapidly turning ripe in southern Minnesota and farmers have swathed a few oat fields. More oats and barley fields will be cut this week if weather and field conditions permit. In the northern half of the state, small grains are developing well but last week's storms caused some lodging.

Some areas of the Red river valley have reported infestations of armyworms and several thousand acres have been sprayed with insecticides. For the state, 20 per cent of the spring wheat, 40 per cent of the oats, and 35 per cent of the barley is turning ripe.

Twenty per cent of the winter wheat and 24 per cent of the rye fields have been swathed and a few have been combined. Progress is well behind normal.

An estimated 12 per cent of the sunflowers are blooming. Flax is 79 per cent blooming and 37 per cent setting bolls.

Fuel supplies were again mostly adequate to tight but farmers found it somewhat easier to obtain needed fuel.

Price Reduction Possible From Grain Strike

Extended shutdown of Duluth's grain exporting capacity by a millers strike could result in loss of some export sales and a lower average price to farmers for their 1979 wheat crop, two University of Minnesota agricultural economists report.

Jerry Fruin, extension transportation specialist, says, "If we lost about three months of shipping capacity out of Duluth, we probably will see some export sales that just can't be completed, and potential sales that are not made. We do not have the alternatives necessary to replace the entire port of Duluth for that long a time period."

Extension farm management specialist Paul Hasbargen adds, "If the shutdown lasts for several weeks, lost export markets will be hard to recover. Total exports will be a little lower and the price for the 1979 crop lower than it would have been without the strike. In the short term, the strike may mean that regardless of grain prices, farmers will have a very limited market for their crop. Many country elevators will simply be unable to take farmers' grain."

"It looks like we've got a real problem," Fruin continues. "The Mississippi River's barge system, which would have been a prime alternative for grain transport, has been booked solid for the entire shipping season."

Because the Upper Midwest is about 1,000 miles from the next nearest major export facility, truck transport is not a viable alternative, Fruin adds. Rail transport has been hampered by a shortage of hopper cars for 18 months. The Milwaukee Road's bankruptcy also cuts down on rail capacity for shipping to the Gulf of Mexico.

If country elevators are forced to pile grain on the ground, they take on an increased risk of loss, Hasbargen says. They will probably pay farmers less for their grain to cover that risk.

Roland Larson Is Certified As Executive

Roland K. Larson of Minneapolis has been designated a certified association executive (CAE) by the American society of association executives (ASAE). Larson was manager of the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce from 1960 to 1963.

Now executive director of the Outdoor Amusement Business association, Inc., he was one of 88 association executives receiving the honor in St. Louis, Mo., at the recognition luncheon of the 59th annual ASAE convention.

Larson qualified for the CAE certification by successfully passing an extensive examination covering many association management subjects and by fulfilling prescribed standards of performance and conduct, as well as meeting the requirements of at least five years experience as a staff executive, or three years experience as the chief executive of an association.

Objectives of ASAE's voluntary certification program are to raise the professional standards and improve the practice of association executives who have demonstrated a high level of competence and ethical fitness for association management.

ASAE is the voluntary membership society for nearly 8,000 executives who manage leading business, professional, educational, technical and industrial associations. This membership, in turn, represents an underlying constituency estimated at more than 24 million persons and firms belonging to national, regional, state and local associations.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

Isn't it amazing how short sighted farmers are — winter before last they took their air conditioned tractors to Washington on the same kind of "strike" that the Duluth millers are engaged in now, namely to invoke better prices.

The farmers caused millions of dollars in damage and wasted many millions of dollars in fuel. The millers aren't bothering anybody and behaving themselves. I believe farmers are America's greediest people. Listen to them scream now.

Farm Prices Decline During 30-Day Period

Index of prices received by Minnesota farmers fell one per cent during the month ending July 15, according to the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service. Declines in meat animal, poultry and egg prices offset higher crop and dairy product prices. Prices increased during the past month for wheat, corn, oats, barley, dry beans, hay, and milk. Prices declined for all other commodities.

Wheat prices reached their highest level since October of 1975 while corn prices reached a level not exceeded since September of 1976. Compared to a year ago, prices were up for all items surveyed except hay, hogs and turkeys. Largest increases occurred for milk cows, barley, wheat and dry beans.

Crops index gained three per cent to 239 during the month, 18 per cent above last years' index. The index has climbed 28 per cent since October 1978. The mid-July prices and the changes from last month are: all wheat $3.95 per bushel, up 31 cents from the revised June estimate; corn — $2.50, up 19 cents; oats — $1.35, up three cents; barley $2.33, up 12 cents; soybeans — $7.16, down two cents; flaxseed — $6.91, down 33 cents. All hay was $40.50 per ton, up 50 cents.

The meat animal index at 243 was down five per cent from last month but was seven per cent above a year ago. The index has declined 11 per cent in the last two months. All hogs at $37.10 per hundredweight were down $1.90 from a month earlier. Beef cattle averaged $60.10, down $2.90. Calves were down $3.20 to $83.20. Sheep brought $23.10, down $1.90, while lambs were down $3.40 to $63.30.

The dairy index increased 1 per cent during the month to 230, 15 per cent above the index last year. The preliminary milk price at $11.10 per hundredweight was up 9 cents from the revised June price.

The poultry and egg index at 192 was down three per cent from last month but was seven per cent above a year ago. Turkeys were 36 cents per pound, liveweight, down one cent from a month earlier. Eggs brought 45 cents per dozen for all grades in mid-July, down one cent from mid-June but five cents above a year earlier.

Jobless Rate In June Down .2 Per Cent

Minnesota's unemployment rate in June was 3.8 per cent, up .2 of one percent from May and down .1 of one per cent from June of 1978, Rolf Middleton, commissioner of the Minnesota department of economic security, announced recently.

Comparable national unemployment rate for June was 6.0 per cent. The civilian labor force in June was 2,114,900; employment was 2,034,400; the number of unemployed wax 80,500.

In May, the civilian labor force was 2,074,900; employment was 2,000,100; and unemployment was 74,900. In June a year ago, the civilian labor force was 2,058,900; employment was 1,978,400; and the number of unemployed was 80,500.

Production workers in manufacturing were paid average weekly earnings of $272.05 in June for working an average of 39.6 hours at $6.87 per hour. In June last year, production workers averaged 40.1 hours at $6.36 per hour for average weekly earnings of $255.04.

Over one hundred automobiles from the region will be on display ranging in years from the early nineteen hundreds up to and including the early sixties. Many of the applicants are traveling distances of over 600 miles just for the opportunity to show their restored machines.

The program will include music, a swap meet, old time costumes, and lots of fun for all. In addition to the old car displays, there will be old motorcycles.

One of the featured cars will be a 1933 Hupmobile owned by Bob Rose of Grand Forks. This beautiful old automobile is a national prize winner and one of the finest examples of this great make. Gates open at 10 a.m. and remain open all day until 10 p.m. Saturday, August 18 and 12:00 noon until 4 p.m. Sunday, August 19. Admission is $2 and children under 12 are free.

CROP VARIETIES were viewed by a good crowd on hand during a tour of the demonstration plots located four miles east of Thief River Falls along highway 1 Tuesday. Shown during the tour were 27 varieties of small grain, 11 varieties of sunflowers and 11 varieties of field corn. Experimental work on control of wild oats and pigeon grass in wheat was also shown at the meeting.

Asks Extension Of Deadline On Crop Loans

"Have some pity on the Minnesota farmer who's caught in a situation totally beyond his control" was the message delivered recently by Senator Rudy Boschwitz to the agriculture stabilization and control service (ASCS).

Here's the background of his plea: Right now, many farmers throughout the nation are facing a deadline of August 5 for crop price-support loan payments. By that time, they must either pay off those loans or forfeit their grain.

Ordinarily, he pointed out, selling crops to pay off the loans wouldn't be too difficult.

But, he added, because of the port strike in Duluth, many of the elevators to which farmers would ordinarily be taking grain are closed to new purchases these days.

"Because of this unusual set of circumstances," Boschwitz requested of the ASCS, the agency which handles loan transactions, "I believe an extension of the August 5 deadline is in order."

MCDONALD'S EMPLOYEES, Tracy Nelson (left) and Lori Bjorgaard, both earned fifth places in the costume contest held Thursday in conjunction with the Thief River Falls crazy days observance. Costumed as a tomato and potato, Nelson and Bjorgaard each received $5 in prize money.

Matson Attends Bank Institute

Jim Matson of First Northwestern state bank in Thief River Falls was among the 189 bankers from Minnesota, Montana, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota who attended the 13th session of the midwest banking institute held July 22 to 27 at the University of Minnesota in Morris.

The institute is sponsored by the state bankers associations of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Wisconsin and Montana to assist bankers in rural areas by providing information necessary to build a more stable community.

The curriculum for the first-year students included farm credit and farm enterprise analysis. Second-year students studied subjects which assessed management ability; financial counseling, including the estate planning and farm business arrangements; financing community business and issues of the rural community. Faculty members and seminar leaders for the institute included nationally prominent bankers and agricultural specialists.

Raiders Dynasty Ends

An era of sorts came to an end Wednesday in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association when the TRF Merchants defeated the Rusty Nail Raiders 8-6 in a regular season-ending Division I title game.

The two rivals carried matching 17-6 records into the game. The Raiders jumped out to a 4-1 lead, but saw a 4-3 edge disappear in a five-run TRF Merchants fifth inning.

A five-year Rusty Nail Raiders championship reign ended with that loss. Ever since the Raiders were first formed in 1974 they've finished as regular season division champions in Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball.

The Raiders' dynasty, which included a pair of 32-game regular season winning streaks, began with a 21-0 season in 1974 which included a North Half pennant in a two-division, 15-team league.

In 1975 the Raiders were 16-5 and Major Division champions in a two-division, 16-team league, followed by a 16-5 season and a Major Division title in a 1976 three-division, 17-team league; a 22-0 record and a Major Division crown in a 1977 three-division, 24-team league; and a 17-2 performance and a Division I trophy in a 1978 four-division, 28-team league.

Rusty Nail made headlines by winning 32 straight league games from the 1974 to the 1975 season, a feat matched during a three-year period that covered parts or all of the 1976-77-78 seasons.

This year's ever-growing league line-up featured 32 teams and four divisions.

Miscellaneous

+Robert Norman, a 1979 Warren high school graduate, will attend Inver Hills community college this year, playing on the Inver Grove Heights-based school's basketball team. Norman had been a top recruit prospect of Northland community college basketball coach Chet Engleman.

He received his training as a teacher with Dennis Van der Meer, considered one of the top teachers in the world. Brian is employed by Washington Tennis Services, a Washington, D.C. based company which staffs tennis professionals nation-wide.

+Thief River Falls will host the 1979 District 7 Class B men's fast pitch softball tournament August 11-12. Teams from Thief River Falls, Bemidji, Detroit Lakes and Frazee will compete in the tournament. However, current Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league leader Coca-Cola, which combines with Action Realty for weekend tournament play, will be competing in the District 7 Class A tournament those same days in Duluth.

Coca-Cola Has Three Hitters In Top Ten

Three members of the first place Coca-Cola ball club are included in the latest listing of top ten hitters in the Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league.

The statistics, compiled by league publicist Richard Bjerken, are headed by Roger Cota of Coca-Cola who owns an impressive .500 batting average with 17 hits in 34 at-bats.

Tom Goddard at .452 and Paul Walker at .323 also represent Coca-Cola in the top ten listing.

DU Banquet Is Set For TRF On August 28

Fourth annual meeting of the Northwest chapter of Ducks Unlimited will be held Tuesday, August 28, at the National Guard armory in Thief River Falls. The armory site has been selected to permit more members to join the organization and attend the annual event.

"In previous years we have had to limit the participation because of lack of space in local restaurant facilities," stated Stan Upham, who heads the arrangements for the annual event. "This year Lon's Restaurant will cater the meal at the armory and we will be able to accept memberships from a much larger group."

Despite the limited attendance, the Northwest chapter of Ducks Unlimited has made increasingly large contributions to the parent organization each year. In 1976 when the first dinner was held, $6,200 was raised by the local chapter. This amount increased to $8,500 in 1977 and $13,500 in 1978.

"We are reluctant to set a goal this year," Upham said, "but with the arrangements for greatly increased participation this year it should be possible for us to collect in the vicinity of $20,000 for Ducks Unlimited." The national organization invests funds from annual dinners such as the one here in the leasing and improvement of waterfowl production areas in Canada — the source of most of the ducks and geese hunted in the United States.

Tickets are being sold for $25 each and cover the dinner and DU membership which includes a subscription to the Ducks Unlimited magazine. There will be a auction held of guns and other donated outdoor items and limited edition wildlife prints. Also to be auctioned this year will be an original oil painting by Al Swenson.

Tickets are available from Sjoberg's Appliance, TG Sporting Goods or Haugen's Gunsmithing. Persons who have questions may contact Stan Sjoberg at 681-3044.

Job banks, an importatnt tool of the federal-state employment service system, or Job Service, offer computerized daily printouts of all available jobs listed by employers in a labor market area.

Making bids to improve their positioning in the Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league standings, Radio Shack shut out Action Realty 8-0 Wednesday and Melvies out-scored Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 9-8 Thursday.

Radio Shack 8
Action Realty 0

Jeff Hendrickson made his 1979 pitching debut for Radio Shack Wednesday tossing a three-hitter in an 8-0 shutout of Action Realty.

Radio Shack scored the only run Hendrickson needed in the top of the first inning when Bob Lundbohm singled, moving to third on Tim Engelstad's sacrifice bunt. Walks issued to Mitch Dicken and Hendrickson loaded the bases and Don Forney laced an RBI single to center.

Two more Radio Shack runners crossed the plate in the second inning. Don Balmer walked and advanced on a passed ball to start things. Tim Erickson singled and when Erickson stole second, Balmer scored on the throw to the bag. Erickson scored on Engelstad's single to center field for a 3-0 game.

Single runs in the third and sixth inning, along with a three-run fifth, made it 8-0.

Melvies 9
Dallmann 8

Melvies beat Dallmann Athletic, Inc. for the second time this summer, 9-8 Thursday in the league's highest scoring game of the year.

Scoring started in the top of the first inning when Melvies' Doug Martell led off with a walk and scored on Darwin Nelson's double to right-center field. Rick Kofstad reached base on a fielder's choice, with Nelson being tagged out between second and third. Kofstad stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on Jay Kverno's single to center.

Dallmann Athletic, Inc. tied in the second inning on walks issued to Terry Sullivan and Bruce Johnson, a wild pitch, an error and a passed ball.

Melvies went ahead 3-2 in the third on Kverno's run-scoring double; only to have Dallmann Athletic, Inc. score on the equalizer in the bottom of the inning on a hit batter, a passed ball, a fly out and an error, giving Dallmann Athletic, Inc. its third run without the benefit of a base hit.

Once again Melvies went up by a run with a tally in the top of the fifth on Kverno's RBI single. But Dallmann Athletic, Inc. went ahead 6-3 when two base hits and an error produced three runs in the bottom of the inning.

Not to be outdone, Melvies came up with four base hits and used a Dallmann Athletic, Inc. error to score three times in the top of the sixth to go back in front 7-6.

The game finally ended when the teams traded two seventh inning runs.

Red Lake WMA Plan Proposed By State DNR

A public meeting has been scheduled on a proposed 10-year management plan for the Red Lake wildlife management area (WMA). The meeting will be held Fri., Aug. 24, at 7:30 p.m. in the Lake of the Woods county courthouse at Baudette.

Copies of the proposed plan are available for public review at the DNR section of wildlife in St. Paul, Red Lake WMA headquarters, (20 miles south of Roosevelt), DNR regional office at Bemidji, DNR forestry offices at Waskish, Grygla, Williams, Clear River and Baudette, and at the Baudette city library.

Since only a limited number of copies are available, interested persons are requested to review the plan at one of the above offices or check out and return a copy.

Oral and written comments on the plan will be taken at the public meeting. Written comments may also be submitted now and until 15 days after the public meeting. They may be sent to the Wildlife Planning Team, DNR, Box 7 Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155.

State DNR To Benefit From Nongame Bill

U.S. House of Representatives passed a federal nongame fish and wildlife bill on July 9, according to the Wildlife Management Institute.

The bill, authored by Congressman Edwin Forsyth of New Jersey, calls for a three-year federal aid program to help state natural resource agencies develop comprehensive plans for managing nongame fish and wildlife species. It authorizes expenditures of $3 million in 1980, $8 million in 1981 and $8 million in 1982.

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources could receive up to $950,000 during the three-year period for its nongame wildlife program according to Chuck Burrows, DNR director of fish and wildlife. To be eligible for the federal funds, Minnesota would have to appropriate 25 per cent in matching funds.

A similar nongame bill is expected to be introduced in the U.S. Senate soon.

Federal funds would be used by the Minnesota DNR to benefit loons, herons, eagles, sandhill cranes, small mammals, songbirds and other nongame species.

Comment Time Extended For FWS Proposal

Acting upon requests from the public, the Departments of the Interior and Commerce have extended the comment period an extra 30 days on proposed regulations that would establish uniform procedures for federal agency compliance with the fish and wildlife coordination act. The comment period will now expire on August 17, 90 days after the two federal agencies published the joint proposals in the May 18, 1979, Federal Register.

Public hearings have been held in San Francisco, California; Denver, Colorado; New Orleans, Louisiana; Arlington, Texas; Twin Cities, Minnesota; and Washington, D.C.

The proposed regulations require all federal agencies to give conservation of fish and wildlife equal weight with economic and other benefits associated with projects such as the discharge of industrial wastes, hydroelectric power generation and flood control.

Under the proposal, federal agencies would have to consult with state and federal wildlife agencies on potential impacts on fish and wildlife at several points during project planning and development. The procedures are intended to minmize potential project delays and last minute modifications through early consultation.

Federal wildlife agencies that must be consulted are Interior's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Commerce's National Marine Fisheries Service of the national oceanic and atmospheric administration.

Notice of the extension was published in the July 18, 1979, Federal Register. Written comments and requests for information should be addressed to the Director (AE), U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Washington, D.C. 20240 202-343-4767.

COUNTY BOARD PROCEEDINGS

August 6, 1979
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minn.
July 24, 1979

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 9:00 A.M., July 24, 1979.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa/ All present.

Engineer Olson presented his plan for completion of the approaches to the Golf Club Bridge as promised at the May 9, 1978 Board meeting. Because of the extreme changes in the grade and realignment which called for large quantities of fill it was necessary to have the road used and allow it to settle. It was first thought that a Contract would be let for the entire job but costs have risen to where it seems desirable to have the County forces haul the base fill necessary and then hire a Contractor to lay bituminous cover. It was explained again that the realignment and change of grade calls for extending the length of the approaches on each end of the bridge. The south end would join the old road and on the North the bituminous cover would run a distance of 662 feet. The Board approved the plan to be completed used the maintenance program for the highways.

At 10:00 A.M., the Board was approached by a delegation from the area near the Golf Club Bridge asking for the completion of the project discussed in 1978. They were informed of the discussion and agreement just completed and expressed satisfaction.

Larry Bryl, owner of land in Goodridge Township asked for assistance in a drainage problem in the area East of Goodridge. A branch of Judicial Ditch 13 on the West side of Section 14 in Goodridge Twp. has not been cleaned while it has been cleaned South of that point. A bridge is out in the area as well. Engineer is to investigate.

Roy Waters, Director of Northwestern Mental Health Center in Crookston was present to discuss the Contract with the County and the effect of the new Law providing for block grants to Counties under the Community Social Services Act. The center anticipates a need for revision of the Contract and indicated that the County must make the determination of what services they wish to contract for as of December 31, 1979. This determination should be made soon to allow proper planning to be done.

The Board was asked to participate with the Chamber of Commerce and others in the Jaycee Aquacade. Moved by Stenberg seconded by Grabanski that the sum of $100.00 be appropriated and paid to the Jaycees to assist in their promotion activities in the Aquacade. Motion declared unanimously carried.

Moved by Koop seconded by Tasa that Commissioner Stenberg be designated as the Implementation Officer or contact person for the period required for implementing the Community Social Services Act. Motion carried.

Moved by Tasa seconded by Koop that Plat known as Gage's First Subdivision and Plat known as T.R.F. Dev-Co First Addition be approved as presented. Gage's First Subdivision consists of 1.90 acres in Section 3, T153N, R43W (Rocksbury) adjacent to Kleinvachter Subdivision while the T.R.F. Dev-Co First Addition consists of 4.3 acres in Govt. Lot 7 in Sec. 34, T154N, R43W (North Twp.) also known as vacated Lots East half of 36 and all of Lots 37 thru 41 in Rustad's Subdivision. Motion declared carried.

The Board then discussed the Block Grants as provided in the Community Social Services Act, the information available on the proposed Parking District in the City of Thief River Falls which includes the Courthouse and the Law Enforcement Center and the Re-windowing project that involves repairs to the Courthouse to make the building more energy efficient. Matter laid over to the next meeting.

Moved by Koop seconded by Stenberg that meeting adjourn to convene at 9:00 A.M. August 7, 1979. Motion carried.

THEN NOW
1979 marks the 75th ANNIVERSARY of the TEABAG

The teabag was accidently invented in 1904 when a tea merchant sent out samples in little silk bags.

Orders came back for tea packed in the bags. His customers had discovered the ease and convenience of brewing tea from bagged tea.

Today teabags are made from a special filter paper that keeps the leaves in and lets the flavor out. Over 50% of the tea we consume is made with teabags.

She looks like a seaworthy little craft and soon Tim and his father will put her to the test. They will discover whether she is properly balanced, whether her sails are straight, whether she will take to the water proudly, or flounder and capsize.

A boat has to be right, and she has to be ready. So do we, as individuals. We need good guidelines, a right sense of direction, and the church of our choice can help us toward finding both.

The Church, remember, has been "ready" for a long, long time.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

During the past several decades one of our most admirable national goals has been to provide health care for every person in the country. We've encouraged the education of more health care professionals, we've developed new and remarkable technology and we've expanded health insurance coverage through both private insurers and government.

Ironically, our best intentions may be defeating our goal. While our society has worked to bring health care to every citizen, we have involved government at almost every step and removed most of the cost control checks. The result has been that many people are priced out of health care. To cite but one example of the frightening spiral of health cost increases, in the last generation — 25 years — the price of a hospital room has jumped almost 800 per cent.

Health care is a unique product. When you think about purchasing any other product or service, you first decide whether or not the purchase is necessary. If you decide the product or service is needed, you shop around to find the best quality at the best price.

That process changes when you buy medical care. When you're sick you go to a doctor and do what he or she says. Few of us go "doctor shopping," checking on prices or comparing services. We don't choose hospitals, the doctor does. "We don't choose special medical procedures, the doctor does.

There are few reasons for us to make comparisons. After all, in most cases the patient doesn't pay for the doctor's services. Either a private insurance company or the government picks up the tab.

Do we even make choices when we buy our health insurance? For most of us, the answer is no. We take what our employers or the government offers. Few of us take the time to shop around, looking for a better deal.

The result of this is an almost completely uncontrolled system in which neither the buyer nor the seller has much incentive to hold down costs.

Is there a solution, or do we resign ourselves to everrising health care costs? I believe there is an answer. In fact, the answer I propose has been working effectively in Minnesota to keep cost increases below the national average.

Recently, I introduced a bill, the Health Incentives Reform Act, that uses Minnesota's success as a national model of affordable and accessible health care. The bill will reward the medical profession for providing better care at lower cost and will reward you — the consumer — for choosing economical health care.

Quite frankly, my bill is simple. It doesn't add layers of bureaucracy to an already cumbersome system, nor does it require more government spending. It starts with standardizing health benefit plans so anyone can understand them and everyone can compare them.

My bill uses the possible loss of tax deductions to encourage all employers to offer health insurance plans that include minimum benefits. Larger employers will offer their employees a choice of plans so that people can choose only the coverage they need. Medicare beneficiaries will be able to make the same choices. In other words, we — the consumers of health care — would no longer pay for benefits we didn't need.

Once we have a system in which people are making choices, we've created competition. The health profession isn't guaranteed your dollar. It will have to offer more for less.

Based on our success in Minnesota, I'm confident that my bill will hold down costs and improve health care for everyone.

Energy Business Is Everyone's Business

If we are to turn dreams into reality, there must be economic expansion. According to the experts at Edison Electric Institute, there must be more energy for that expansion.

Jobs depend on adequate electricity.

People's health and welfare, their jobs — everything they do or hope to do — depend on an adequate supply of electricity.

The Institute, an association of electric companies, believes energy is inextricably tied to economic growth. Because all business requires energy, it rises in relation to the Gross National Product. And what's needed to keep the GNP growing — 19 million new jobs — will be needed in the next ten years.

What is delaying construction of nuclear power plants? Mostly governmental indecision and uncertainties in the licensing process.

Governmental indecision is believed to be a cause of delay.

It takes ten to twelve years to build a nuclear plant in the U.S. — twice that of Japan, but Congress and the states can establish a mechanism to eliminate duplicative hearing procedures, for resolving conflicts between agencies, and for establishing reasonable time limits for licensing new plants.

That way, experts say, the energy business can help keep a lot more people in business.

SOCIAL SECURITY REFORM
RETIREMENT NEWS

As the percentage of the population over 65 increases, each person's chances of adequate retirement income could decrease without Social Security reform.

Once regarded as the country of the young, the United States as a nation of people is rapidly aging: while the total population has nearly tripled since 1900, there are now seven times as many people over age 65 as there were then.

Most economists estimate that for people to retire in the style to which they have become accustomed, they would need an income equal to 60 to 70 percent of their earnings immediately preceding retirement, with occasional adjustments for inflation.

For many, the recent improvements in Social Security will not be enough. Most older Americans have, on average, half the income they had just before they stopped working.

One seventh of the over-65 population now lives below the poverty level, and most of these people did not become poor until they retired.

Many experts say our Social Security system requires reform. According to government studies, parts of the Social Security system may be hundreds of billions of dollars in debt over the next several years.

Some elected official may be misguidedly delaying needed reform of the system. A proposal coming out of Congress calls for a merger between the Social Security system and the independent retirement fund of federal Civil Service workers.

This, points out the National Association of Retired Federal Employees, will not only hurt a suffering Social Security system now, but will cripple it later when today's 2.7 million federal workers retire.

Inflation price you out of a new building? Take a look at Stran.

And reconsider.

As your Authorized Stran Builder, we're very much aware of how inflation has affected the cost of building new facilities.

Costs have risen dramatically for both materials and construction labor. That's why it makes good building sense to take a look at Stran's building systems approach... Why?

- Most of the building is fabricated in a modern manufacturing plant to take advantage of automation and more productive man-hour utilization.
- The system is designed and produced to go together fast at your job site. Saving valuable man-hours in on-site construction costs.

So before calling off your plans for a new building, call us and let's see how we can help you deflate inflation. We may have you breaking ground after all.

Wilderness Adventure

To hear editor Bob Cary of the Ely Echo tell it, there is more nonsense in the rules and regulations involving the Boundary Waters Canoe area and its fringes than in a third grade class when the teacher leaves the room.

On Lac La Croix, for instance, no motors are permitted to be used on the United States side for fear of disturbing the wilderness, but motors are used extensively on the Canadian side of the imaginary line down the center of the lake.

U.S. rangers cruise the Canadian side in motorized boats, ready to apprehend people using motors on the U.S. side. According to reports, the rangers do not clear customs when bouncing back and forth across the border. Not only that, it is said, but radio equipment given by the U.S. to Canadian officials so they can report motorboat violators is also said to have not cleared customs.

"From the U.S. rangers came the comment that they never thought they had to check through Canadian customs," Cary writes. "And that is a strange comment from federal government officials who are, after all, closer to other branches of federal operation than any ordinary citizen. . .or perhaps there is some sort of a belief among federal officials that the laws apply only to the peasantry."

Wilderness area? Here are some more of Cary's comments:

As long as we get into all these minute interpretations of what is or is not wilderness, someone is sure to bring up the traffic sign posts erected on the U.S. portages to assure wilderness travelers which lake is on the other side of the trail and how far it is. This is no spoof. The signs are really out there.

And then there are the iron gates erected by the first service to keep the wilderness people from building fires in the wrong place and burning the woods down and the wooden toilets put up in an attempt to maintain some measure of sanitation among campers not potty trained in the out-of-doors. And there are the forest service crews which go out each fall with white latex paint to put the bark back on the birch trees that some canoeists have taken home for momentos of their wilderness experience.

Of course, the forest service now has trail maintenance crews out paddling all over the BWCA to pick up garbage, because motor canoes are a no-no any more. And trail crews must go out after each storm and clean dead falls by hand saw because some of the environmental people can't stand the sound of motor powered chain saws.

There is some question whether such trail maintenance, butler and maid service has any place at all in a true wilderness. . .but the Forest Service is also well aware that few environmentalists will make any effort to maintain the trails other than to complain if fallen trees are not removed and the trash regularly picked up.

And something else nobody thought of when they got the no-motor law and the forest service all tangled up in it: On such places as the Kawishiwi river, the USFS rangers have to use paddle canoes to chase the motorboats, which has gotten to be a wonderful exercise in futility.

That all of this Mickey Mouse activity takes a lot of time and taxpayer's money is of no consequence in maintaining the purity of the wilderness. . .or whatever it is we are currently into.

Education Changing

Following editorial is from the Austin Herald:

Back in 1965, there was no shortage of jobs in teaching. . .

We all know what happened within a few years. The baby boom went bust, expensively constructed but now surplus plants had to be closed and the bloom has gone off teaching as a promising profession. Enrollment of would-be teachers had dwindled by some two-thirds.

The current situation is not all bad, however. Contrary to the popular impression of a teacher glut and a job shortage, a recent report in the Council for Basic Education's "Bulletin" notes that the supply-and-demand situation is actually spotty. Many openings are going unfilled in certain specialized fields. This is particularly the case in mathematics and science. Vocational courses, special education and bilingual education are also reported to offer opportunities.

While a new teacher shortage is discounted, an upturn in teaching opportunities is foreseen with a major contributor being the increasing popularity of the "lifelong learning" concept. Demand for continuing adult education in vocational and leisure fields as well as in traditional academic subjects promises to open up a wide-range of new teaching jobs. These will, however, call upon more than the usual basic education skills.

For the professional educator, keeping up with the rapid changes in education is something of an education itself.

Should Stay Airborne

Following comments were written by John Lofton Jr. in the publication "Battle Line":

Sen. James Sasser's heart is in the right place — no doubt about it. But the Tennessee Democrat is a freshman senator, and he just hasn't caught on yet. He just hasn't realized that what he thinks is a problem is not really a problem, and the solution to the problem he thinks he sees is to encourage the very thing he's seeking to discourage.

Sasser is upset because, while chairing an appropriations subcommittee hearing, he learned that the federal government spent $6.7 billion — that's billion — for travel and for the transportation of persons and things in fiscal 1978. The office of management and budget estimates that this cost will rise to $7.9 billion in fiscal 1980.

The Congressional budget office says that, using the standard cost of $380 per trip, this means that in fiscal 1980 federal bureaucrats will take about eight million taxpayer-financed trips. This figures out to about 22,000 federally financed trips every day, 365 days a year, including weekends, Christmas and New Year's day. On any given day there are probably more than 20,000 federal employees in the air going somewhere — and this does not include non-government workers who are traveling on federal grants and contracts.

Put another way, the number of federal bureaucrats in the air at any one time exceeds the entire seating capacity of all 130 Lockheed L-1011 wide-body jet aircraft in commercial airline service in the entire United States on one day.

So, to at least start to get a handle on the soaring costs of these trips, to save energy and to hold down the size of the federal budget, Sasser has introduced S. 697. This bill would reduce by $500 million the amount obligated for executive branch travel in fiscal 1980. Defending his proposal, the Senator says he sees "no compelling reason" for not putting a ceiling on aggregate federal government travel.

But there is a compelling reason. Because, you see, the danger posed to the Republic is not from federal employees who are in the air traveling, but from federal employees on the ground, in their offices, doing their work. The real danger to the Ameriacan taxpayer is not from a GS-16 guideline writer at HEW who is airborne somewhere over Kansas. The danger is when that GS-16 is in his office beavering away. From a cost-effective standpoint, the most harmless bureaucrat imaginable is one who is away from Washington.

Think about it. Who thought up the President's original energy program? Was it a bunch of federal employees on a junket to the Far East? No, siree. It was federal employees at their desks, in Washington, writing memos and dreaming up new red-tape to entangle the energy industry.

How about President Carter's $227 billion social security tax? This abomination will severely reduce consumer purchasing power, add a half-point to the inflation rate and increase unemployment. Who passed this monstrosity? Was it members of Congress on a fact-finding mission to Borneo or on a journey to Rome or Paris? Nope. This tax was enacted by congressmen on the ground, on the floor of Congress.

Who increased the money supply which has caused the inflation that is plaguing us? Was it members of the federal reserve board riding around in planes? No way. This was done by people who were flying nowhere.

Like I said, Sasser's heart is in the right place, but his head hasn't really grasped the problem. He should be working on legislation that would somehow, and in some way, result in the entire federal government being in the air all the time, with no possibility of communicating with those of us on the ground.

Sasser should re-think his legislation. In fact, he should take a trip right now — anywhere, and the longer he's gone the better. He's just one senator. But it would at least be a start.

Interesting Opinions:

"I've met a few people in my time who were enthusiastic about hard work. It was just my luck that all of them happened to be men I was working for at the time."

—Bill Gold

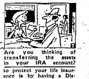
QUERY: Questions and Answers about managing your money

Question: I'm not happy with the investment results of my Individual Retirement Account (IRA). Would transferring the assets to another IRA entail tax consequences or premature distribution penalties?

Answer: There would be neither penalties nor tax consequences—providing you roll over into another IRA no later than 60 days after receiving distribution from your initial IRA.

Question: I purchased life insurance to provide an estate for my family if I die—or for myself if I live. What would happen if I were unable to pay my life insurance premiums because of a disability?

Answer: The easiest way to protect your life insurance is by having a Disability Waiver of Premium Provision in the policy, says the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters, the national association of life insurance professionals. To be sure your insurance keeps up with your needs, it is a good idea to have it reviewed periodically.



Are you thinking of transferring the assets in your IRA account?

The Burden of Government Regulation

Almost everything we do, whether we realize it or not, is regulated by the Federal government, in some capacity, and, more often than not, this unnecessary interference acts as a stumbling block in the road of much needed progress.

Many of our nation's communities are now years behind in implementing new water and sewage projects because of the Environmental Protection Agency's inefficient handling of procedures and regulations. One example in the Seventh District that comes to mind is the City of Bemidji's unsuccessful battle against bureaucratic redtape in order to construct a new sewage treatment plant. Their efforts began in 1969.

The purpose of the EPA is to maintain an unpolluted environment, but because of the complexity and additional costs incurred by municipalities receiving Federal grants under the Construction Grants Program, sponsored by the EPA, grantees are becoming frustrated with Federal assistance and are doubting Federal efficiency.

As government regulations increase, so also does the quantity of paperwork, duplication, and delays, and ultimately the time wasted in approving projects that are so desperately needed. Hundreds of project grants in the State of Minnesota and around the nation are currently in limbo as government bureaucrats review and verify their specifications against new check lists. Quite often, after years of struggling to meet EPA requirements communities are forced to begin all over because new and sometimes contradictory regulations have been instituted while communities are trying diligently to meet previous requirements. This inadequate process does nothing but punish the people who need government's assistance the most by increasing the cost of the project and forcing them to go without needed service. EPA's inability and apparent unwillingness to help municipalities meet requirements demonstrates this agency's lack of regard for the overall well-being of the people it is intended to protect.

The Environmental Protection Agency and its maze of rules and regulations is only one example of how government's attempts to help become frustrating and costly experiences for municipalities, business and the taxpayer. This year alone the Federal budget to operate 41 regulatory agencies is projected at $4.8 billion, an increase of 115 per cent in five years. Business estimates that the costs to comply with existing regulations will cost big business and the small businessman alike approximately $134.8 billion, with the costs ultimately being passed on to the consumer. In fact, the cost of goernment regulation each year totals about $2,000 for a family of four, or $500 per person.

In the State of Minnesota there are 84,781 businesses in operation, and 75 per cent employ less than 10 people. But in 1977, these businesses spent over 143 million man-hours at a cost of billions to fill out over 4,400 Federal forms.

The problem of government regulation lies in the fact that Congress passes 600 laws each year, and the Federal bureaucracy adopts some 9,000 regulations to enact these laws. Unfortunately, the regulations do not always reflect the intent of the law passed by Congress, thus perpetuating government's inefficiency.

In order to reduce government inefficiency and reduce government interference in our daily lives I am supporting legislation that requires agencies to prove their effectiveness, and legislation that provides for a one House veto of any agency rule of regulation if it contains provisions contrary to law, is inconsistent with Congressional intent, or goes beyond the mandate of legislation.

I think Thomas Jefferson summed it up best when he said "The government that governs least governs best." I hope we will see a return to that philosophy in the near future.

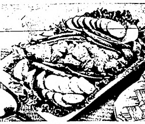
Salmon Platter Salad Is Great Summertime Fare



Salmon Platter Salad is especially appealing for a warm summer evening. Colorful chunks of chilled canned salmon are surrounded by marinated green beans, juicy ripe tomatoes, crisp cucumber and hard-cooked eggs. The marinade is reserved and blended with dairy sour cream and dill weed for a creamy, cool dressing. Garnish with lemon wedges and serve with crusty French bread for a great no-cook meal.

Convenient canned salmon is the perfect ingredient for planned or spur-of-the-moment salads. The delicate flavor of this choice seafood combines well with a variety of fruits and vegetables. Toss it with crisp greens or add it to macaroni, potato or rice salad to make a nourishing entree.

Canned salmon is ready to use right from the can and is conveniently sized for serving just one or several.

Salmon Platter Salad

- 1 can (15-1/2 oz.) salmon
- 1 can (16 oz.) whole green beans
- 1/4 cup bottled Italian dressing
- Salad greens
- 2 tomatoes, cut in wedges
- 2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
- Cucumber slices
- Lemon wedges
- 1/2 cup dairy sour cream
- 1/2 teaspoon dried dill weed (optional)
- Salt
- Freshly ground pepper

Chill salmon. Drain beans and place in shallow glass dish. Pour dressing over beans; marinate at least 1 hour. Drain, reserving marinade. Drain salmon and break into large chunks with fork. Place salmon and beans on platter lined with greens. Garnish with tomato wedges, egg slices, cucumber slices and lemon wedges. Combine reserved marinade with sour cream; blend in dill weed, if desired. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pass with salad. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Early Morning Is Dangerous Time To Drive

Motorists on Minnesota roads and highways during the early morning hours on weekends run the greatest risk of being killed in traffic accidents, according to the Minnesota department of public safety.

The figures appeared in "Motor Vehicle Crash Facts" for 1978, a publication put out annually by the department's office of traffic safety. "Crash Facts," a statistical analysis of traffic accidents last year, for 1978 was released this week.

Of the 846 crashes in 1978, 180 (approximately 21 per cent) occurred between midnight and 3 a.m. The peak hour for fatalities was between 1 and 2 a.m., the study shows.

Of the 846 fatal crashes in 1978, 84 — or approximately 10 per cent — occurred during that one hour. Fifty-nine of the fatal accidents took place between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m., Saturday or Sunday.

"There is little doubt of the definite connection between the use of alcohol and these early morning fatal crashes," said public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic.

Of the 121 drivers killed between midnight and 3 a.m., 90 were tested for blood alcohol concentration. Of these 90, 86, or more than 95 per cent, were found to have been drinking, Sopsic said.

Although the number of fatal accidents is greatest during these early morning hours, the peak for all different types of accidents occurs during the rush hour.

Of the 118,833 accidents reported in Minnesota during 1978, some 21 per cent occurred between the hours of 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. The peak hour for all types of accidents was from 4 p.m. to 5 p.m., the height of the rush hour.

The peak hour and day for fatal accidents in 1978 was between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. Sunday mornings.

The greatest number of all type of accidents took place between 4 p.m. and 5 p.m. Fridays.

Commissioner Sopsic urged all Minnesota motorists "to exercise particular caution during early morning hours and during rush hour."

Mango Cake: Lush As The Tropics

Among the earth's many delights, none may exceed the delicious mango.

When choosing the mangos for this recipe, don't judge ripeness by the outside. According to experts at Calavo Growers of California, the fruit is ready to eat when it yields to pressure — regardless of its color.

PARADISE MANGO CAKE

- 3-1/2 cups flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1-1/2 teaspoon soda
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 2 cups sugar
- 1/4 cup oil
- 4 eggs
- 3 cups Calavo mango, mashed (approximaely 3-4 mangos)
- 2 teaspoons grated orange rind
- 1/2 cup shelled walnuts, chopped

Sift dry ingredients together into a large bowl. Add remaining ingredients, and mix thoroughly. Pour into a greased and floured 10-inch bundt pan. Bake at 350° for 50-60 minutes, or until toothpick comes out clean.

Two Killed In Head-On Crash Near Grygla

Two eastern Marshall county young people were killed about 8:20 a.m. Saturday when the car in which they were traveling collided head-on with a milk truck about a mile north of Grygla.

Jeffrey Stanley, 21, of Grygla was driving south on county road 54 when his car collided with the milk truck driven north on the same road by Gerald Langness, 28, also of Grygla. Stanley and his fiancee, Doreen Ruud, 17, Gatzke, were killed in the crash. Langness was treated and released from Northwestern hospital services in Thief River Falls.

The mishap is under investigation by the Marshall county sheriff's department. Obituaries of the accident victims are published in today's Times.

Airline Deregulation Is Council Topic Again

Airline deregulation and the civil aeronautics board's (CAB) rules and regulations for determintion of essential air service to cities presently served by only one air carrier were among the topics of discussion at a regular meeting of the Thief River Falls city council held Tuesday, August 14.

City attorney Bob Wurst, who also serves as president of the state-wide local air service action committee (LASAC), reported on his August 1 appearance before the house of representatives subcommittee on aviation in Washington, D.C., to testify on behalf of Minnesota communities.

In a written statement to the aviation subcommittee which was holding hearings to review the deregulation act and CAB's interpretation of the act, Wurst stated, "We think the CAB has grossly misinterpreted the direction given to it by the congress as it proposes to apply the airline deregulation act to small cities."

Specific areas of concern Wurst mentioned on behalf of LASAC members, including Thief River Falls, was CAB's use of the nearest hub in making essential air service determinations, the level of service proposed to be available during an appeal of a determination, the arbitrary limit set by CAB regarding the maximum number of seats to be made available in essential service determinations, and the possible assignment of inadequate aircraft in regards to safety and passenger and cargo capacity.

Also testifying at the subcommittee hearings on behalf of Minnesota cities was Lawrence McCabe, assistant commissioner of transportation, aeronautics division. In his written statement McCabe commented, "Communities are entitled to 'air transportation of at least the same extent, character and quality as that provided during the year ending December 31, 1977" (until January 1, 1986 according to section 406 of the deregulation act) and "The major point I wish to make today is that the civil aeronautics board is not following the airline deregulation act of 1978."

In addition to testifying before the house subcommittee, Thief River Falls officials have also been in recent contact with Congressman Arlan Stangeland and Wurst commented Tuesday, "I'm satisfied that we have done just about everything that can be done to assure that the level of air service that is determined for Thief River Falls

School Needs Are Reviewed

Review of school district building needs was continued by the Thief River Falls board of education at its meeting Monday evening at the school district service center. Information on programming was presented by principals of high school, middle school and elementary schools and a representative of the architectural firm employed by the district was also present.

Modification of earlier alternatives presented to the board by the architect was discussed in relation to program suggestions presented by the administrators. The board decided to seek additional public input through establishment of a community committee to review the alternatives and make comments and suggestions. More widespread district discussion will be forthcoming as the board continues consideration of needs.

In action at the regular business meeting the board voted to enter into a 30-month lease with Bell Telephone company for a phone system for the AVTI. A pre-payment of $10,047 was authorized to reduce overall cost and is included in the AVTI budget.

Resignations were accepted from Mildred Hauge, second grade teacher at St. Hilaire elementary school; Mavis J. Miller, management aide at Franklin middle school; and Sadie Olson, cook and part-time baker.

Hired were Mary Ann Almquist, half-time home economics instructor at Franklin middle school; Rita Strand, home economics instructor at Lincoln high school; and Galen Clow, guidance counselor at Lincoln high school while regular counselor is on leave of absence.

Summer school report received by the board from William Desrocher showed there were 228 students enrolled in grades 1-6 and 195 in grades 7-12 with the totals computed to 50.3 pupil units. Last year there were 83.44 pupil units attending. Program for summer school this year was reduced to mostly make-up or remedial courses and transportation was not provided.

Sunflowers In Good Condition, Growers Told

Attendance at a recent meeting in Pennington county on sunflower pests and problems was approximately 75 people, indicating a high interest and response by area sunflower producers, according to Terry Courneya, county extension director.

Courneya said that except for some isolated instances of damage by the sunflower midge, it appears that most sunflowers in the area will get by without economically damaging pest infestations this year. Observations by Courneya and the plant management staff observing and monitoring sunflower fields for the University of Minnesota at Crookston, showed no evidence of sunflower moths.

The midge, a tiny insect which is difficult to see without magnification, is not likely subject to chemical control because of the problem in observing its presence. While it may do extensive damage to individual fields, it is not yet significant enough in the overall production picture to merit special attention.

The sunflower crop is later than normal due to the cold and wet spring, but pollination should be complete by the end of August and if frost is avoided until then the crop should mature satisfactorily, Courneya said. Average frost date for this area is about September 10.

Other crops in the area are generally good, with the exception of early barley which was reportedly badly stained. Only on the ridges is there any moisture stress on small grain with other areas having ample moisture. There are no widespread disease problems reported.

Hay is plentiful and the second cutting of alfalfa was generally of good quality while first cutting was not as good.

Public Opinion Letter Given False Signature

Gordon Peterson, whose name appeared on a public opinion letter which appeared in the August 6 issue of the Times, has advised this office that he is not the writer of that letter. His name was used by someone else in an apparent attempt as a practical joke.

The false use of a name in a letter intended for publication has again made it necessary for the Times to alter its policy on letters to the editor. See today's editorial entitled "What's In A Name" for details.

SCHOLARSHIPS offered by the Thief River Falls Elks lodge were presented recently by exalted ruler Bob Jury to Julie Easton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alex Easton, and Buzz Johnson, son of Mrs. Patricia Johnson. Johnson also won a $600 scholarship from the Elks national foundation at the state level. He will use that grant and the $100 local scholarship in attending North Dakota state university at Fargo. Julie is enrolled at Northland community college in Thief River Falls. Both are 1979 graduates of Lincoln high school.

Highway Projects In Area Cut Back

Several area road projects are among the 61 improvement projects deferred from the 1980-81 state highway and resurfacing programs by the Minnesota department of transportation.

Richard P. Braun, commissioner of the department, said the MnDOT is forced to make the deferments because of "skyrocketing inflation and declining revenues. The cutbacks total $122.5 million statewide and reduce the proposed 1980-81 construction program from $458.4 million to $335.9 million.

Clifford Larson, engineer for the state highway department in Thief River Falls, said that safety and bridge repair or replacement projects funded separately by state bonds are included in the program but not affected by the cutbacks.

Deferred major trunk highway improvements in this area include the following:

—Grading and resurfacing and installation of surfaced shoulders on highway 32 from St. Hilaire to Thief River Falls;

—Grading of highway shoulders on highway 59 from Brooks to Thief River Falls and installation of a bridge near Plummer; and —Overlay surfacing on highway 11 from Pelland to Greenbush.

An additional 67 projects totaling $334 million and programmed for 1982 to 1985 will be eliminated from the construction schedule, Braun said.

"What this means is that the contract letting dates for all 128 projects have been erased temporarily and new priorities will be set when we have a better picture of our highway funding," commissioner Braun said. "Investment strategy and project studies are underway."

Included in the area projects which had been placed in the unscheduled 1982-1985 category and are now subject to new priorities are the following:

—Regrading and resurfacing of highways 219 and 89 from Goodridge to Grygla to bring the roads up to nine-ton carrying capacity;

—Grading, widening of shoulders and resurfacing of highway 32 from highway 2 at Marcoux corner to Red Lake Falls;

—Resurfacing of highway 59 from Erskine to Thief River Falls; and

—Regrading and resurfacing of the eastbound lane of highway 2 from Marcoux corner to Erskine.

Engineer Larson said he was disappointed in the cutbacks, especially the highway 32 improvement project which has been ready from an engineering standpoint for two years and for which most of the right-of-way has been secured. He also expressed the desires of area department officials to provide the nine-ton roadway to serve the Grygla community.

But Larson also said he understood the financial situation whereby inflation caused a 21 per cent increase in highway construction costs in 1978 and forecasts call for decreasing revenues from the state's nine cents per gallon motor fuel tax. Revenues are declining because of a smaller fuel supply and individual conservation efforts. Counties and cities sharing state high-

Co. Board Hears Budget Requests

Two budget requests came before the Pennington county board at that group's regular meeting held Tuesday, August 7; one from the juvenile training center in Bemidji where Pennington county houses juvenile offenders, and one from Northwest regional library systems.

Present to make the juvenile center budget request was Reese Hall, director. Total budget for the center from August 1, 1979 to July 31, 1980 is $252,623. Requested contribution from Pennington county, which is one of eight counties involved in funding the center, was $9,196. This would be a seven per cent increase over the previous year's budget of $8,595.

Wayne Alfveby, director of Northwest regional library, requested an $18,619.91 contribution from the county for the 1979-80 fiscal year. This is compared to last year's contribution of $14,300. The $14,300 figure is also given by the state as the minimum contribution that can be made by Pennington county. Total projected budget for the library systems is $301,518.73.

No action was taken on either budget request by the board Tuesday. The requests will be taken into consideration in the near future as the board finalizes the 1979-80 county budget.

In other business, county board members passed a resolution asking that the state allocate monies left in the Community Social Services Act block grant fund after county allocations are made to the Association of Minnesota Counties. The funds would be used by the association to study the impact of the Community Social Services Act. The act requires that social service funds be funneled directly to the Minnesota counties making the counties responsible for contracting individually for services. In the past the state had distributed funds to the various social service agencies on behalf of the counties.

A delegation of residents from Bray township appeared before the board to request the

Bids Accepted On Several Area Projects

Batzer Construction company of St. Cloud is the apparent low bidder at $135,464 for a bituminous seal coat to be applied on several stretches of highway in Pennington, Marshall and Beltrami counties.

The area affected is described by the state department of transportation as 38.7 miles of highway 1 between the highway 219 junction and 4.7 miles west of the highways 89 and 59 junction, and on highway 59 between Thief River Falls and Newfolden.

Thorson, Inc. of Bemidji apparently was the low bidder on surfacing and aggregate shoulders on 3.8 miles of highway 102 between Melvin and Fertile (spot surfacing at five locations) and on highway 32 between Red Lake Falls and 1.7 miles north in Polk and Red Lake counties.

SOCIETY and CLUBS

Sharyn Kaye Amiot and Mark C. Larson Are Wed

Miss Sharyn Kaye Amiot and Mark Clifford Larson exchanged marriage vows recently at a five o'clock ceremony at Zion Lutheran church in this city.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Amiot and Mr. and Mrs. A. Clifford Larson of Thief River Falls.

Rev. Richard Larson officiated at the double ring ceremony. At the organ was Mrs. Phyllis Dalager, who played Bach's "Sheep May Safely Graze," and Lohengrin's "Wedding March" for the processional, and Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," for the recessional. Diane Mosbeck sang "Annie's Song," "Sunrise, Sunset," and "Evergreen." After the presentation of the roses to the mothers, and the pastoral blessing with the couple kneeling at the altar, David Cameron sang "The Lord's Prayer."

Forming the chancel setting were two large altar bouquets of yellow and white daisies and babies' breath, a wedding banner, "And the two shall become one," made by the groom's parents; and two spiral candelabra with greenery and large yellow bows. The pews along the white carpeted aisle were marked by candelabra accented with candelabra, greenery and yellow bows.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a sheer organza gown designed by Mori Lee of New York. It featured a Queen Anne neckline, full bishop sleeves with deep lace cuffs encrusted with pearls, and a full circular skirt complemented by a cathedral length train. Accenting the front of the gown were scalloped Venice lace trim and lace fleurets. To correspond with the gown, she wore a Juliet headpiece of lace fleurets with a fingertip veil edged with lace scallops. Her pearl and diamond teardrop pendant was a gift from the groom. She carried a colonial bouquet of yellow sweetheart roses, white daisy mums and babies' breath. Among the flowers were tatted yellow roses and white daisies, made by the bride's grandmother, who also made the ones in the flower girls' basket, and hair and the cross bookmark for the Bible carried by the ring bearer.

Attending the bride as matron of honor was Mrs. Nancy Harbott. Bridesmaids were Sue Peterson, Rhonda Lee and Kathy Bottem. All are friends of the bride. Coreen Larson, a cousin of the groom, served as junior bridesmaid. Their gowns of sheer yellow polyester crepe were fashioned with self-pleated skirts and bouson tops with cap sleeves. They carried colonial bouquets of white daisy mums, yellow Sweetheart roses and mint green carnations with babies' breath. In their hair they wore a custer of babies' breath centered with a white daisy mum.

Serving as flower girl was Sarah Bakke, a cousin of the bride. Her gown of yellow sheer featured ruffles, edged with yellow lace, at the neckline, at the bottom of the full gathered skirt and at the edge of the long, bishop sleeves. Her basket, filled with yellow rose petals, which she scattered as she walked up the aisle, was trimmed with tatted yellow and white flowers.

Ring bearer was Bryan Amiot, brother of the bride. Like the men of the wedding party, he wore a hunter green tuxedo with a white ruffled shirt with yellow trim. His boutonniere was a yellow sweetheart rose. He carried the rings on the bride's white Bible, her confirmation gift from her godparents.

The groom, who wore an all-white tuxedo, was attended by his brother, John Larson, as best man. Groomsmen were David Cameron and Mark Hagen, Thief River Falls, and Bryce Abrahamson of Holt, friends of the groom. Doug Amiot, brother of the bride, was junior groomsman and also ushered in the bride's mother and grandparents. Other ushers were Duane Paulson, Thief River Falls, Mike Munt, Spring Lake, and Bruce Anderson, Grand Forks. Acolytes were Peter Seline, Albert Lea, and Kirk Hamre, cousins of the groom.

The mother of the bride was attired in a long-sleeved, mint green polyester gown styled with a pleated floor-length skirt. The groom's mother wore a mauve polyester bouson, floor-length gown. Their corsages were of white daisy mums, yellow sweetheart roses and babies' breath. The fathers wore hunter green tuxedos and white carnation peek-a-boo boutonnieres centered with a yellow rose.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Bertil Bakke, grandparents of the bride; Mrs. Carl Green, the groom's grandmother and godmother; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Weber of Newfolden and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Nelson, godparents of the bride, and Lester Larson, godfather of the groom.

Immediately following the ceremony, the bride's parents hosted a buffet dinner in the church parlors. Fresh daisies centered the tables. Serving as hosts and hostesses were Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Bakke, Thief River Falls, and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Green, Fargo, N.D., uncles and aunts of the bride and groom.

Highlighting the serving table was a four-tiered chocolate and white wedding cake, iced in white and decorated with yellow roses and white daisies. Between the tall, decorated, filigree pillars which separated the middle tiers was a flowing water fountain. Topping the cake was a nosegay of yellow silk roses centered with a gold Christogram. Cutting and serving the cake were the bride's aunts, Mrs. Victora Hermes, Grand Rapids, and Mrs. Rosealie Hanson, Hastings, and the groom's aunts, Mrs. Marion Lorenson and Mrs. Hildegaard Hamre, both of Thief River Falls.

BSU To Host Environmental Ed. Conference

Fifteenth annual midwest environmental education conference will be held at the Bald Eagle outdoor learning center (BEC) near Cass Lake, September 27-29, bringing together environmental educators, consultants and energy specialists from six states and Canada.

Among the speakers who will present topics will be Robert Bigwood, president of Otter Tail power company; Senator Gerald Willet (4th District DFL); William Stapp, director of the department of environmental education at the University of Michigan; Robert Reid, environmental coordinator for Honeywell, Inc.; and others from government, industry and institutions throughout the midwest.

The conference is jointly hosted by the four states in the association — Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and Illinois. Guest states this year include North and South Dakota, and Canada is a special guest.

Bemidji state university, itself a center for alternative energy study and environmental education, will host the conference at the center with sponsorship by the Minnesota environmental education board, the department of natural resources and the department of education.

Undergraduate or graduate credit from Bemidji state university may be earned through attendance at the conference.

Topics included in the three-day schedule range from tourism and land use to hunter education and wildlife management in the recreation area and to wood as a source of energy and planning the community of tommorrow in environmental awareness sessions.

All will not be classroom study either. Field experience trips planned include a river float on the Mississippi, a bird ecology and wildlife management survey at Pike bay, an adventure ropes course conducted by the Bald Eagle center staff, duck calling techniques, orienteering training and survival education.

Special environmental education sections will include use of theatrics, puppetry and magic in the classroom and presentations on nationally-validated environmental education programs for schools.

Bald Eagle center is the ideal location for the conference, located in the heart of the Chippewa national forest. The center will be able to house 170 participants and local motels will have accomodations for many more. You may register for options including meals and lodging at the center.

For more information about the 15th Midwest Environmental Education Conference write Dr. Raymond Nelson, Conference Coordinator, Box 187, Bemidji State University, Bemidji, Mn 56601 or phone 218-755-2850.

Peggy Genereux Gets Credit For Work With Kids

"You get kids that become attached to you. . .and find yourself getting attached to them, too," notes Peggy Genereux of Brooks, an interning childcare major in the division of home and family services (HFS) at the University of Minnesota — Crookston (UMC).

Peggy has been employed by the Red Lake Falls children's center, located in the basement of the Presbyterian church in Red Lake Falls, fulfilling the HFS division's 12-credit internship requirement.

Her duties include planning lessons for the preschoolers, taking them for walks, presenting their activities and providing general care and guidance for them. A typical day at the center begins at 6:30 a.m., when working mothers bring in their tots for the day. The children participate in free play, followed by a snack around 9:30 a.m.

Alphabet and number games, along with playing "calendar", are intended to be fun and educational for the youngsters. At 11:15 a.m. it's time for "family group", followed by lunch. The afternoon is spent involved in activities such as creative movement, an afternoon snack, naptime, table play and walks. A different theme is used each week, allowing both instructor and child more creativity.

The number of children at the center during the summer ranges from 6 to 15, depending upon the number of "drop-ins". The ages range from infant to preschoolers. Genereux feels her time on internship was well spent and, for her, teaching children taught her more about her chosen major and herself. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Genereux of Brooks.

Each of the four academic, degree-granting divisions at UMC has an internship program designed to provide the student with practical knowledge and work experience in his field. Students usually complete their internship requirement during the summer between their freshman and sophomore years. The assignment enables the intern to gain college credits toward an associate in applied science degree. Internship coordinators work closely with their students, placing them into a position that is allied with their major subject.

Warm your pockets with cold cash—Sell unused household items with Times' Classified Ads. Ph. 681-4450 to place your ad.

PEGGY GENEREUX takes a moment out of a busy afternoon to pose with a few of her young charges. She is a childcare major at the University of Minnesota—Crookston (UMC), in the home and family services division. Her internship site is the Red Lake Falls child care center located in the Presbyterian church basement. (UMC photo)

He was presented the association's highest honor, the Sioux award, in 1972, and he and his wife Marge are benefactors of the University of North Dakota, having donateed shares of Arctic Enterprises, Inc. stock, valued at approximately $80,000.

The Swensons lived in Grand Forks for a number of years, where he was associated with an accounting firm. Mrs. Swenson served as a part-time voice instructor at UND. Lowell became president of Arctic Enterprises in 1965.

PBS Television Provides Look At Killer Whale

Mankind's relationship with whales is not one of which the human race can be proud. Whales have been slaughtered in such huge numbers that their very survival as a species is threatened. But is the whale, in fact, ahead of us on the ladder of evolution? Attempts to discover the exact nature and intelligence of the long feared "killer whale" are the subject of a one-hour documentary "The Gentle Killers" premiering August 21 at 7 p.m. by the Public Broadcasting Service.

To the amazement of the crew, Gudren and her mate — so-called killers — remained quiet and calm during their capture and transport to a research center in Holland. Lying on wet blankets surrounded by ice, they were seemingly content during the many miles of their journey via boat, truck and plane.

Several months in close proximity with humans refuted the whales aggressive image. They proved to be gentle and highly competitive creatures, quickly learning to mimic the trucks performed by neighboring dolphins and seals to garner praise from the trainers and rewards of fish. It was soon realized that the problem would not be to train the huge creatures, but rather to offer enough stimulation to keep them from becoming bored.

The film reveals that these much-maligned mammals have massive brains, two 'voices' to our one and even the possibility of telepathic contact with others of their kind.

Producer Robin Brown explained that "Man and whale come from the same root, but the point at which we went our way evolutionarily, and they went theirs, was when we went into the trees and they went into the water. They were more sensible because water proved to be a more sympathetic environment. In evolution, they are more advanced than we are."

'U' of M Publication Support Challenged

Minnesota Daily is an "albatross around the neck of the university" and should be cut free of financial arrangements with the University of Minnesota, according to chairman of a student group organized to protest the Daily's June 4 humor edition.

Kathy Sackett, chairman of the student ad hoc anti-defamation committee, further told a subcommittee of the board of regents Tuesday (July 31) that a new editorial management plan adopted by Daily editor Kate Stanley and approved Monday by the board of student publications "borders on censorship and threatens the First amendment."

The plan, which was written by Stanley, would remain in effect only as long as Stanley or subsequent editors choose, unless the board of student publications adopts it as board policy.

Jim Clark, president of the board of student publications, said the board is likely to approve large parts of the plan, thus making them "carved in granite."

The controversy arose when the Minnesota Daily published a humor issue June 4 that its critics have called obscene, racist and anti-religious. In response to public outcry, the regents appointed a subcommittee to study the Daily and its relations with the university.

David Lebedoff, chairman of the committee, has been careful to point out that the subcommittee is not conducting "hearings. . . or investigations," and is "not here to pronounce a judgment," but is merely a fact-gathering body.

Sackett's group presented the regents with an eight-page document enumerating its complaints against the Daily and presenting its recommendations for change in the current fee collection system.

At present, the university collects $1.75 per quarter from each student on the Twin Cities campus for the Daily, and the paper is distributed free. The students fees collected total $203,020, about 17 per cent of the Daily's total operating budget of $1,207,020.

"We are totally in favor of freedom of the press and First Amendment rights," Sackett said. "But we are also in favor of freedom of choice for students.

"The recommendations made so far border on censorship and threaten the First amendment. We believe the Daily should be allowed to print whatever it wants to print, and be read by whoever wants to read it," she said.

Sackett said that critics of those who are upset about the humor issue have recommended that they not read the paper, but students must at least scan the Daily to find official notices published by the university.

"You mean that the most disinterested student couldn't find the schedule for a volleyball game without stumbling across an editorial?" asked Lebedoff.

Although Sackett said her group would be somewhat satisfied by Lebedoff's later suggestion that official notices be posted in prominent campus locations, she said that would not eliminate their displeasure with the mandatory fee.

"We are not claiming a right to be free from any publication of statements that might ridicule Christianity," Sackett's statement read. "But, as Christians and students we do claim the right not to be abused and ridiculed at public expense, or, worse yet, with our own forced support."

The issue is one of minority rights, according to Sackett, who admitted that her group's view would probably lose in a student referendum. "But in America, minority rights are not subject to majority vote," her statement read.

Sue Gjemse, student body president, said that her own informal surveys have shown widespread student support for the Daily. "Yes, a lot of students were offended (by the humor issue), but they still want the Daily," she said.

Gjemse said that the Daily should be treated like all other student organizations. "If you cut fees for the Daily, you're going to have to cut fees for all student organizations," she said.

Sackett's group is recommending that the university cease fee support for the Daily and withhold the annual $33,300 it spends for faculty and staff subscriptions. Further, the group is suggesting that students who want their $1.75 refunded be allowed to have it, and that in subsequent years only those who specifically ask to pay the fee do so.

Sackett argued that as long as the university continues to collect fees for the Daily, the paper is not a "real-life" learning situation for student journalists. "They can print what they want to and offend whom they choose, and still have a guaranteed income," she said.

The editorial management plan submitted by Stanley and Clark contains 11 significant changes in the way the Daily currently operates.

Those points include a statement of the Daily's mission, and provisions for weekly editors' meetings, firm deadlines, the hiring of a second night editor, more detailed editing of "non-news" material, a regularized hiring procedure, better training procedures, a corrections policy, and an outline for disciplinary measures.

Also included are a statement that all future special issues be routed through the normal seven-step editing process, and a stipulation that future humor issues be printed no later than April 1.

The homor issue, as well as other special issues published in the past, did not go through the regular editing process, Stanley said.

The April 1 deadline for future humor issues was set to eliminate the possibility that what happened this year could happen again — editors of the offending issue were no longer on the staff when the issue was distributed.

Paynesville regent Lloyd Peterson expressed concern with the value of the editorial plan. "I don't know if I'm all that comfortable that this will do the job," he said.

"We do believe it will provide the kind of control we need while insuring that the Daily staff has enough freedom to learn," Clark said.

The regents' subcommittee will conclude its discussion Monday (August 6) and make its recommendations to the full board of regents August 9.

Pennington Co. Raises $3,034 For Heart Fund

Pennington county volunteers for the American Heart Association, Minnesota Affiliate, Inc., raised $3,034 for the 1979 state heart fund campaign, announced Lance Crombie, Ph.D., 1979 state heart fund chairman.

"This amount surpasses the county goal of $2,858 and enables the Minnesota Affiliate to increase funds for heart research projects, community programs and professional and public heart education programs for the 1979-80 fiscal year," Crombie stated.

He noted that to surpass the goal, Pennington county volunteers donated their time, energy and enthusiasm to collect money and to distribute lifesaving information about heart attack and stroke.

Dr. Crombine added that in recent years, deaths due to heart disease have declined in Minnesota. However, heart disease is still the nation's number one health problem, affecting more than 40 million Americans.

The American Heart Association, Minnesota Affiliate, Inc., is a statewide health agency and is part of the American Heart Association which is represented by 55 affiliates in all states and territories of the U.S. It is the only statewide health agency dedicated to the reduction of premature death and disability caused by heart and blood vessel diseases.

Court Issues Ruling Covering White Earth

A decision handed down recently by the Minnesota Supreme Court exempts Indians on the White Earth reservation from state hunting and fishing laws.

Department of Natural Resources had appealed the case from an unfavorable ruling by the district court in Becker county on May 20, 1977.

White Earth Indian reservation includes all of Mahnomen county and portions of Clearwater and Becker counties.

The supreme court decision is similar to a ruling several years ago by a federal district court that exempted Indians on the Leech Lake reservation from state hunting, fishing, trapping and wild rice harvesting laws.

White Earth case arose when 11 Indians were arrested by state conservation officers for deer shining and two others for spearing walleyes.

Some of the Indians plead innocent on the grounds that treaties establishing the reservation granted them immunity from state hunting and fishing laws.

In its opinion, the court noted that the White Earth Indians have since adopted a conservation code to regulate hunting and fishing within the reservation. The court said the code is similar to state hunting and fishing regulations.

"Had this code been in effect at the time the alleged violations occurred, it would have prohibited at least some, if not all, of these activities," said the court.

Kruse, Backen Head "Breath Of Life" Campaign

Mrs. Susan Kruse and Mrs. Renee Backen have been appointed to lead local volunteers in Thief River Falls' "Breath of Life" campaign during the month of September, according to Ron Sawain, president of the Minnesota chapter of the cystic fibrosis foundation.

When accepting the chairmanship, Kruse said, "Support from our residents is needed to insure a meaningful project. There are literally millions of children who need our help. Over six per cent of the deaths in children between the ages of one and 14 are caused by lung disease such as asthma, bronchitis, emphysema, and cystic fibrosis".

Cystic fibrosis, the most serious, lung-damaging disease, is incurable. It is estimated that one in twenty Americans is a symptomless and unknowing carrier of the gene which will cause CF in their child. Theoretically, 470 of our residents are carriers of the CF gene which causes the most common genetic disease in America.

"Today and everyday five babies are born with CF and three people died because of CF. With everyone's help, perhaps we will soon be able to say today no one was born with or died because of cystic fibrosis", commented Swain.

ADDITIONAL $5,000 CONTRIBUTION was made by the city of Thief River Falls to the Pennington county historical society Tuesday to help cover the costs of relocating the former Burlington Northern depot to the Pioneer Village site. The city had previously contributed $5,000 to the moving fund and Pennington county had contributed $1,500 in addition to its annual budget allocation of $3,500. However, additional funds were needed to cover the relocation costs. Since a contribution to the historical society was an eligible item for use of community development funds gained through the sale of site C for a senior high rise, the council voted Tuesday to make the additional contribution. Inga Geving (left), president of the county historical society, is pictured receiving the contribution from Mayor Bob Carlson. Looking on is Hanna Kisch, active historical society member.

Injuries Minor In Car-Truck Collision Here

Two Thief River Falls girls were treated and released at Northwestern hospital Tuesday evening following a collision between the car in which they were traveling and a semi-trailer truck on highway 59 about a mile northwest of Thief River Falls.

Lynn Sauve was driving north on highway 59 when her vehicle collided with a truck driven by Roger Hulett of Minneapolis and turning into the driveway of Falls Diesel Service. A passenger in the Sauve car was Pam Engelstad, also of Thief River Falls.

Investigation was conducted by the state highway patrol which received the call about 8:45 p.m. Assistance was provided by the county sheriff's department and city police department.

Expect August Gas Supply To Be Satisfactory

Gasoline supply outlook for August is good, according to the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA). "Prices have increased less than a penny per gallon per week for the last several weeks, and gasoline station hours have also stabilized," said Diane Nelsen, spokeswoman for Minnesota AAA. Through the state, 38 per cent of the stations are open on Sundays, 33 per cent are open after 8 p.m. weekdays and 40 per cent are open after 6 p.m. on Sundays.

August allocations for the state's gasoline stations have generally remained the same or increased, according to Ken Wingard of the Minnesota independent retailers association. The farm co-ops are the exception; most of their fuel is going to farmers, leaving very limited supplies for sale at retail outlets, said Wingard.

The average price per gallon increased eight-tenths of a cent at full-service stations and two-tenths of a cent at self-service pumps this past week. Currently, the average price per gallon at full-service stations is 95.9 cents for regular, $1.01.1 for premium, 99.5 cents for unleaded, $1.01.9 for premium unleaded and 93.3 cents for diesel fuel.

At self-service pumps, the average price-per-gallon is 93.9 cents for regular, 97 cents for premium, 97.6 cents for unleaded and $1.01.6 for premium unleaded.

A decrease in gasoline use has helped increase gasoline supplies, said Nelsen. "Hopefully, people will continue to conserve gas by practicing conservative driving habits and keeping their car tuned-up and proper pressure in their vehicle's tires," said Nelsen. Governor Al Quie has said that if all of Minnesota's 2½ million drivers save about 1¾ gallons of gas a week, Minnesota's supply and demand would balance.

According to Minnesota AAA's auto travel department, there were 8,375 requests for auto routings or auto travel literature during June — down 775 requests from the high of 9,150 in June of 1977. A final count on July travel requests hasn't been tabulated, but Darrel Monson of the auto travel department said requests were down some from last July. June and July are the peak motor vehicle travel months, according to Monson.

However, requests for information on motor vehicle travel in Canada, where there has been no gas shortage, increased a whopping 202 per cent for June of 1979 over June of 1978. Ontario, Alberta and Manitoba are the most popular Canadian destinations, according to Minnesota AAA's statistics.

Health Center At Crookston Adds Employee

Terry L. Pankow, MSW, has accepted the position of assistant director for developmental disabilities at the Northwestern mental health center in Crookston. He is originally from North Dakota.

Pankow will provide consultation and education services in the areas of mental retardation, epilepsy and cerebral palsy. He will coordinate and implement services with the developmental achievement centers, group homes, sheltered workshops and other agencies.

Pankow will be working with the Falls Day activity center, Evan Armstrong, director; occupational development center, Chris Twomey, director; Johnson group home, Paul Johnson, administrator; and Hanson group home, Lyle Hanson, administrator, in providing services to mentally retarded and developmentally disabled individuals in the area.

Pankow was previously employed as a social worker at two community based mental retardation and developmental disabilities centers in Indiana. His employment experience includes individual, family and group counseling, individual and program consultation to group homes, sheltered workshops and preschool programs.

He has also provided diagnostic and evaluation services as well as case management services. While in Indiana he served on the governor's committee for the state mental retardation and developmental disabilibies statistical reporting system.

Financial Aid Received By BSU Students

More than 2,300 students planning to attend Bemidji state university for the coming year have received financial aid award letters, committing $3.8 million in financial assistance from a variety of aid programs, according to BSU financial aid director Robert Frazey. This figure will continue to rise to a level exceeding $5 million by the end of the school year.

The middle income assistance bill which was passed by congress November 1 has had a very positive impact on student's eligibility for aid, he said. Many middle income families who were not eligible for "need based aid" last year are now finding that when suldents apply for the coming year, they are eligible for basic educational opportunity grant assistance.

The middle income assistance act also made all students, regardless of family income or assets, eligible for interest subsidies under the guaranteed student loan program. Students may borrow under this program with no interest while enrolled in college; an interest rate of seven per cent is applied starting nine months after terminating their college education.

Students planning to attend Bemidji state this year, who anticipate needing financial assistance to meet their educational expenses after the start of the school year, should complete the appropriate application forms at once. For information, contact: Financial Aid Office, Deputy Hall, Bemidji State University, Bemidji, MN 56601. Phone 775-2034.

Princess Kay Coronation Set At State Fair

Reigning Princess Kay of the Milky Way, Kari Schroht of Owatonna, will crown her successor in ceremonies August 22 at 8:30 p.m., at the bandshell in administration park on the Minnesota state fairgrounds.

Princess Kay of the Milky Way will be selected from among the 11 American Dairy association of Minnesota regional princesses, including Tracy Foldel of Greenbush who was crowned as the Region One princess in Thief River Falls June 12.

This year marks the 26 year of the Princess Kay contest. James Frost, director of public affairs for the Minnesota state fair, said Princess Kay has been an integral part of the state fair activities during that time.

"We are an agricultural exposition and the important role that Princess Kay plays in the state fair is symbolic of the important roles the dairy industry and agriculture play in the state fair and in the state of Minnesota," Frost said.

Princess Kay of the Milky Way is the 'First Lady' of Minnesota's dairy industry and adds glamour to the industry, creates a favorable impression of dairying and promotes the health and economic benefits of dairy foods to consumers, according to Cliff Markuson, manager of Minnesota ADA.

The Princess Kay of the Milky Way program is sponsored by the dairy-farmer members of the association.

County Board Hears Requests About Budgets

completion of a road project on highway 12. Four miles of highway 12, north from No. 3 to the intersection of No. 7, is on the five-year road plan and was designed for a 40 foot top and eventual blacktopping. However during discussion Tuesday, questions arose as to how the 40 foot road would be maintained if it wasn't blacktopped and whether or not there was adequate use of the road to warrant blacktop.

Board members expressed the opinion that it might be wiser to alter the five-year plan calling for blacktopping on No. 7 which runs east and west connecting No. 1 and No. 3 instead and redesigning the improvements on No. 12 making it only a 5 ton road with a 30 foot top. No action was taken and the matter will be explored in more depth.

Taking into consideration the government mandates regarding energy efficiency and wheelchair accessibility of public buildings, the board voted to proceed with the rewindowing project for the courthouse previously discussed and to have plans drawn up for the installation of an elevator. The rewindowing project would reduce the window space in the courthouse by one third and would also include the replacement of present entryway.

Board members also passed a resolution in support of the Northwest Regional Development Commission's overall economic development plan; approved payment of $2,808 for the county's share in the Tri-Valley bus services through July 31, 1980; instructed the engineer to call for bids for a new motor grader shed in Goodridge with bids to be opened September 4; and approved a request by Title Atlas Company to publish a new county atlas.

Interviews were held with five individuals applying for the general foreman position open with the highway department but no decision was made by the board as there is one additional applicant to be interviewed. Godfred Svir was appointed acting general foreman to serve until the position is filled.

Health Board To Meet Tues.

Cut Back On Highway Plans For TRF Area

way user taxes are also experiencing similar problems of escalating costs and declining revenues.

Commissioner Braun said that MnDOT's program proposal was based on maintaining a highway construction and rehabilitation program through 1985 similar to the work level of 1976-77. That construction program was established thruough public meetings and hearings statewide, published as part of the department's plan and presented to the state legislature this year.

"Since no additional revenue was provided, MNDOT finds itself in a financial crunch," Braun said. "We now have no alternative other than to significantly cut back the highway construction program selected by Minnesotans.

"We considered four alternative plans of action which ranged from using the available funds entirely on maintenance and preservation-type projects to the extreme of investing all available funds in new construction with no significant maintenance type projects."

Since the Interstate program is funded by 90 per cent federal funds which must be used on projects to be completed before 1986, that program was given first priority for state funding, along with federal safety and state bonded bridge repair programs.

For the remaining portions of the state highway construction program, three things are emphasized: (1) Preservation of the existing state trunk highway system which has an estimated value of $16 billion; (2) resurfacing and minor improvement programs close to the work level set in the MnDOT plan; and (3) use of any remaining funds for the state portion of other federally funded highway improvements.

Deferral was based on cost effectiveness, functions a roadway serves, road condition, traffic volumes and congestion, type of roadway and amount of previous investment as well as several other technical considerations.

City Council Again Reviews Deregulation

and the rest of the communities is quality service."

Council members felt that contacts should continue with legislators and instructed city clerk Jerry Wigness to forward copies of the statements presented to the house subcommittee by Wurst and McCabe to Senators Rudy Boschwitz and Dave Durenberger and Congressmen Arlan Stangeland along with a resolution from the council indicating that they concur with the statements.

In other business, city council members heard a report from city engineer Doug Stewart and superintendent of utilities John T. Anderson regarding the condition of water connections in the city. Last winter a total of 198 residents experienced frozen pipes and 126 residents experienced reoccuring freeze-ups which finally resulted in the city disconnecting the residents meters to allow them to leave their water running.

Not only is there city cost involved in thawing out pipes and removing and reinstalling water meters, the city also sees literally millions of gallons of water wasted, pumped down the drain increasing the sewage load and putting additional strain on the operation of the waste water system. Approximate city cost in all phases of handling totals 70 to 80 cents per thousand gallons of water run down the drain. With the amount of water wasted in the millions of gallons, cost last year could run as high as $50,000.

Proposed solution to the problem is lowering or insulation of problem pipes. It was suggested that the city set up a project which would give residents who have experienced freeze-ups or feel they might have a problem with their water pipes the opportunity to have the pipes insulated or lowered on a cost-sharing basis with the city. A rough estimate from Doug Stewart gave the cost per connection at $500.

Citizens would participate in the project on a voluntary basis and be assessed for their share of the project. If, however, a resident declined to participate and again experienced freeze-ups he would be required to pay for thawing and, if he found it necessary to keep his water running to prevent freeze-up, the water would continue to be metered.

The proposal was turned over to the tax and assessments committee for refinement and the development of a formula for the cost-sharing.

Informed by city attorney Bob Wurst that a letter had been received from Schumann Brothers, Inc. demanding a $7,000 settlement for work and supplies needed above the contract price for painting of the water tower, the city council discussed alternative actions that could be taken.

The claim made by Schumann was that the project specs were misleading and that he made his bid under the impression that much less work and supplies would be needed than were actually required. The city maintains however that the specs were clear and should not have been misconstrued by the bidder.

Schumann had previously asked for an $8,200 additional payment, but, at the solicitation of the city, submitted the $7,000 settlement figure. The figure, however, was not acceptable to council members and Tuesday they discussed closing negotiations and allowing the matter to go into court, simply rejecting the $7,000 settlement offer or making a counterproposal. A motion made by alderman Borsheim and seconded by alderman Goodrich that the city make a counterproposal of $3,000 failed in a five to two vote. A second motion that the city inform Schumann Brothers that the $7,000 figure is not acceptable passed unanimously.

In a presentation by housing administrator Jan Reid and city planner Jack Quinlivan the council was informed that it was necessary to rapidly close out the community development funds for year I. A total of $63,374 remained in the fund including $33,000 for the sale of site C for an elderly highrise. Council authorized the allocation of $43,528.31 of the funds to cover costs connected with the development of site C. The remaining $19,845.69 will be transferred to program year three and used in three possible ways: 1) to acquire the Web Maves property for use as a green area for the elderly housing complex, 2) to acquire scattered sites for single family housing, and 3) for housing rehabilitation of single family homes.

City council members also approved a 50 cents rate increase for Sjoberg's cable television and home box office; approved the concept of using a small parcel of city land near the archery club as a campground and landing site for canoeists, approved a request from the fix base operator at the airport to sublet a portion of its rented space to Arctic Enterprises, and passed a resolution adopting the overall economic development program for region one.

Board Conducts Review Of TRF School Needs

this year will be $36,189.34 based on $719.47 per pupil unit. Summer school expenditures of $36,870.15 included $6,475 for administration, $23,120 for instruction, $2,898 for clerical, $1,612 for custodial, $2,091 for supplies and expense and $672 for fixed charges. Expenditures must exceed aid earned if the district is to receive the full amount, Desrocher reported.

Transfer of Sharon Stauss from half-time reading instructor at Mark Twain to half-time Title I instructor at St. Bernard's school was approved. Walt Redinger was appointed Title I lead teacher.

Bus drivers hired pending 20 days of acceptable driving were Gerald Amundgaard, Kirk Oseid, Larry Paulson, Randall Twistol and Walter Wicklander.

Low bid of Virco manufacturing company in the amount of $4,765 was accepted for cafeteria furniture. There are five bidders on the contract with the high bid being $9,165.

Authorization was given by the board to advertise for bids on two nine-passenger station wagons, advertise the sale of two 1969 Chevrolet buses with Thomas bodies and purchase property at 405 Riverside for $14,000 with the AVTI carpentry class to remodel the property for resale as a class project. Bids were also authorized to be received for a ¾ ton or one ton used van for use at the AVTI and a two-ton or 2½-ton truck for the buildings and grounds department.

Approval was also given to adding a management aide at Washington elementary school—kindergarten—as recommended by the special education department; accepting a contract for the Northwestern Mental Health center to provide school social work services to the local district; and appointment of Russ Smith, Ruth Onkka, Jim Kotz, David Morken and Frank Hamerlinck as representatives to the state high school league.

The board also adopted a resolution continuing the practice of assisting tenured staff members to obtain vocational certification by underwriting work experience at a maximum of $4 per hour with pre-approval by the superintendent and no use of such credits on the salary schedule. John Nicholson was approved for such work experience program.

School bus routes were approved as established and tuition payments to Discovery Place and the nursery school for delayed entrance students to the local school were authorized.

Area Shelter For Battered Women Planned

Plans are being made by the Martha Rogers Ripley Alliance to open a shelter for battered women in economic region I, northwestern Minnesota, November 1. This non-profit corporation has been developed to establish and maintain a shelter which would provide training for people who work with victims of battering, provide speakers to help educate people in the area on battering, and provide a supportive and informative atmosphere for abused women.

The Ripley Alliance, however, needs the support of area persons to succeed in the venture. Volunteers are sought to act as advocates, furnishings and supplies will be needed to open and maintain a shelter, and donations and pledges of money are needed to meet the costs of running a shelter.

Although many people are unfamiliar with batterings in the home and feel they don't happen in this area, numerous area women encounter domestic violence. The abused women feel, for various reasons, that they cannot leave the situation, although their life may actually be in danger.

The women often blame themselves for the situation and do not make their mates take responsibility for their actions. Society also generally holds women accountable for the failure or success of a marriage; and because women fear the shame of admitting their marriage is not a total success, they may remain in dangerous situations.

Leaving an abusive situation may also be difficult if the wife is economically or emotionally dependent on her husband. She may feel she has no choice but to continue the living arrangement. In many parts of Minnesota shelters have already been established which provide safe temporary housing, advocacy and emotional support for abused women and children.

Persons who would like information on how they can help with the establishment of such a shelter in northwestern Minnesota should contact Jeanette Larson, 319 S. Ash, Box 610, Crookston, MN 56716, (218) 281-4224.

Sabo Joins Warroad Lakers

Scott Sabo, who last spring indicated he would attend Bemidji State University where he would play hockey and baseball for the Beavers, has decided instead to concentrate on hockey and will play with the Warroad Lakers during the 1979-80 season.

Sabo, who graduated from Lincoln high school last spring after fine hockey and baseball careers with the Prowlers, will move to Warroad November 1 where he'll live during the winter hockey months. He plans to return to school in 1980-81, hoping the year with the Lakers will provide the added experience that could attract the attention of WCHA schools. Bruce Salmela followed a similar route after graduating from Warroad high school in 1978. His 1978-79 season with the Lakers netted a financial package from Michigan Tech.

The Lakers, who will be entering their 33rd year in organized hockey, are new members of the top-flight Manitoba Central Amateur Senior Hockey League (CASH), along with the St. James Flyers, Elmwood Millionaires, Brandon Olympics, Steinbach Huskies, St. Boniface Mohawks and Transcona Chargers.

Earlier this week the Lakers named Scott Marvin as new player-coach. The 23-year-old Marvin, one of the youngest coaches in Warroad history, has played two season with the Lakers after graduating from the University of North Dakota. He is a Warroad native.

Warroad faces a rebuilding year after CASH entry demands called for the Lakers to play without Manitoba players for the first time since 1956. Gone are nine players from last year's team that won the Manitoba senior title and went on to the Western Hardy Cup finals in Quesnel, British Columbia.

Some 34 players are expected to be on hand when Warroad begins practice drills this fall, including veterans Pete Waslovich, Frankie Krahn, Tim McKinnon, Jack Ganyo, Dennis Ewald, Dave Pavalich and Tom Goddard of Thief River Falls, along with Billy Christian who will be entering a record 23rd year of amateur hockey with the Lakers.

Pigskin Preview Is August 25

Preseason practice drills began Monday for members of the Lincoln high school football team who are preparing for the 1979 season which opens Thurs., Aug. 30, at Grand Forks Red River.

However, fans will have a prior opportunity to watch the Prowlers when the sixth annual Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club Pigskin Preview, featuring high school football teams from Red Lake Falls, Newfolden, East Grand Forks, Grafton, Warren and Thief River Falls, is held Sat., Aug. 25, on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

A 1 p.m. scrimmage session will involve varsity teams from Red Lake Falls and Marshall County Central (Newfolden), along with junior varsity teams from East Grand Forks and Thief River Falls.

At 4 p.m. the scrimmages will feature varsity teams from East Grand Forks, Warren, Grafton and Thief River Falls.

Following the football action, a charcoal beef barbecue dinner will be served by the Sports Boosters Club members.

The Pigskin Preview, annually the Sports Boosters biggest money-making venture, takes on added importance this year since the club has taken on the task of underwriting the athletic program for boys and girls at Franklin middle school for the 1979-80 school year. Funds from the Pigskin Preview will be needed to cover a big portion of the estimated $9,200 needed to support the Franklin sports programs, victim of school district budget cuts.

The Sports Boosters are asking for total community support for their Franklin sports program project, starting with the purchase of Pigskin Preview tickets. The dinner tickets can be purchased from Lincoln high school football team members, or at Dean's Barber Shop, Dallmann Athletic, Inc., Ben Franklin, Bjorkman's and TG Sporting Goods.

Additionally, persons who would like to make a financial donation to the Franklin middle school athletic program through the Sports Boosters can send checks, made payable to the TRF Sports Boosters, to club treasurer Al Christofferson, 325 So. Merriam, Thief River Falls.

PHASE II SHORTSTOP Jeff Ulrich stretched, but couldn't come up with the ball as Tim Sund of Consumer's Co-op bounced a single into center field in the third inning of Monday's Division-III post-season playoff action in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association. Consumer's Co-op won the game 12-6 to advance into the finals of the double elimination event.

Jean Junction-Rundell Electric Titlist . . .

Ten Contenders Remain In TRF Slow Pitch Playoffs

Ten teams are still in the running for the three remaining post-season division playoff titles that will be decided this week in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association.

Current leaders in the double elimination playoffs are the TRF Merchants in Division I; First Federal Savings & Loan Association in Division II; and Consumer's Co-op in Division III. All three await championship finals with unbeaten records.

They'll try to join Jean Junction-Rundell Electric as post-season playoff winners. Jean Junction-Rundell Electric captured the Division IV playoff, conducted as a Sunday tournament August 5, with a 7-6 championship game decision over Tip & Ring.

Division I

Championship match in the Division I playoffs will pit the busy once-beaten Rusty Nail Raiders against the unbeaten regular season pennant winning TRF Merchants Friday at 6:20 p.m. A second game, if needed, would be played at 7:40 that night.

Rusty Nail Raiders, because of a surprising 9-0 first round playoff loss to Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. last Monday, have been kept busy battling back through the loser's bracket. A playoff title for the Raiders would require eight games. Meanwhile, the TRF Merchants received a first round bye and need play only three times to win the post-season trophy.

The championship finale was set Tuesday when the Rusty Nail Raiders eliminated Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. 12-6 and ousted Tony Dorn, Inc. 11-9 in eight innings.

Tony Dorn., Inc. owned a 6-3 lead with two out in the top of the seventh inning in Tuesday's doubleheader nightcap when the Raiders struck for four runs on singles by Bruce Saustad and Paul Williams, followed by five consecutive walks.

Two-out heroics by Tony Dorn, Inc. in the bottom of the seventh tied the game 7-7 as Randy Dallmann doubled and Tim Olson stroked an RBI single.

But the Raiders out-scored Tony Dorn, Inc. 4-2 in the eighth for the win as Joel Carlson, Saustad, Williams and Jeff Tunberg all collected base hits in the fast-approaching darkness and Jack Petrillo produced a sacrifice fly.

In last Monday's opening round games, Hobo Haus upset Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. 15-5, Hartz surprised Wagon Wheel 7-2, Tony Dorn, Inc. handled Arnold Realty 18-8, Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. stunned the Rusty Nail Raiders 9-0, TRF Merchants beat Hartz 19-4, Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. got by Hobo Haus 6-2, Rusty Nail Raiders eliminated Wagon Wheel 7-2 and Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. ousted Arnold Realty 13-4.

The second set of games last Wednesday saw Tony Dorn, Inc. edge Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. 5-4, Rusty Nail Raiders sidelined Hartz 16-6, Hobo Haus forced Swenson Plumbing & Heating, Inc. to the sidelines 6-2, TRF Merchants tagged Tony Dorn, Inc. 14-4 and the Rusty Nail Raiders booted out Hobo Haus 16-0.

Division II

Tonight (Wednesday) could mark the end of the Division II playoffs as unbeaten First Federal Savings & Loan Association awaits a 7:40 p.m. game against either Home Lumber or the St. Hilaire Bears, a pair of once-beaten teams who will meet at 6:20 for a right to challenge the regular season Division II champion First Federal Savings & Loan Association squad.

A First Federal Savings & Loan Association loss tonight would necessitate a championship rematch Thursday or Friday.

Division II playoffs began last Tuesday when Bridgeman's edged Popplers-Action Realty 9-7, The Get-A-Way got by Hamms-Pizza Hut 13-12, Home Lumber upset the St. Hilaire Bears 10-3, First Federal Savings & Loan Association out-scored Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 13-11, the St. Hilaire Bears eliminated Hamms-Pizza Hut 7-6, Popplers-Action Realty sidelined Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 16-13, Home Lumber knocked off The Get-A-Way 15-8 and First Federal Savings & Loan Association shaded Bridgeman's 5-4.

On Thursday, the St. Hilaire Bears ousted Bridgeman's 3-1 and First Federal Savings & Loan Association reached the finals by beating Home Lumber 4-1.

Two more contenders were eliminated Monday as the Get-A-Way sidelined Popplers-Action Realty 8-3 but then picked up its second loss at the hands of the St. Hilaire Bears, 5-3.

Division III

Four once-beaten challengers will go at it tonight (Wednesday) for a shot at unbeaten Consumer's Co-op Thursday in the Division III playoffs.

A suspended game involving Schumacher's Tireland and First Northwestern Insurance Agency, called after four innings Monday, will kick off tonight's matches at 6:15 p.m. That winner will immediately take on Great Northwest Agency, Inc., with that winner, in turn, facing Phase II.

Division III playoff games started a week ago when Great Northwest Agency, Inc. dumped Arctic IWA 10-2, Consumer's Co-op handled The Club 12-3 and Phase II stopped First Northwestern Insurance Agency 11-3.

On Monday, Great Northwest Agency, Inc. surprised regular season Division III champion Schumacher's Tireland 19-11, Consumer's Co-op doubled Phase II 12-6, Arctic IWA eliminated The Club 11-8, Consumer's Co-op drilled Great Northwest Agency, Inc. 14-4 and Phase II sidelined Arctic IWA 11-10.

Class B Fast Pitch Softball Tournament . . .

North Star Transport Is Champion In District 7

North Star Transport of Thief River Falls and Daggett Trucking of Frazee earned state tournament berths by reaching the finals of the District 7 Class B men's fast pitch softball tournament played in Thief River Falls during the weekend.

Battling back through the loser's bracket, North Star Transport won the District 7 crown with 4-0 and 1-0 wins over Daggett, Trucking in Sunday's finals. Both teams will compete in the Class B state tournament Friday, Saturday and Sunday in Hutchinson.

Daggett Trucking edged North Star Transport 1-0 in an earlier Sunday morning game, sending the Thief River Falls ball club into the loser's bracket of the double elimination tournament. North Star Transport then eliminated Kruger Excavating of Callaway 9-1 to earn another shot at Daggett Trucking in the finals.

When North Star Transport beat Daggett Trucking 4-0 in the first of the two-game championship finals, it's the first runs Frazee pitcher Dave Ferguson, who handled all the mound chores for his club, gave up during the 11-team tournament. He threw a one-hitter in a 5-0 blanking of Thief River Falls' Radio Shack squad.

Tom Neubauer beat Ferguson in the first title confrontation and Marty Brown of Baudette tossed a no-hitter in the finale.

Bruce Johnson, a pick-up player from non-competing Dallmann Athletic, Inc. of Thief River Falls, proved to be an excellent addition for North Star Transport as he went 3-for-3 in the 4-0 win over Daggett Trucking and then drove in the only run with a double in the 1-0 final game victory.

In District 7 Class A tournament play at the same time in Duluth, Coca-Cola-Action Realty of Thief River Falls beat Colonial Inn 1-0 but lost to Wrenshaw 9-1 to bow out of state tournament contention. Slapped with a penalty by state officials for using in ineligible player in an invitational tournament earlier this year, Coca-Cola-Action Realty began the double elimination tournament with one loss.

Antlerless Deer Permit Forms Will Be Available August 15

Deer hunting regulations and antlerless permit applications will be available from county auditors and license agents starting Aug. 15, the Department of Natural Resources reported.

Roger Holmes, chief of the DNR's wildlife section, said applications for antlerless permits must be postmarked or hand-delivered to the DNR License Center, St. Paul no later than Sept. 14, but he asked hunters to send their applications in earlier "to avoid extra costs and delays resulting from a huge last day rush."

There will be five firearm deer hunting zones this season. Each of the zones contains a number of areas where antlerless deer may be taken by special permit. Hunters who do not apply for a permit or fail to have their name selected in the computerized drawing will be limited to taking a buck deer having at least one antler not less than three inches long.

Holmes urged hunters to read the regulations carefully before submitting their applications for an antlerless deer permit.

"Failure to comply with the instructions will make an application invalid," he said, "and it will be rejected from the drawing. Only one application per hunter may be submitted".

Holmes said the DNR has again made a special effort to produce a copy, or folder, of the deer hunting regulations that will be easy to understand.

Because of the extra cost and the limited number of copies that can be produced, he asked hunters who pick up a copy of the regulations in order to apply for an antlerless permit to save the folder for use during the season, instead of discarding it and trying to obtain another copy when they buy their license.

Hunters will not be required to buy a deer license before submitting an antlerless permit application. Holmes said this will allow those who do not receive a permit in the drawing an opportunity to select their hunting zone and hunting dates knowing they will be restricted to hunting bucks only

Ground Water Maps Offered By DNR Dept.

DNR division of waters has published the first two of a series of ground-water data maps to assist scientists, farmers, engineers and planning resources agencies in evaluating Minnesota's ground-water resource.

Map H-1, aquifer test locations, lists the locations of 191 aquifer tests which have been conducted statewide and analyzed by the DNR. These tests are used to determine the hydraulic properities of water-bearing rocks.

Map H-2, location of ground-water observation wells, shows the location of known observation wells used to monitor water-level changes in specific aquifers caused by either natural conditions (rain, drought) or by increased pumpage.

Copies of these maps and specific information about aquifer tests or water-level changes can be obtained from the DNR Division of Waters, Ground-Water Group, 444 Lafayette Rd., St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Results from properly conducted aquifer tests can be used in many ways. Well information determined from an aquifer test include the expected maximum yield, its efficiency potential, observed drawdown (for setting bowls of a turbine pump at proper depth), specific capacity of wells of different diameters, and predictions of the behavior of a well at some time in the future under a given set of conditions.

Aquifer properties derived from an aquifer test include the determination of coefficient of storage (S) and tranmissivity (T) and permeability, measured and expected interference caused by pumping, area of influence created by cone of depression surrounding a pumping well, aquifer recharge characteristics, aquifer boundary conditions, and expected yield of an aquifer under given drawdown conditions and after given time periods.

Women's Softball League Ends 1979 Season Tonight

Regular season play comes to an end tonight (Wednesday) in the Thief River Falls women's slow pitch softball league. However, already-crowned pennant winner Red Lake Falls completed its 22-game slate Monday with a doubleheader sweep over First Federal Savings & Loan Association 3-2 and Ekeren Drug 9-0.

Second place is still up for grabs tonight for either the St. Hilaire Saints (17-3) or Pizza Hut (16-4), with both teams facing season-ending doubleheader assignments.

St Hilaire Saints moved ahead of Pizza Hut in the struggle for second place last Wednesday with a 9-7 eight-inning victory in a head-to-head confrontation between the two. Lynette Huot homered for the winners that night.

Red Lake Falls' unbeaten status (an earlier tie actually counted as a half game won and a half game loss for the leaders) ended August 6 when Roseau Transport built a 4-0 lead then got out of a one-out, bases-loaded situation in the bottom of the seventh to protect a 4-3 lead.

However, Pizza Hut, in second place at that time, failed to cash in on the opportunity to catch Red Lake Falls, losing a 6-0 decision when the two league leaders met later that same night.

The 16-team league will complete its 1979 season with a post-season playoff tournament Sunday.

Hunting, Fishing Licenses Increase

People who hunted and fished last year spent a record $344 million on licenses, tags, permits and stamps, Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus reported.

"Total income from license sales of all kinds was $15 million over fiscal year 1977 totals, and included $159 million for fishing licenses (up $3 million over 1977; and $185 million for hunting licenses (up $12 million over 1977)," Andrus said.

"The revenues derived from these license sales enable states to conduct their fish and wildlife conservation and management programs," the secretary added. "Additional funds come from federal aid in fish and wildlife restoration programs, under which states are reimbursed up to 75 per cent of the cost of approved projects." For the current fiscal year, which ends September 30, 1979, $109.3 million was apportioned in federal aid funds for fish and wildlife conservation.

Total number of hunting license holders in the United States was 16,277,225, up slightly from 16,197,015 in 1977. Fishing license holders declined from 27,324,296 in 1977 to 26,150,352 in 1978. Fish and Wildlife Service officials said that fluctuations in the number of hunting and fishing license holders are not unusual and may be related to weather conditions, changes in counting procedures and a vareity of other causes.

Number of license sales and license holders are not accurate indicators of the actual numbers of hunters and fishermen. Paid license holders do not include hunters or fishermen who are not required to buy a license. In many states, persons below or above certain ages are not required to buy licenses, and many coastal states do not require licenses for saltwater fishing. Some people purchase licenses in more than one state and are therefore counted fore than once.

State fish and wildlife agencies certify the numbers of paid hunting and fishing license holders to the fish and wildlife service, which uses these data in determining federal aid apportionments to each state.

Pennsylvania led the states with 1,286,248 paid license holders, 1,899,007 resident hunting licenses, tags, permits and stamps and 2,000,975 total hunting licenses, tags, permits and stamps. Montana was the leader with 128,370 non-resident licenses, tags, permits and stamps.

Minnesota figures includes 482,735 paid hunting license holders, 803,081 resident hunting licenses, tags, permits and stamps, 7,900 non-resident licenses, tags, permits and stamps and 810,981 total hunting licenses, tags, permits and stamps that represented 16,603,363 gross cost to hunters.

California led the states with 2,191,660 paid fishing license holders, 5,428,824 resident fishing licenses, tags, permits and stamps and 5,482,789 total fishing licenses, tags, permits and stamps. Michigan was the leader with 322,317 nonpresident fish licenses, tags, permits and stamps.

Minnesota figures include 1,339,098 paid fishing license holders, 741,216 resident fishing licenses, tags, permits and stamps, 298,971 non-resident fish licenses, tags, permits and stamps and 1,040,187 total fishing licenses, tags, permits and stamps that represented $8,238,752 gross cost to fishermen.

Take Vacation And Save Gas, Club Suggests

Many families are unnecessarily postponing and even cancelling their vacations this year because of gas prices and availability problems. According to a major insurance company's motor club, if your car is properly maintained and you adhere to the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit, you probably still can take that trip you have been planning and conserve gasoline and save money at the same time.

The motor club offers the following advice:

—Keep your car well-maintained. Your car is most fuel-efficient when it's properly tuned-up. Deficiencies such as fouled spark plugs, improper ignition timing and clogged oil and air filters contribute significantly to reduced fuel mileage.

—Gauge your tires. Tires should be pressure-checked frequently to be sure they are inflated to the pressure recommended in the owner's manual. Under-inflated tires have higher rolling resistence which forces the engine to work harder and to use more gasoline. Carry your own air gauge; those on service station air pumps seldom are accurate.

—Limit the use of your air conditioner. Air conditioners force your car's engine to eat up extra fuel. Open windows and use your car's ventilation system instead whenever possible.

—Pack only essentials. Excess weight in the car also contributes to low mileage. Be sure to take along only those things necessary to your trip.

—Conserve with good driving habits. It's a fact that a well-maintained car will improve gasoline mileage. However, your driving habits are probably the most important factor of all. Try to accelerate at an even pace and drive at moderate speeds. Quick starts and frequent or rapid stops will cost you fuel. With every pump of the accelerator, an extra spurt of gas is forced through the carburetor.

—Drive at 55. Driving at speeds over 55 miles-per-hour substantially reduces fuel economy. Observe the 55 mile-an-hour speed limit. It not only reduces the amount of gas you consume, but it saves you money as well. The motor club reminds drivers that cars get approximately 20 per cent better mileage by driving at 50 miles-per-hour than they do at 70 miles-per-hour.

—Call ahead to make sure there's gas available. While fuel supplies are now adequate in most areas, if you think gas availability may be a problem, you can call toll-free directory assistance, 800-555-1212, and ask for the toll-free number for gas availability information in the area you are planning to visit. For those states without toll-free numbers, call directory assistance in the area you are planning to visit. They may be able to give you a gasoline availability "hot-line" number. Some hotel chains also have fuel availability information.

Bill Would Aid Handicapped In Accepting Jobs

What would the expected decision be if a person was asked to choose between receiving necessary benefits from the government or losing that vital income in order to take a low-paying job?

"Many severely handicapped citizens are faced with the reality of that cruel decision," says Senator Dave Durenberger. "Their special needs often require financial assistance through social security. Yet, rather than encouraging job training, rehabilitation and financial independence, social security restrictions keep a stranglehold on the ability of these citizens to find and maintain meaningful employment."

Senator Durenberger called for "immediate reform to this ridiculous and wasteful system" and said he is introducing a bill to help handicapped people find jobs without jeopardizing their necessary benefits.

Durenberger's bill will change social security provisions that cause a handicapped person to lose all benefits if his or her monthly income exceeds $280 and will make it easier for handicapped citizens to learn a trade.

"Innovative corporations throughout the country have tried to provide meaningful jobs for the handicapped. Too often, both the employer and the handicapped employee are frustrated by social security regulations," Durenberger said.

Durenberger's bill would authorize the social security commissioner to develop and implement demonstration projects that enable the handicapped to work. It provides that extraordinary expenses needed to permit a severely disabled person to return to work would not be counted against the amount of earnings ($280 per month) that cause a person to lose benefits; and, it extends from nine to 12 months the on-the-job trial period during which a handicapped person does not lose benefits.

The bill also protects benefits for disabled widows and widowers who seek employment and makes it easier for medicare beneficiaries to regain their benefits if he or she has been terminated from employment or must return to the disability roles for another reason.

To Give Report On Industrial Revenue Bonds

State auditor Arne Carlson has indicated that the office of the state auditor will be preparing by January of 1980 a comprehensive report for the governor and the state legislature on industrial revenue bonds.

Carlson noted that the state authorized $3,175,000 in 1970 and that this amount had grown to an annual authorization of $555,202,000 by 1978.

"Using 1971 as a base, this represents a 58.5 per cent compounded rate of growth," Carlson said. "Already in the first six months of 1979, $340,000,000 of industrial revenue bonds have been authorized."

Carlson declared that "there are two separate concerns that will be dealt with in the report. The first is that there are no mechanisms for collecting data from local units of government relative to what was actually issued and outstanding as opposed to what was authorized. It seems to be the assumption that this information is currently availble somewhere in state government but this is not the case.

"Through the municiapl reporting unit of the office of the state auditor, we will be collecting data to keep the legislature, governor and public posted on the volume of revenue bonds.

"The second concern is over the application of industrial revenue bonds. It is my hope that the Legislature and the governor will review this problem in terms of both application as well as volume. This type of activity is something that the public is going to have to monitor much more closely in the years ahead," Carlson said.

PUBLIC RELEASE

The Plummer School today announced its policy for free and reduced price meals, free milk for children served under the National School Lunch, School Breakfast, and Special Milk Programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size income criteria for determining eligibility:

Family Size	Eligibility Scale for Free Meals and Free Milk (Dollars)	Eligibility Scale for Reduced Price Meals (Dollars)
1	$4,590	$7,160
2	6,040	9,420
3	7,490	11,680
4	8,940	13,940
5	10,390	16,200
6	11,840	18,470
7	13,290	20,730
8	14,740	22,990
Each Additional Family Member	1,450	2,260

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals or free milk. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. A simple statement of income and family size is required, plus a signed certification by the patent or guardian that the information provided is correct.

In certain cases foster childern are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, it should contact the school.

Under the provisions of othe policy, Mrs. Kay Fleegel, Food Supervisor, will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may wish to discuss the decision with the determining official on an informal basis.

If a parent wishes to make a formal appeal, a request may be made either orally or in writing to Dr. Milton Hoff, Franklin Middle School Principal, (218) 681-2700, extension 266, for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, or for additional benefits such as free meals and milk if the family income falls to or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color or national origin.

Each school and the office of the Superintendent of the Thief River Falls Public Schools has a copy of the complete policy, which may by reviewed by any interested party.

S/William Corliss, Superintendent, 8/2/79

RENTAL HOUSING SURVEY for the city of Thief River Falls has been underway throughout the summer months with two Northland community college students hired to go door-to-door and inspect rental units, recording their findings on a survey form. The information is now being fed into a computer at Northland in preparation for analysis by city personnel. One of the student workers, Marilyn Anderson, is pictured here at the computer keyboard. Final report from the survey is expected to be available in September. In the meantime the city will develop specific questions it would like to use the computer data to answer, such as what is the percentage of senior citizens living in rentals, what is the average rent paid, what percentage of renters support an annual inspection of rentals, etc. Renters who the survey team were not able to contact in call back efforts will also be encouraged to volunteer the information needed about their unit or arrange a time for inspection. To date, approximately three-fourths of the housing units in Thief River Falls have been surveyed.

These individuals will join a 16-member board of directors composed of representatives from Manitoba, Canada, Minnesota, and the Dakotas. The Red River Valley historical society is an umbrella organization of heritage groups serving the entire Red River Valley. A principal program of the society is the development of a network of interpretive centers throughout the Red River Valley with "anchor" centers in Moorhead and Winnipeg, Manitoba.

The 1979-80 officers for the society will be elected at the September board meeting scheduled in Winnipeg.

A butterfly is a fragile thing, so light that it doesn't even ruffle the petals of a flower when it alights. Its life span is short, but its beauty is total. And, butterflies have memories or, at least, such strong instincts that, for example, thousands of Monarchs make an annual pilgrimage back to a single bush on the Monterey Peninsula in California.

What makes these insects continue their strange safaris year after year, through generation after generation of their kind? Scientists discover the answers to some of the endless questions life poses, but we can never know it all. We were never meant to know it all. That's where faith comes in; faith in God, His works, His creatures.

If you've been wondering just what life is all about, why not turn to the Church? It's the first step toward finding out.

Washington Report

Sen. Dave Durenberger

Shouldn't the most energy-efficient form of transportation play an important role in our policies for the 1980's? The obvious answer is an emphatic "Yes!" Unfortunately, the obvious isn't always the basis for decisions made in Washington.

Recently, Congress voted to cut Amtrak passenger rail service by almost one-fifth. Congress and the Carter Administration, which promoted an even more massive cut in rail service, ignored the fact that people are flocking back to trains as practical alternatives to gas guzzling automobiles.

The slash in funding for Amtrak threatens two Minnesota lines, even though those lines have had two of the highest ridership increases in the country. According to the preliminary table of cutbacks, the North Coast Hiawatha, Minnesota's rail link to Chicago and the northwestern United States, will be eliminated. The Empire Builder, which runs through Willmar, Morris and Breckenridge, will be reduced to three times per week.

Service on these lines isn't lost yet. In fact, I'm committed to protecting the Empire Builder and the Hiawatha either in the House-Senate conference committee or on an administrative level. These lines provide vital service to Minnesota passengers and shouldn't be victims of the political deals that marked the Senate debate on Amtrak funding.

The Hiawatha, for example, was 96 per cent sold out between July 22 and Aug. 4 and, at the time of the Senate vote on its fate, had a six-week advance sale of 88 per cent of capacity. The Empire Builder, during the last period for which figures are available, registered a 25 per cent ridership increase over last year.

Still in a climate of behind-the-scenes horse-trading on the floor of the Senate, rail lines were auctioned off for political advantage and parochial interests. Less successful Amtrak lines were saved in exchange for the votes the administration badly needed to approve the cutbacks it had proposed.

No one can reasonably argue that this is the best way to set national policy on passenger rail service. The use of railroads is increasing despite poor service and outdated equipment. A freeze should have been placed on the elimination of any line until government and the public can assess the impact of the energy shortages on ridership.

At the very least, we should save routes on which ridership is on the upswing, rather than trade them for a few votes in the Senate. The lines in Minnesota should be saved, and that will be my goal until every possibility has been exhausted.

A determined effort can pay off when it comes to preserving necessary rail service. A few months ago, the future of the Milwaukee Road in Minnesota was bleak. A reorganization plan for the bankrupt railroad jeopardized its continued service in Minnesota. The loss of this line, which ships coal to Minnesota's utilities and hauls 75 per cent of the farm production from southern Minnesota, would have been disastrous for the state's economy.

The first reorganization plan was changed. Under the revised proposal, service in Minnesota will be saved.

Although there are some technicalities blocking the implementation of this plan, I've introduced a bill in Congress to allow this plan to take effect. In addition to maintaining service in the state, my bill provides a long-term labor protection package for Milwaukee Road employees. Also, the bill will end the taxpayer subsidization of the Milwaukee that is now running in the millions of dollars.

The Milwaukee's future isn't guaranteed. Yet, the outlook today is brighter than it was only a few months ago. The bill is gathering key supporters, including the administration, and Congress has shown signs that it will move rapidly on the measure.

Rail service is vital to Minnesota. Persistence and hard work will be the price we must pay to keep the trains running in Minnesota.

The Occupational Safety and Health Act of 1970 is designed ". . .to assure so far as possible every working man and woman in the Nation safe and healthful working conditions and to preserve our human resources."

News About Pain Relief

By Dr. Arthur S. Freese

YOUR SENSITIVE STOMACH

Your stomach literally never stops moving. It works constantly, maintaining a delicate chemical balance to digest and absorb food. When the stomach's chemical balance is upset in any way, you become uncomfortable.

The three most common stomach problems are gastritis (inflammation of the stomach), heartburn and ulcers.

Gastritis occurs sometimes when you eat very spicy foods. Alcohol or smoking can also cause the irritation and inflammation of gastritis. While the stomach is usually blamed for heartburn, the condition really results when stomach acid flows up into and irritates the esophagus, the tube connecting the mouth to the stomach.

Another serious but relatively common stomach disorder is ulcers, which are raw, open sores in the stomach or intestinal lining.

The root of all three problems is the stomach's production of more than a quart of highly acidic liquid a day—stomach acid. Most of the time this is no problem, but certain factors can combine with stomach acid to create sensitive or upset stomach, and even ulcers.

Importantly, emotional stress and tension can cause heartburn. It's a good idea to try to avoid stressful situations around mealtime. Tension headaches and heartburn often go hand-in-hand.

Additionally, some medicines can irritate the stomache. Aspirin is a source of stomach upset because it can irritate the stomach's delicate lining.

If you are prone to stomache upset, but need medication for headache or other minor pain relief, be sure to read the ingredient list on the label. Many buffered and extra-ingredient medications contain aspirin, even though the product names don't tell you that.

Many doctors recommend acetaminophen (most commonly available as TYLENOL®) for those with stomach sensitivities because it will not upset the stomach. It's equally effective as aspirin and is safe for both children and adults.

Be selfish take care of your future

HARDWOOD IN THE GREAT ROOM

A new direction in home design is heading our way. It's called "The Great Room" and it's a combination of what used to be separate living/dining/family rooms. The great room is all of these. In most new homes, it's a large spacious room somewhere near the kitchen and patio or porch. It can accommodate seating arrangements for both family and company, dining table and chairs, a corner for a play or game area for both children and adults, and a place for the TV and stereo equipment.

In some homes a part of the great room might be sunken to form a conversation pit, or raised for the dining area. Many builders are installing built-in bookshelves and storage space and most have fireplaces. It seems to be one answer to the space inflation problem that has become so prevalent. Housing costs are up and space is shrinking. So get yourself a great room and forget about unnecessary rooms that don't get used much anyway.

The great room doesn't have to be casual either. You can furnish it in any decor you want. Just remember, when you're dealing with large spaces (as many one-room apartment dwellers have discovered) you must make the space fit the activities you want to include in the room. If you do a lot of dinner and food-oriented entertaining, you'll want plenty of space devoted to the dining area, and the type of table and chairs you buy will be of utmost importance. A good hardwood table will be beautiful and easy-to-care for, and it can take lots of punishment from a busy family, too.

If your family likes to sit around and watch TV or listen to music, then perhaps a pit area with modular seating is the answer. If you're game-oriented, a good-sized game table with comfortable chairs is a must. All these can be accommodated in the great room. And if the furniture you buy is hardwood, you'll be a step ahead again. All it ever needs is a semi-annual waxing and a weekly dusting to keep its glow.

Hardwood is beautiful, durable, and fits any decor. You'll never find a natural contributor to your great room like the warmth and beauty of hardwood.

Rocks And Hard Places

Spending several days in the Denver, Colo., area during the annual Times vacation week caused the editor to make several observations about that area:

(1) Mountain air is no cleaner nor purer nor sweeter than lowland air; You just have to breathe twice as much of it to get anything out of it. In Denver, you try not to breathe any of it at all.

(2) Nobody was ever born in Colorado. Everyone who now calls the state his or her home is either living there long enough to earn some money to move somewhere else or has moved there from somewhere else to try and earn enough money to go home. In either case, they are staying because they can't earn enough money to move.

(3) Colorado is highly tourist oriented, as evidenced by its six per cent sales tax on all items of merchandise, including necessities. If forestry keeps Colorado slopes green, tourists keep Colorado's treasury green.

(4) Rocks in Colorado look like rocks anywhere else, they are just stacked in more inaccessible places.

(5) While Minnesotans are bulldozing popple trees into unsightly piles to create farmland of questionable reproductive value, Coloradans cut aspen into chunks, slabs or slices, fill them with wax or cover them with epoxy and sell them for exorbitant prices.

(6) If Colorado was somehow squashed flat it would spread out bigger than Texas; but probably wouldn't have any more vegetation.

(7) If all the condominiums being built were occupied, the state would double its population and ski slopes would be forced to go to odd-even systems like west coast service stations.

If these sound like biased observations, they are. It was fun to see mountains again and to experience a different way of life. But it is better to be back in Minnesota and especially northern Minnesota. Colorado, despite the laudatory expressions of Coloradans, is a good place to be from.

What's In A Name?

Most people of good conscience take their name seriously and seek to protect it as much as possible. Only someone without conscience would use someone else's name in a careless or abusive manner.

It was apparently someone without conscience who sent us a public opinion letter right before we closed our shop for the vacation week of August 5-12. The letter was critical of farmers' complaints about the grain handlers' strike in Duluth in the wake of the farm strike of last winter. The name signed to the letter was that of Gordon Peterson, Northwestern Trailer court. The letter was published in the August 6 issue.

Peterson contacted the Times on the first day of our return to work August 13 with the complaint that he did not write the letter. He had received several phone calls from unhappy farmers, he said, and didn't appreciate having his name used in that fashion. We certainly understand his reaction and are sorry we were made a part of what we choose to believe was someone's simple-minded practical joke.

Some years ago a similar act was perpetrated through our paper, when a letter to the editor was signed with another person's name. For several years we verified the writer of any public opinion letter we received. In some cases it required no little effort to contact the writer. Sometimes a letter writer objected to having us doubt his or her signature, but no further problem of false use of an actual person's name was encountered.

It now appears that the time has again come for us to adopt a similar practice. Low brow attempts at humor which involve innocent parties are not to be condoned and we want no part of them. We will once again have to verify the writers of letters intended for publication before the letters go into print.

We certainly encourage letters to the editor and the presentation of public opinion. We would like to make it as easy as possible for people to take advantage of the opportunity to publicly express their views. Those who abuse the privilege, however, must not be allowed to continue such abuse.

We must now ask that writers of public opinion letters either bring them to the office in person with proper identification (if the writers are unknown to the editor or staff members) or provide a telephone number with a hand-written signature on letters submitted by mail. While we recognize this is an added inconvenience, we also believe that protection of a person's name is especially important. It is our hope that writers of letters intended for publication recognize that our efforts are in their behalf and are in no way intended to restrict the otherwise free presentation of public opinion.

Part Of The Solution

Following editorial is from the Detroit Lakes Tribune:

Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland certainly came out well in the major shake-up of President Carter's cabinet recently.

It was not always so; the Secretary of Agriculture historically has found himself a sort of whipping boy for the administration.

From the time the head of the Agriculture Department became a cabinet member in 1889, controversy usually has been a major part of the job.

In more recent years, from the first Henry (C.) Wallace in the early Twenties, through his son Henry (A) in the Thirties, Agriculture secretaries have had abuse heaped upon them.

A peaceful, productive period saw Secretaries Clinton P. Anderson and Charles F. Brannan slide through their years in office without making many waves, but that ended when Ezra Taft Benson took over as President Eisenhower's Secretary of Agriculture. He was reviled from East to West Coasts, and from Canada to Mexico.

Orville Freeman, another Minnesotan, fared somewhat better in the Sixties, but faced his share of criticism; the short reign of Clifford Hardin was a quiet one — sort of the lull before the storm.

Earl Butz ended the quiet, not necessarily in the right way. It's hard to judge his direction and accomplishments, since they were completely over-shadowed by his foot in mouth troubles.

Through the years, if an agricultural policy was successful, the administration was quick to grab the credit. And if a policy backfired, the Secretary got the blame.

Now Secretary Bergland seems to have stalled that trend. Not to say that farmers are all happy about federal farm policies. But Bergland has shown that he probably has a better grasp of the farm situation in this country than any of the farmers.

In a recent interview, he outlined his thinking on the subject, and it makes interesting reading. Here, in part, is what he had to say:

". . .For some time now, I've had the feeling that there were a lot of people out there who were worrying about the same things that worry me. They're concerned about the drop in number of farms and what that means to the economy and the social values of the rural community.

"They're worried about the growth of big farms and the concentration of ownership. They're upset because 40 per cent of all farmland is farmed by someone other than the owner, because young people who want to farm can't afford to buy their own land, because smaller operators have a tough time breaking into marketing arrangements that cater to the bigger farmers.

"They're wondering how net farm income could go up 40 per cent last year yet produce a bumper crop of unhappy farmers on the Washington Mall. Most of all, they're questioning how public policy that was supposed to help efficient operators of smaller family farms hang in there and make a living — and I'm talking about everything from commodity programs to tax laws — seems to be having the opposite effect.

"The people who share these concerns with me seem to agree that it is time we took a hard look at the structure of today's agriculture and the direction it seems to be taking, and then make some decisions on what ought to be done about it, if there's anything that can — or should — be done."

Bergland gave himself an 18 month period to get the research together to come up with a farm program to replace the present one which expires in 1981, and he seems to be on the right track.

Unlike some of his predecessors, he may be part of the solution rather than part of the problem.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Test marketing is now being done of a new deodorant product called "Invisible". The smell is unchanged but nobody knows where its coming from.

Two residents of a home for the aged were discussing their ailments. "It really proves one thing, Hilda," one finally emphasized, "old age sure ain't for sissies."

The Public — Real Victims of the Cabinet Massacre

White House spokesmen now tell us that criticism of Carter's midsummer massacre of his cabinet is a case of hysteria among the Washington establishment. Folks west of the Potomac see the move as a wise administrative procedure and a bold stroke of leadership, says the White House.

I totally disagree with this Rose Garden analysis. Hardly an entrenched member of the establishment here, I view Carter's actions as of serious concern to all Americans. The next few months will prove, I'm afraid that his moves of last week were the final blow to his administration's effectiveness.

Carter's rhetoric regarding the firings sounds reasonable on the surface. As a matter of reality, however, the massacre was a very, very bad management procedure.

I shudder to think what would happen to any business, including my own, should blanket resignations be requested of all top level management. The demoralizing and debilitating effects would take months to pass away, if ever.

Equally, if not more demoralizing is the message delivered by the firings to those who remain: If you don't agree, get out.

Certainly, any leader must be able to expect public agreement by his staff with his policies. However, Carter has gone beyond this principle.

Those eliminated from the Cabinet were not people widely or publicly perceived as vocally or actively disloyal to Carter and his policies. Rather, the reason for their firings was that they refused to be "yes" men behind the scenes, when policies were being formulated. They insisted on telling the President — and his White House enclave — unpleasant, but necessary truths.

This aspect is especially disturbing, for these unpleasant truths are essential if any program is ever to succeed. Anyone who has ever attempted to lead anything knows he is doomed if, ostrich-like, he buries his head and listens only to kind words from sycophants who measure their words by how much favor they will curry.

Finally, we must consider what will happen in the months ahead within those departments whose heads resigned or were fired or shifted. One-half of our Cabinet departments, six out of 12, were involved in the massacre. Within these departments, not just the job of one person at the top, but the employment of hundreds of second-level people is at stake.

Except for the most routine matters of business, all work within these six departments — Transportation, Energy, HEW, HUD, Treasury and Justice — will effectively cease for some time. New heads will be busy building their own staffs. Personnel matters will occupy these bureaucracies for months.

Further, any problem-solving projects underway by the old staffs will now be scratched or returned to the drawing board. Months will pass while all ideas are re-evaluated by the new people. Obviously, none of the new staffs will feel comfortable supporting a program designed by a staff that received the ax.

At a time when Carter's government was already perceived as lacking in leadership and direction, this new spell of ineffectiveness can hardly benefit the American people.

No doubt the firings will have negative political results for the President. However, this is not the type of partisan advantage that I would seek to have.

For, the victims of an ineffective administration, of a leader who's hurt his ability to lead are, of course, the American people.

UNDERGROUND BUILDINGS are proving to be more energy efficient than the conventional structures, according to University of Minnesota research. More than 95 per cent of the new civil and mineral engineering building at the University of Minnesota will be underground. Diagram above shows an end view of that building.

Underground Buildings Most Energy Efficient

by Paul Schurke
'U' M News Service

Ask engineering faculty at the University of Minnesota what's up these days, and they'll correct you — it's what's down that matters, they say.

As conservation efforts turn toward heating and cooling, which consume annually as much fuel as transportation, that includes an increasing number of earth-sheltered buildings.

Faculty and students of the department of civil and mineral engineering on the Twin Cities campus are on the cutting edge of a nationwide move to plug more new structures into the earth's protective crust. They have established the Underground Space Center, a national focal point for underground research and information exchange. They are monitoring seven earth-sheltered homes in the first large scale test of such housing. And, with the mechanical engineering department, they are monitoring Williamson Hall, the University's award-winning underground building, which in its first year has shown energy savings of up to 65 per cent over conventional buildings.

The department's members are enthusiastic about these developments, but they are most excited about the design proposals for their own new home. Backed by a $15.8 million appropriation from an equally enthusiastic legislature, construction is soon to begin on a 150,000 square foot underground building. A national demonstration project, the building is to tap the sun for heat and light and store Minnesota's frigid winter cold for summer cooling.

The primary objective is to replace the department's 1912-vintage facilities (deemed a "disaster" by a national accrediting body) with adequate research and teaching facilities. But with the unique structure, designed by Myers and Bennett Associates and described in the department's current newsletter, they also hope to demonstrate that an earth-sheltered building can achieve maximum energy conservation and still be functional and attractive.

Unlike Williamson Hall, which was plugged into the ground primarily to preserve the view and open mall space, the civil and mineral engineering building seeks foremost the temperature-moderating qualities of the earth, said department head Charles Fairhurst. At moderate depths — say 40 feet — the temperature is constant the year around, requiring only a small amount of energy to maintain comfort levels.

The building is to be 95 per cent underground, but the completed site won't be a grassy mall interrupted only by occasional vent pipes. On the west end an atrium will protrude with skylights and the solar heat and light collection systems. A descending courtyard in the east end will lead to the entrance.

"We try to avoid a vertical approach," architect David Bennett said. "If you enter through a sunken courtyard or a gently sloping ramp the feeling of going underground is eliminated."

Solar heat will be gathered both passively, through design features, and actively, through mechanical systems. Design features include double paned, southern exposure windows that may be covered by rolling shutters to reduce heat loss at night. In addition, vines will be grown over the windows, reducing interior heat during the summer yet allowing the full strength of the sun to enter during the winter when the vines shed their leaves.

The active solar collection system involves mirrors that will focus sunlight on receiving pipes to heat an antifreeze solution. Pumps will direct the hot solution to storage tanks for circulation through the building during cold weather.

Though solar collection is commonly coupled with earth sheltering to provide heat, according to Tom Bligh, a former University mechanical engineering professor, "solar collectors are usually the most expensive energy component in a building like this, and they generally aren't used efficiently. Even though they are used during the summer for air conditioning, they aren't used during the spring and fall."

To improve the economics of solar collection, Bligh has designed an integrated system that combines solar heat collection with a steam-powered electrical generator and an ice air conditioning system.

Solar-heated water will power the generator, which, though expensive, can greatly increase the energy output from the collectors. "Another advantage of the system," said Ray Sterling, director of the Underground Space Center, "is that it will be generating most of the electrical energy when electricity demands are the highest — in the middle of the summer."

The ice air conditioner borrows from the design of the icebox. Copper coils on the solar collectors will gather the winter's frigid cold to form a huge block of ice in an insulated underground tank. Another system will circulate the chilled solution through the building during the summer. "Essentially you get all your cooling for free," Bligh said. He added, though, that backup cooling — and heating — systems will be provided.

To ensure that working areas feel comfortable and unconfined, efforts are being made to bring the outside in. Sunlight will directly pentrate about half of the rooms on the building's four floors from banks of windows along the courtyards. Other rooms will open into the center atrium. And sunlight may be piped into some of the remote interior areas through an experimental optics system of mirrors and prisms. On cloudy days and at night, photoelectric sensors would activate a single powerful backup source of light that would be channeled through the same distribution system.

In a smaller scale experiment, a view of the outdoors may also be piped in. Using remote view optics — a new twist on the design of the periscope — an image from the outside can be transmitted to interior areas. If this sounds a bit much, rest assured that the designers also have reservations about it. "We don't know if it will work — if it will establish a sense of connection to the outdoors or if it will be perceived as just a trick of technology," Bennett said.

Some facilities that don't need direct contact with the outdoors — those for storage, movies, and lectures — May be tunneled into the sandstone bedrock 90 feet down in an extension of an earlier departmental research project.

A 50-by-100-foot underground test room gouged out of the sandstone by department researchers in 1974 has shown that the area's subterranean depths offer an economical alternative for urban space. What's to be gained? A found- and vibration-proof environment of constant and moderate temperature and humidity, and an option to avoid urban sprawl by building down rather than out.

Geologists have found that the Twin Cities area is ideally suited for such construction. The limestone layer underlying much of the area can provide a strong roof for space that can easily be carved out of the soft sandstone below. Researchers hope to demonstrate this by incorporating two floors of deep-mined space in the building.

All of the building's innovative components will be carefully monitored for their utility and cost effectiveness. And, perhaps more importantly, the building's psychological effects will also be monitored. Some people find that underground space feels too confining. But the designers believe objections will dissolve when people experience carefully designed underground working areas. To test this hypothesis, Univeristy psychologists will survey the building's occupants about their attitudes before and after construction.

All this adds up to a building that will be a showcase of technological alternatives in energy conservation. It will save money: although initial costs are expected to be par with those of conventional buildings, operating costs will be greatly slashed. But more importantly, say the designers, it will make a dramatic statement to today's students and tomorrow's decision makers about imaginative approaches to energy and environmental problems.

The rights of workers to their pensions are protected by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA); this law also protects the rights of some widows and widowers to survivors' benefits, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

James Moe Returns

James Moe returned home Saturday evening, August 4, from a trip to the National 4-H Center, Washington D.C., where he attended a citizenship short course. He arrived in our capital city with other 4-H delegates the evening of July 28 and was given a bus tour to see Washington D.C. at night. After having had breakfast Sunday morning at the national 4-H center, where they had lodging accommodations, they left by bus for Gettysburg, where they were interested in "Our Heritage". The next day some of the highlights they enjoyed were the Kennedy center, Arlington cemetery and Washington cathedral. Tuesday they visited the U.S. Departments of State and Agriculture. Here Jim enjoyed personal visits with Arlan Stangeland, Rudy Boschwitz and David Durenberger. Wednesday was Capital Hill day. They visited the Library of Congress with nearly 42,000,000 items including books, manuscripts, maps, historic prints, photographs, etc., the Supreme Court and were fascinated with watching the changing of guards at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National cemetery. Thursday they visited Mt. Vernon and other places of interest. In the evening they watched "Peter Pan" at the Kennedy Center, in which Sandy Duncan starred. Friday Jim visited the Smithsonian Institution and climbed the Washington monument to take a picture of the White House. He visited his uncle, Bud Ginn in the Interstate commerce building, where he is employed and also accompanied him to his home in Great Falls, Va. Before boarding the plane at Dullas airport at 4:15 p.m. Saturday for Minneapolis and Thief River Falls, Jim visited the mall area in front of the White House and reported it was free of any farmer's tractor. This trip was not only a sight seeing event but also an enriching experience due to all the assemblies scheduled for the 4-H delegates. James and the other three 4-H members from Marshall and Pennington counties at the citizenship short course will be interviewed on Sylvia's Coffee Time Tuesday morning, August 21.

Colada Cheesecake

There are many different variations of cheesecake—rich and creamy, light and fluffy, graham cracker crusted, fruit-topped, baked and no-bake.

Here is an unusual, easy-to-make, refrigerator cheesecake that depends on crushed pineapple plus a new coconut rum liqueur called CocoRibe for its wonderful tropical taste. Popular as a base for cooling, colada-style drinks, clear CocoRibe adds bright new appeal to a long list of dessert ideas. Spoon it over sherbet, ice cream or fresh summer fruits, stir it into custard or blend with your favorite ice cream topping.

1-½ cups graham cracker crumbs
¼ cup sugar
½ cup butter or margarine, melted
2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
2/3 cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
3 eggs
1 cup milk
2 packages (8 ounces each) cream cheese, softened at room temperature
2/3 cup CocoRibe coconut rum liqueur
1 can (1 pound 4 ounces) crushed pineapple, drained, reserve 1/3 cup liquid
Toasted coconut (optional)

In medium bowl, combine cracker crumbs, sugar and butter. Press mixture into bottom and sides of buttered 9-inch springform pan. Crumb mixture should come within 1 inch from top of pan. In medium saucepan, combine gelatine, sugar and salt. Beat eggs with milk; blend into gelatine mixture. Stir over low heat until gelatine is completely dissolved, about 5 to 8 minutes. Remove from heat. In a large bowl, beat cream cheese until smooth; gradually beat in liqueur, reserved pineapple liquid and gelatine mixture. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from a spoon. Gently fold in drained pineapple. Pour into prepared pan. Chill 3 to 4 hours or until firm. To serve, remove sides from pan. Garnish with crushed pineapple and toasted coconut, if desired.
YIELD: 12 servings.

Nation's Fuel Bill Could Be Cut in Half Without Seriously Affecting Living Standard

E. Milton Bevington

Although America has an energy problem that isn't going to go away, there are certain steps that can be taken to greatly lessen that problem according to a leading energy expert, who has this hopeful message: The nation's fuel bill can be cut in half by exploiting the most readily available form of "energy—"conservation energy." Furthermore, as conservation techniques are refined, it appears that estimates of possible savings increase.

That's the word from E. Milton Bevington, president of Servidyne, Inc., a leading Atlanta-based energy management service. "Not more than five percent of the companies in the U.S. have a true energy management program in place," says Bevington. "The saving of energy has never been given top priority. The irony is that while oil prices go up and we cast around for alternatives, the most readily available and cheapest alternative is what I call 'conservation energy.' We now have ways to help companies realize immediate energy savings, without big initial outlays for expensive control devices."

Bevington points to Sweden and West Germany as examples of two countries with standards of living roughly equivalent to that of the United States, but where per capita consumption of energy is only one-half America's. "When you look at that comparison, you can see that there's plenty of slack for us to take up here without giving up much of the good life and without going back to the caves. The simple fact is that we Americans are wasting energy needlessly," says Bevington.

Most of the resistance by companies to initiating energy management programs that work is because top management is not getting involved, according to Bevington. "The tendency in lots of organizations is to buck the problem down to a lower level and say you've solved it. The trouble with that is that everybody knows it's not a serious undertaking. Energy management needs the clout that can only be provided by the chief executive officer."

Energy management is still a relatively new discipline, says Bevington, and techniques are constantly being refined. The experience of his own company shows that what were once thought to be ideal energy consumption estimates for a facility have been shown to be too high. "Like the four minute mile, seeming limits to conservation continue to fade. The Roger Bannisters at 3:59.4 on the energy front yield to the John Walkers at 3.49.4, indicating increasing possibilities for energy conservation, even beyond those we have seen."

PUBLIC RELEASE

The Independent School District No. 561 today announced its policy for free and reduced price meals, free milk for children served under the National School Lunch, and Special Milk Programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size income criteria for determining eligibility:

Family Size	Eligibility Scale for Free Meals and Free Milk (Dollars)	Eligibility Scale for Reduced Price Meals (Dollars)
1	$4,590	$7,160
2	6,040	9,420
3	7,490	11,680
4	8,940	13,940
5	10,390	16,200
6	11,840	18,470
7	13,290	20,730
Each Additional Family Member	1,450	2,260

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals or free milk. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs in excess of 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available at the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. A simple statement of income and family size is required, plus a signed certification by the parent or guardian that the information provided is correct.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, it should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy the Superintendent of Schools will review applications and determine eligibility. If a parent is dissatisfied with the ruling of the official, he may wish to discuss the decision with the determining official on an informal basis.

If a parent wishes to make a formal appeal, a request may be made either orally or in writing to J. Duane Nelson, Goodridge, MN 56725 — 218-378-4272 for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, or for additional benefits such as free meals and milk if the family income falls to or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of child feeding programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color or national origin.

Each school and the office of the Superintendent of Schools has a copy of the complete policy, which may be reviewed by any interested party.

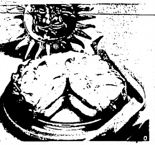
Cool It for Summer!



There couldn't be an easier or more delicious ending for a light summertime luncheon than luscious Raspberry Lemon Meringue Pie. The filling begins with a precooked base of sweetened condensed milk—the wonderful convenience product which thickens instantly when reconstituted lemon juice is added. The jewel-like layer of raspberry preserves adds a delightful surprise, too—and proves that, as far as lemon pies go, there is something new under the sun!

RASPBERRY LEMON MERINGUE PIE

(Makes one 8-inch pie)

- 1 (8-inch) baked pastry shell, cooled
- 2 eggs, separated*
- 1 (14-ounce) can Eagle® Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk (NOT evaporated)
- ½ cup ReaLemon® Reconstituted Lemon Juice
- 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- ⅓ cup red raspberry preserves
- ¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
- ¼ cup sugar

Preheat oven to 350°. In medium bowl, beat egg yolks; stir in sweetened condensed milk, ReaLemon and rind. Turn into shell. Spread preserves on surface to within ½ inch of shell. In small bowl, beat egg whites with cream of tartar until foamy; gradually add sugar, beating until stiff but not dry. Spread meringue on top of pie, sealing carefully to edge of shell. Bake 15 minutes or until meringue is golden brown. Cool. Chill before serving. Refrigerate leftovers.

*Use only Grade A clean, uncracked eggs.

So The Day After Tomorrow Will Be A Little Brighter

IT'LL Never Happen!

In the early 1940's, Minnesota Rural Electric Cooperatives didn't own their own power generators. We had to purchase our electricity from outside sources. That meant that we were nearly 100% dependent on municipal and private power companies to supply rural Minnesota with electricity.

Courtesy of Minnesota Historical Society

By 1964, we had grown substantially. We had 244,000 consumers, over 1,400 employees and generated a portion of our own electricity.

Today we are owners or part owners in more than 20 generating plants with a potential output of over 2,500,000 Kilowatts. By 1983 six more power plants will be added. Six plants may not seem like much, but these generating stations will provide an additional 2,650,000 Kw, more than doubling that capacity to over 5,150,000 Kw. Our dependence on purchasing power from power companies will be drastically reduced — we will be producing almost all our own needs for your future . . . and to make ourselves even more independent, we are studying alternative sources of power like peat and solar energy.

Electricity for your future

Judge Says Cargill Owes 86 Farmers $2.2 Million

Eighty-six northwestern Minnesota area farmers are entitled to $2,200,000 from Cargill, Inc., according to a judgment issued by District Judge Robert Peterson of Crookston recently. The suit against the company stems from the bankruptcy of Warren Grain & Seed company of Warren and was brought by the 86 farmers.

A jury in Marshall county district court had found on May 17 that the elevator was an agent of Cargill, that Cargill was a disclosed principal and that it had paid for all the grain it received from Warren Grain & Seed. The amount owed the farmers was established in July of 1978 in a trial before District Judge Gordon L. McRae.

Cargill is expected to appeal the judgment.

This Thursday at 3 p.m. a public sale will be held of the 200x50x18 warehouse formerly owned by Lloyd and Gary Hill, owners of Warren Grain & Seed company, north of Warren. The sale will be held at the courthouse in Warren to enforce the rights of State Bank of Warren, which has secured a judgment against the Hills to satisfy a $236,254 debt sustained by accumulated overdrafts.

Other suits are still pending by two individual farmers, by Cargill against Warren Grain & Seed and Warren Grain & Seed against Cargill. Gary Hill is serving a five-year sentence at Stillwater state prison for tax fraud and falsifying corporate records. His father, Lloyd, had his sentence deferred and was ordered to perform one year of public service where he lives in Arizona.

Safety Council Discusses City Traffic Problem

Traffic safety in several key areas of Thief River Falls was the primary topic of discussion at the August meeting of the Pennington County safety council.

Inadequate lighting on highway 59 as it extends south from First street to the Country Kitchen was acknowledged as a problem that should be considered in conjunction with alternate methods of improving traffic flow in this same area.

It was noted that the city council had recently requested the city engineer to coordinate with the resident department of transportation engineer in examining the possibility of frontage roads and-or additional traffic lanes for highway 59 south. Until the results of the study are available, no conclusions can be reached regarding the appropriate lighting scheme.

In other action, it was noted that the intersection of Tindolph avenue and Greenwood street continues to have a high accident rate. In view of this fact, the safety council will recommend that the city council consider the placement of stop signs on Tindolph at Greenwood.

In discussing the upcoming kick-off of the pedestrian safety program, the work done by the explorer scouts specializing in law enforcement was evaluated. Through their efforts, video taped situations depicting proper and improper pedestrian and vehicular movements was presented at the safety council booth at the recent Pennington county fair. It was felt that future efforts utilizing the video tape could be used to advantage in presentations on pedestrian safety this fall.

Charge Doctor At Greenbush On Drug Count

According to an article in the Roseau Times-Region last Thursday, Dr. Elmer Lawrence Kruger, a Greenbush physician, was charged August 10 on 11 counts of distribution of controlled substances for other than legitimate medical purposes and not in the usual professional practice of medicine.

The alleged illegal distribution was reported by assistant U.S. attorney Ann Montgomery of Minneapolis as having taken place on January 31, February 19 and April 23 of this year. Two of the counts involve narcotic substances and nine involve non-narcotics.

The two counts of distributing narcotic substances could bring sentences of up to 15 years in prison and fines of $25,000 each, according to the Times-Region report. The nine counts of distributing non-narcotic controlled substances could bring sentences of up to five years in prison and fines of $15,000 on each count.

Dr. Kruger had an initial appearance before Judge Edward Devitt in Minneapolis August 13 and was released on $5,000 personal recognizance bond.

To Grind Flour At Old Mill

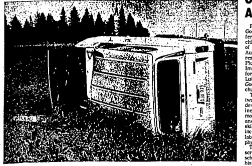
Labor day weekend vacationers will again find the grist mill at Old Mill state park in operation. The 83-year-old flour mill will run from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. on Saturday, September 1 and Monday, September 3.

On Sunday the millstones will be uncovered and separated for cleaning and public inspection. The park is supplying all the grain to be ground and there will be no custom grinding. Souvenir sacks of flour will be on sale at the park.

The mill area has had some changes in the past year and the miller's cabin will also be open to the park visitors.

Paper Drive Set Wednesday

Pre-school paper drive will be held by St. Bernard's school Wednesday of this week beginning at 5 p.m. in Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire. Persons with newspapers to donate to the drive are asked to have them boxed or bundled and placed on the curb by 5 p.m. Wednesday. A semi-trailer truck to haul paper to the mill will be loaded the same evening.



TWO YOUNG PEOPLE from Thief River Falls received only minor injuries when the vehicle in which they were traveling left county road 63 northeast of Thief River Falls and rolled over Sunday. Sue Amundson, 15, was driving the vehicle west on county road 63 just west of the Silverton church when it swerved on the gravel road and went into the north ditch, rolling over completely once and coming to rest on its side on the edge of a field. Miss Amundson received a cut on the wrist and a passenger in the vehicle, Scott Klopp, 16, received a cut on the forehead. Damage was estimated at $2,500 to the International Scout by the Pennington county sheriff's department which investigated the accident.

EARL PETERSON farm home southeast of Thief River Falls off highway 59 is screened by a number of large oak trees. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson are being honored this year as farm beautification winners by the Pennington soil and water conservation district. There are nearly two acres of land which the Peterson family keeps mowed and trimmed around the farm buildings. It takes nearly a day of work to cut the entire area. Gray and red squirrels live among the oak trees and are the beneficiaries of feed put out by the Petersons on an alternating day basis during the winter.

Earl Petersons Earn SCD Farm Beautification Award For 1979

MRS. EARL PETERSON is a gardener and keeps the family table supplied with vegetables from three garden areas. In the above photo she checks an ear of sweet corn in the garden which produces annual crops. Another garden has perennials such as strawberries, asparagus, horseradish, rhubarb and gooseberries. A mini-garden for table use is next to the house.

WHEN HE FINDS TIME, Earl Peterson of rural Thief River Falls enjoys fishing and hunting. Here he arranges his tackle box to get ready for such an outing. Farming 1,000 acres and keeping a large yard neat and trimmed cut into his fishing time but he manages to get in a few days with rod and reel every year.

Constant attention to approximately two acres of farm yard has earned for Mr. and Mrs. Earl Peterson of rural Thief River Falls the title of farm beautification winners for 1979. The award is presented annually by the Pennington soil and water conservation district.

The Petersons farm 1,000 acres of land southeast of Thief River Falls with the farm yard located east of highway 59 about nine and one-half miles from this city. Earl and Naomi's son Stuart, a 1976 graduate of Lincoln high school, is associated with his parents in a farm partnership.

Earl Peterson grew up on a farm two miles west of the present farm and is a lifetime resident of the Wyandotte township area. He and Naomi purchased their present farm from Charlie Samuelson in the mid 1960's and have lived there since a new house was constructed in 1967. A quonset storage building and farm shop were built by the Petersons and Earl spends a good deal of his non-farming time tinkering with shop projects.

In 1961 the Petersons were recipients of the Pennington county soil conservation farmer award also presented by the county soil and water conservation district. They have continued many of the conservation practices for which they received the award that year, although some initial projects such as field drainage and farmstead windbreak planting now require only maintenance.

Earl continues to take soil tests on his fields and apply fertilizer in accordance with the test results. He also employs a crop rotation system and is convinced of the value of summer fallow as well as plow-down of legumes as a soil care program.

Two stock water pits serve his herd of Angus-Hereford cross beef cattle. The Petersons have approximately 40 head of beef cows and market feeder calves at 500 to 550 pounds. There have been no dairy cattle on the Peterson farm since 1951.

Mrs. Peterson is an active gardener, maintaining three garden plots for convenience and utility. One garden is reserved for perennials such as asparagus, strawberries, horseradish, rhubarb and gooseberries. Another is planted to annual vegetables such as corn, carrots, beets, cucumbers, squash, peas and similar items. A mini-garden near the house has radishes, onions, lettuce, tomatoes and other plants for fresh table use.

Much of the garden produce is frozen for use throughout the rest of the year and only a

Area Schools Offer Screening August 28-30

Plummer, Middle River and Goodridge schools are offering screening for all children four years of age as of September 1, 1979, on August 28, 29 and 30, respectively. Location for the Plummer screening is the Immanual Lutheran church; for Middle River, First Lutheran church; and for Goodridge, Faith Lutheran church.

The screening will consist of two parts: educational and developmental screening including testing for fine motor, gross motor, concepts and speech and language skills; and health screening including vision, hearing and lab tests, a dental review and physical assessment.

The purpose of the screening is to provide the school with a complete health history on every child and to identify children who may have health or developmental problems.

Persons who have not received a letter with an appointment for their child are asked to call their school at 465-4222 or 874-8770.

Girl Scout Program Grows Over 67 Years

(Editor's Note: To better acquaint the public with the Girl scout organization, Margo Gustafson of the Pine to Prairie Girl scout council which serves the Thief River Falls community, has prepared the following article on the background of the Girl scout program.)

By Margo Gustafson

Girl scouting was started in 1912 by Juliette Lowe in Savannah, Ga. There were 18 girls in that first troop and now there are 2,511,000 girls in Girl scout troops. One out of every nine girls ages six to 17 in the United States is a registered Girl scout.

Girl scouting is a volunteer organization. There are 573,000 registered adults who work at many different jobs to make scouting possible all over the country. Volunteers are not only troop leaders, but troop committee members, board members, special program consultants, support team members and fund raisers or may assist with other jobs.

One of these adult volunteers is Jane Freeman, wife of Orville Freeman, former Minnesota governor. She was elected the national president of Girl Scouts of the United States of America last October after many years of working in scouting. She will serve a three-year term and for those three years Girl scouting will be her "full time" volunteer job.

Since our beginning in 1912, Girl scouting has been an organization for girls based on a moral ethical code as expressed in the Girl scout promise and law.

The Promise: On my honor, I will try to serve God, my country and mankind and to live by the Girl scout law.

The Law: I will do my best: To be honest, to be fair, to help where I am needed, to be cheerful, to be friendly and considerate, to be a sister to every Girl scout, to respect authority, to use resources wisely, to protect and improve the world around me and to show respect for myself and others through my words and actions.

All girls and adults in Girl scouting say the promise and law and accept its philosophy as a way of life. Through this philosophy, girls involved in scouting get the opportunity to deepen the values that they are being taught at home and in their churches.

Girls in scouting also get opportunities to make lasting friendships, have fun and learn to appreciate themselves and others. They also have many new worlds opened to them, develop specific skills, become part of a worldwide movement, have a variety of experiences that stimulate personal growth and help them assume responsibility for themselves, and participate in community service and other projects that afford leadership training.

Pine to Prairie Girl scout council exists to help local volunteers have the training and knowledge to be able to provide the girls of their

NWRDC Holds Workshop On Land Planning

Northwest regional development commission (NWRDC), city of Thief River Falls and agricultural extension service, co-sponsored a workshop recently entitled "Land Mangement Planning." The workshop in Thief River Falls was attended by 50 persons representing cities, townships, counties, soil and water conservation districts, watershed districts, DNR, bankers, realtors and attorneys.

Faculty included Don Barron, area soils scientist; Ron Kaliszewski, SPA; David Fricke, Wright county planning and zoning administrator; Gunnar Isberg, planning consultant; David Sellegren, attorney (land management); and Phil Tideman, St. Cloud planning commissioner.

The sponsor's objective in pursuing the workshop was to improve local government land management decision making process. Program evaluations were submitted by 30 of the 50 persons in attendance and the majority indicated that the workshop provided them with valuable insight and information.

Topic areas of planning as a tool to anticipate and avoid future problems, legal foundation for planning and the role of the planning commission were cited as the workshop's greatest strengths. Suggestions to improve on the workshop's format included orienting it more toward rural concerns and providing more specific detail on how to go about developing and implementing a land management program.

Because the workshop was so well received by such a diverse cross-section of interests, the NWRDC will pursue the sponsorship of similar workshops in the future. If anyone has a suggestion as to the subject matter for a future workshop please contact Randy Johnson (281-1396).

League Sponsors City Officials' Area Meetings

Local government officials will identify and discuss future legislative policies and issues with senators, representatives and state officials at a series of fourteen meetings throughout the state sponsored by the League of Minnesota Cities. The meetings will begin September 11 in Crookston and conclude October 25 in Hopkins. They are open to all those interested in local government as well as city officials.

The meeting for this area, to be held at the Best Western Inn at Crookston September 11 will include a 7:30 p.m. forum with senators and representatives to be present preceded by a 6:30 p.m. dinner.

Levy limit reform will be a key issue for the League in the 1980 legislative session as well as modification of the public employment labor relations laws.

Financing and administration of police and firefighters pension funds and of other public employees retirement programs are also of particular interest to cities in their attempts to hold down the cost of local government.

Another major issue to be addressed is the rapidly increasing cost of health and accident insurance for city employees and the high cost of liability insurance for the city itself.

These and other items of state-wide importance, as well as local concerns, will be up for candidate comment during the after-dinner meetings. Donald A. Slater, executive director, and other members of the League staff will conduct the meetings throughout the state. For further information about the Crookston meeting contact Curtiss Henderson, Crookston clerk-treasurer at 281-4503.

The League of Minnesota Cities has more than 770 municipal members and lobbies actively on a non-partisan basis, and provides a wide range of research and information services to cities.

Co-Curricular Planning Meet Held Aug. 10

Representatives of the University of Minnesota, the state department of education, Northland community college, and the AVTI met on August 10 at the AVTI for a co-curricular planning meeting.

The group consisted of Dr. Paul Marvin, chief of the agriculture education department of the University of Minnesota; Dr. William Hohenhaus, vocational division; Ken Wiebolt representing Northland community college; and Ed Sisler, Al Dalen and Arnt Aune of the AVTI. They discussed ways to combine existing AVTI Agriculture programs with existing courses at Northland community college that would be transferrable to the University of Minnesota, college of agriculture.

It is planned to clear all requirements so students will have this option available by the fall of 1980.

CETA Programs Help Employed Upgrade Skills

Department of economic security BOS CETA has programs which will help employed persons in unskilled or semi-skilled positions upgrade their skills. Skill training improvement program and the upgrade and retraining program can provide upgrade training for persons employed (for at least six months) by private employers.

"This gives the employee an opportunity to move from an unskilled position to an advanced occupation with a chance for career advancement and promotion. Upgrading can be accomplished by training through an area vocational technical institute (AVTI) or seminars within the chosen field and through on-the-job training," states Rockford Ammermann, job developer at the Thief River Falls center.

One such participant from this area is Earl Halfaday who works for the Marshall county co-op locker in Newfolden. He is now attending the Pipestone AVTI training in meat cutting and management. "This program has been perfect for me," he said. "It gave me the opportunity for schooling. Something I couldn't have done otherwise, and it has given me a great new learning experience."

Employees benefit from the upgrade program by getting an opportunity to receive an education which normally may be out of reach because of financial or other barriers. They may also get an advancement opportunity that would be out of their grasp because of the lack of knowledge, Ammerman said.

The participant, under the upgrade program, could receive all of his expenses reimbursed for classroom training, a raise in wages, a higher position in the company and the opportunity for more promotion.

Upgrade programs have a number of benefits for the employer, Ammerman indicated. Sharon Bring, Earl's supervisor at the Marshall county co-op locker, says, "The cost factor is what made us interested. We would not have been able to send anyone to school for meat cutting but we needed the new ideas and the experience a person coming out of a school could give us. Earl already has come back to us and shown us new cuts of meat we were unable to do before."

The upgrade program gives an employer the opportunity to move a person from a low position in the company to a higher position needed in the company, all at little cost to the employer. Anytime the participant is taking classroom training the program reimburses the employer 100 per cent of all costs. The program also pays 40 per cent of the wages during the on-the-job training phase of the program. This enables the employer to train the participant into the new position by spending more time in training.

Employers participating in the upgrade program are required to hire a CETA eligible participant into the position or substantially the same position as the position vacated by the person being upgraded before the end of the contract.

For more information about the upgrade program contact Rocky Ammermann, Thief River Falls CETA center, 1904 East Greenwood, phone 218-681-7350.

NWRDC area agency on aging is currently accepting applications for the establishment of social services for the elderly under title III B, direct services of the older Americans act. New and innovation ideas are encouraged. Deadline is September 1, 1979.

Funds are also available for acquisition, alteration, or renovation of senior citizens centers, including equipment. Ranking of proposals will take place at the October commission meeting with construction to begin January 1, 1980.

Officials Meet Tonight About Water Problems

Public officials in the Red Lake watershed area will meet tonight to consider potential joint efforts in water management. The meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the Pennington county courthouse meeting room.

County commissioners from Red Lake, Pennington and Marshall counties, representatives of the SCS, ASCS, DNR, Red Lake watershed district and county extension services have been invited to participate in the meeting called by Roger Hoffman, Pennington county board chairman.

"There has been increasing concern expressed by landowners regarding management of drainage and flooding problems," Hoffman stated, "so it seems timely that we meet to discuss areas where joint efforts might benefit all parties concerned."

Speaker for the meeting will be Don Ogaard of Ada who is the engineer for the Wild Rice watershed. A number of joint projects have been initiated in that watershed, and some of the successful efforts they have completed may have application for this area, commissioner Hoffman said.

All public officials who have responsibilities in water management and drainage have been invited to attend the meeting.

Seek To Curb Drunk Driving In Minnesota

Department of public safety commissioner John P. Sopsic has asked for a dedicated commitment and constant cooperation from law enforcement officers, prosecutors and the judiciary to curb the serious problem of drunk driving in Minnesota.

The commissioner spoke at a seminar for city and county prosecutors, who deal with drunk driving cases.

Sponsored by the county attorneys council and made possible by a grant from the department of public safety, the seminar was July 19 and 20 at the Minneapolis Radisson hotel.

Commissioner Sopsic said that the purpose of the seminar is to "increase the level of expertise among prosecutors and to display the department's commitment to help them do a better job in traffic cases. We are placing particular emphasis on DWI cases because alcohol has been, and continues to be, one of the largest and most serious problems in traffic safety."

More than 180 county and city prosecutors attended the meeting, a 50 per cent increase over last year's initial seminar. A poll of the attending prosecutors will be used in determining if the seminar will become an annual event.

Also participating from the department of public safety were Lowell VanBerkom, laboratory director of the bureau of criminal apprehension, and Captain Leo Foley, Minnesota State Patrol.

Commissioner Sopsic indicated that the department of public safety was "extremely appreciative of having an opportunity to meet with and discuss generic problems of alcoholism and traffic enforcement." He called the discussion "a significant step forward in an attempt to arrest the problem itself."

Talks To Children, Parents About First Day Of School

Fred Rogers, host-creator-producer of award-winning children's programs now in his 25th year on television, is offering an unprecedented pairing of programs for children and parents, to help both get ready for the first day of school.

At 4 p.m., Monday, August 27, on Prairie Public Television, Rogers will premiere the first episode of a week of all-new "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" programs in which he deals with the joys as well as the anxieties of young children who are starting school.

On the same date, at 8 p.m., Rogers will appear on his first live national prime-time, phone-in special for parents, "Mister Rogers Talks With Parents About School," to discuss the questions and concerns parents have about children who are facing one of the most important experiences of their young lives.

"I wanted to do the new "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" programs because school is such an important part of family life and yet it can be a difficult and even frightening experience for a young child," Rogers says. "And I wanted to talk with parents so that I could try to help with their children's first steps into school and learning. It can be a time of real anxiety, but it can be a time of real growth as well.

"Young children often have misconceptions about what school really is, what their teachers will be like, how much they will have to know, and who will take care of them. For many children, going to school for the first time can mean playschool or nursery school. For others, it means kindergarten or first grade. But for all of them, it means questions to be asked, reassurances to be given and received — and not just for the child, but for the parent, too."

Rogers will be joined on "Mister Rogers Talks With Parents About School" by Sandy Hill, co-host of ABC's "Good Morning America." Hill will moderate, receiving questions from the live studio audience and phone calls from viewers across the country. Rogers will also be assisted by a noted expert on education and young children in responding to the concerns parents voice.

On the new "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" programs, Rogers will appear with his regular "Neighbors" and puppets. He will emphasize that going to school "is like discovering a whole new place — but one that's not completely unfamiliar from what children have known all their lives."

Recognition that Fred Rogers has received through his work with children on "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" includes a George Foster Peabody award, five Emmy award nominations, an NET special award, a Saturday Review television award, general federation of Women's Club award, the Ralph Lowell award for outstanding service to public broadcasting, seven honorary doctoral degrees from leading universities and the adjunct professorship in the graduate school of library and information sciences at the University of Pittsburgh. He was chairman of the panel on mass media at the 1970 White House conference on children, serves on the executive board of action for children's television and is an honorary member of the American hospital association.

In recognition of his work with children and families, a national symposium on childhood and creativity was held at St. Vincent college in Latrobe, Pennsylvania from May 31-June 2, as a special 25th anniversary tribute to Fred Rogers.

In 1978, Fred Rogers departed from his "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" series, becoming executive producer and host of a new seven-part series, "Old Friends. . .New Friends". These programs reflect Rogers' concern for the growing isolation of people in American society, and his belief that all generations, young and old, have much to give and share with each other. Production has begun on thirteen new "Old Friends. . .New Friends" programs to air in 1980 on Public Television.

Fred Rogers' first exposure to television was in 1951, immediately after his graduation from Rollins college in Florida with a B.A. in music composition, when he served as assistant producer of NBC-TV's "The Voice of Firestone," and the NBC "Television Opera Theater." He was later promoted to network floor director, supervising "The Hit Parade" and "The Kate Smith Hour," among others.

In November of 1953, he joined the fledgling educational television station in Pittsburgh, WQED-TV, with the assignment of establishing a beginning schedule of programming. out of this assignment came Fred Rogers' first children's program, the award-winning series "The Children's Corner," which had its first broadcast in April, 1954. Written, produced, and performed with Josie Carey in Pittsburgh's WQED, it won the Sylvania award in 1955 as the best locally produced children's show in the country. It ran for seven years. During this time, Rogers attended Western Theological and Pittsburgh theological Seminary. In 1963 he was ordained a minister of the United Presbyterian Church; his ministry was dedicated to working with children and their families through the medium of television. That same year, he introduced "Mister Rogers" on the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation as a fifteen-minute daily program. It ran for a year and was similar in content to the "Neighborhood of Make-Believe" segments on the present half-hour "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood."

In 1964, Fred Rogers incorporated the 15 minute programs into a larger, half-hour format, which appeared as a daily show over the ABC-TV affiliate in Pittsburgh. In 1966, one hundred of his programs were acquired by the Eastern Educational Network, broadcast in Pittsburgh, and seen for the first time in New York, Chicago, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Boston, Schenectady and over the Maine Educational Network. Today "Mister Rogers' Neighborhood" is carried by more than 250 PBS stations.

Fred Rogers was born in 1928 in Latrobe, Pennsylvania. The Rogers family — wife Joanne, a concert pianist, and their two sons, James (20) and John (18) — live in Pittsburgh.

Earl Petersons Get Award For Beautification

few items are canned. Naomi confines most of the canning to fruit juices and jams and jellies. A number of wild cranberry bushes have been moved from the Peterson pasture where they were being damaged by cattle to the farm yard where they make a colorful addition to the landscape.

The Peterson yard includes a number of large oak trees which are home to many gray and red squirrels and a wide variety of birds. During the winter months feed is put out every other day and both birds and squirrels are attracted to the feeders. It takes most of a day to mow the grass and do the trimming around the large farm yard.

"Everything was pretty much here when we moved in," Peterson says about the farm yard. "The former house was moved when the new one was built and we have expanded the area where we keep the grass cut. But the trees are old trees and were here long before we became interested in the farm."

The 1,000 acre farming operation which Earl and Stuart conduct includes 840 acres which the Petersons own and 160 acres rented. About 600 of the 840 acres are in cropland, the remainder in woodland and pasture.

Earl has been treasurer of Wyandotte township for 34 years, was a member of the St. Hilaire school board for a number of years prior to consolidation with Thief River Falls in 1966 and has served on the boards of both Clara and Redeemer Lutheran churches.

Naomi taught Sunday school for a number of years, was active in women's organizations of the Clara church while it was operating and has been active in homemakers club work. She is presently home councilor for the Wyandotte homemakers club.

Her hobbies include sewing, macrame, string art, refinishing furniture and playing golf. Earl also enjoys golf, is addicted to fishing and hunting and likes to work on shop projects, making such items as a posthole digger and snow blower.

The Peterson family includes David, a Vietnam war veteran who is now enrolled in the AVTI aviation mechanics course in Thief River Falls; Mrs. Dennis (Ruth) Pederson of Anchorage, Alaska; and Stuart.

A plaque in recognition of the farm beautification effort made by the Petersons will be presented to them at the annual meeting of the soil and water conservation district next spring.

Productivity Of Agriculture Slowing In U.S.

American agriculture may not be as productive today as some of us believe, according to a University of Minnesota agricultural economist.

Agriculture still has a high productivity growth rate, but this growth rate has slowed over the last decade, says Vernon W. Ruttan. "Productivity growth in agriculture has fallen below levels of the two decades following World War II," he reports.

Ruttan gave a paper entitled "Inflation, Productivity and Agriculture" at the American Agricultural Economics Association in Pullman, Wash., July 28 to Aug. 1.

The slow demand growth for agricultural products by American consumers has helped agriculture meet both domestic and foreign production requirements. The factor is "at least" as important as high productivity growth, Ruttan says.

Production per acre of some crops, corn in particular, is high when compared to other countries. But average agricultural output per acre remains low compared to levels in many other developed and developing countries.

"The U.S. growth rate for agricultural output since 1950 has averaged about 1.7 per cent a year. This is well below the two to four per cent growth rates achieved by many other countries."

Ruttan says two serious issues confront U.S. agricultural performance in the future:

—Whether the U.S. agricultural research system is maintaining its capacity to support productivity growth

— Whether institutional constraints are becoming an increasing burden on productivity growth

"Agricultural research is undervalued in this country," the economist says. "Investments in agricultural research average a 25 to 50 per cent return. There's a substantial underinvestment in agricultural research."

Due largely to increasing energy costs, Ruttan says he anticipates an period of relatively slow growth in total agricultural productivity. In many respects the next several decades could parallel the lag in U.S. agricultural productivity between 1895 and 1925.

"During the next decade I expect we'll devote more resources to search for energy-saving technologies.

"In the future it's unlikely that the American economy can depend, as it has in the past, on productivity growth in the agricultural sector to dampen the impact of inflation on food prices.

"If we don't find efficient new sources of productivity growth in agriculture, it will be difficult for the nation to avoid transferring resources from the non-agricultural to the agricultural sector," he concludes.

Beyond The "Sunset"

Robert F. Dee, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of SmithKline corporation, expresses the opinion that "The taxpayers of America are contending with a government philosophy entirely different from the one on which our republic was founded. We are now contending with a concept close to confiscation—not taxation."

Dee bases his impressions on attempts to modify federal "sunset" legislation proposed to terminate government programs which outlive their usefulness or are not achieving their purposes. Some members of the Congress apparently intend on providing in any such legislation a provision for what they term "tax expenditures".

"You and I would naturally understand 'tax expenditures' to mean the money spent by the government from the tax revenues it receives from taxpayers," Dee writes. "But that is not the meaning of the word in government parlance. What members of the official bureaucracy mean by 'tax expenditures' is quite different.

"They mean tax deductions, tax credits and other provisions of legislation by which certain income is excluded from taxation or taxed at lower rates — for beneficial social or economic reasons. Examples are home mortgage deductions for individuals and investment tax credits for companies.

"How do breaks to the taxpayers get to be tax expenditures?" Dee asks. "The reasoning goes like this: Each exclusion or deduction or credit involves a loss of tax revenues to the government. Therefore, these are regarded as tax 'expenditures'. . . This is a highly devious concept with very important philosophical implications for American citizens.

"What it implies is that all income really belongs to the government, and that what government decides not to collect in taxes is a kind of gift of government to us, the taxpayers," Dee states.

"In other words, government is not the servant of the people. Government is the master of the people. And all of the people's money really belongs to government."

Dee admits to stating the case strongly, but says he does so because he feels about it strongly.

"My point is that the taxpayers of America are contending with a government philosophy entirely different from the one on which our republic was founded. We are now contending with a concept close to confiscation — not taxation.

"The threat to our economy is that provisions like this give the Congress a back door way of raising taxes without members being required to vote on the record in favor of tax increases.

"I believe this would result in vastly increased taxation — both for individuals and businesses. Instead of 'sunset' acting to cut federal spending, it would actually increase government revenues for even further spending.

"If limited to federal spending, the concepts embodied in sunset legislation can be beneficial to American citizens. But when those concepts are enlarged to include the idea that everything we Americans own belongs automatically to government, I say we've got a case of 'Red Sails in the Sunset'."

Don't Get Mad—Get Even!

Among many bits of T-shirt philosophy on exhibit around the country today is the phrase, "Don't Get Mad—Get Even!" Jack Lifshin of Long Beach, Calif., apparently had that thought in mind when he wrote a letter to his oil company.

Lifshin said it was his way of fighting back. He said he was sending the letter in place of a check, enclosing the payment bill stub of his oil statement and putting the money he would normally send into his savings account. The next month he would begin paying on the plan described in the letter which follows:

Dear Oil Company:

This is to inform you that due to a 15 per cent reduction in my monthly allotment, this consumer is out of money. Therefore, my checkbook will be closed until my next allotment is delivered. At that time, I will be open again for paying my creditors.

However, when I do open for business, the following rules will be in effect: My paying hours will be from 7 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., Monday through Friday, from the 16th to the 25th of the month. I will not be open on weekends. I am also going on an odd-even plan to cut down on the waiting. Those creditors whose card numbers end in an odd number will be paid during the odd-numbered months; those ending with an even number during the even-numbered months. There will be a $20 limit on all payments, and no creditor will be able to get paid unless his bill is at least one-half month (15 days) past due.

The Real Culprit

Sometimes the missions and purposes of organizations have a tendency to get a little off balance. The American Civil Liberties union is one group which often finds itself in left field when involved in controversy — often controversy which the union itself creates.

At such times it is refreshing to have others affected take a rather light-heated look at the situation, a look which often dispels the aura of deep importance placed around somewhat trivial matters.

The civil liberties union was founded in 1920 to defend conscientious objectors and other dissenters to World War I. It now employs nearly 100 people in the national office alone, with headquarters in New York and branch offices in Washington, Denver and Atlanta. There are approximately 200 ore employees in its 50 state affiliates and its expenditures are about $8 million annually.

One of the union's efforts was taken to task recently in an article in "Our Sunday Visitor", but the rebuke was done so deftly that it merits repeating. Here is what the article said:

"The city of Corpus Christi, Texas, is involved in a controversy with the American Civil Liberties Union. A group of citizens has been trying to have a statue of Christ placed in the harbor as a representative symbol of the city's name, which means "Body of Christ." Civil liberties groups contend such an action would be a violation of the constitutional separation of church and state.

"We are amazed that civil libertarians haven't seen the real issue here. The problem isn't with the statue. The problem is with the name of the city!

"Hasn't the American Civil Liberties Union noticed how many Catholic names for cities clutter our landscape? You have, for example, San Antonio, St. Louis, St. Augustine, St. Petersburg and St. Paul — each a clear case of religion becoming entangled with the state.

"Virtually the whole state of California is suffering from excessive church-state entanglement: San Diego, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Bernardino and Santa Rosa, to cite a few.

"It's time for the ACLU to save us from ourselves once again. These Catholic names for cities have got to go. Then, we can turn our guns on the biggest offender of all: Maryland."

Living Cost

Following editorial is from the Willmar Daily Tribune:

The Associated Press made a survey recently on what can well be termed a very timely subject.

It was a survey of the concerns of the people of our nation during these days of so many problems.

The poll taken showed rather surprising that the top concern of the people seems not to be that of energy.

The top concern as revealed by the poll is that this major worry is the rising costs of living.

Well — this is not exactly surprising — it is the problem which strikes closer and closer to the average person and family.

It comes closest to the area of family existence and that is a highly and even serious matter at times.

Also the cost of living has been increasing steadily and without any interruption.

Living costs are never down — they are always up and up and continually up.

Folks of course in the higher means and increases can always absorb the increased living costs.

Those of ordinary means are always in for trouble and from time to time find the going tough.

Especially those on fixed incomes like pensions or social security are still worse off.

Perhaps things will come to reveal the imperative need of some price and wage controls — whether like or not.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Ole and Lars were walking along the beach when a passing seagull dropped a load which struck Ole squarely on the head. "I'll go get some toilet paper quick," Lars offered. "Forget it!" Ole replied. "That gull would probably be miles away by the time you got back."

WINNERS & LOSERS

In a 50-yard race, a horse would lose out to a cheetah, but over the course of a mile, the horse would win easily.

The great runner, Jesse Owens, would win races against horses, too, partially, it's said, because he only ran against very spirited animals who would rear at the starter's gun, allowing Owens to get enough of a head start to win a short race.

A car that keeps on running after others may be out of gas is one with a standard V-8 engine, engineered to deliver higher mileage. The Environmental Protection Agency estimated that Ford LTD's mileage per gallon is higher for 1979 than for last year—an estimated 16 miles per gallon—while this year's highway estimate is 22.

A winner when it comes to auto racing is the Blue Flame. It runs on a liquid natural gas/hydrogen peroxide-fueled rocket engine and on October 23, 1970, reached a speed of 650 miles per hour.

Meeting with the Canadians

The 20th annual meeting of the Canadian-U.S. Interparliamentary Group begins August 9 in Calgary, Alberta, and I have the distinct honor of being one of 10 members of the U.S. House of Representatives who will be participating in the discussions. Also attending will be six U.S. Senators.

The United States and Canada have maintained excellent relations in the past and the main purpose of these meetings is to insure positive relations in the future. The primary emphasis for this year's discussion will be energy, and I'm hopeful that I will be able to discuss thoroughly my proposals calling for a summit meeting between the United States, Canada and Mexico to consider the development of a North American energy policy. This meeting will be particularly interesting since Calgary, Alberta, is the principal oil and gas producing province in Canada, and we will have an opportunity to examine their facilities.

The discussions will be held by the full group and three separate, more specific, panels. The group sessions and one panel will concentrate on bilateral energy issues with topics including: construction of the Alaska gas pipeline; the possibility of additional Canadian gas exports to the U.S.; Canadian oil exports to the U.S., oil swaps, contingency plans for oil cutbacks and for international allocation of supplies; alternative proposals for the transportation of Alaskan oil from Valdez; joint strategic petroleum storage facilities; and progress on future oil technologies.

The second panel will direct its attention toward trade, economics and defense. Subjects to be considered are: the U.S. and Canadian economic and monetary situation; bilateral trade, including the implementation of non-tariff barrier codes under GATT and the prospects for bilateral free trade; protectionist trade practices, including the U.S. "Buy America" requirements and Canadian policies to spur investment; problems for the U.S. from Canadian border TV advertising rules and problems for Canada from U.S. convention tax regulations; proposed nationalization of U.S.-owned asbestos firm in Quebec; Canadian purchase of F-16 or F-18 fighter planes; and cooperation among wheat export nations.

The third panel will focus on fisheries and environmental issues, including ratification of the East Coast fisheries and boundary agreements and ongoing fisheries differences; air quality, including such disputes as Cornwall Island, Atikokan and Poplar River; transborder environmental issues, such as Garrison, drilling in the Beaufort Sea, and West Coast tanker movement; disposal of toxic wastes; and winter navigation and water quality of the Great Lakes.

During our stay in Canada, we will also be taking time out to visit and examine more closely the tar sands projects in Alberta. This source of synthetic fuel is being discussed at great length as one of the many alternatives we will be using in the future, and being able to examine the process first hand should give those of us attending a better insight as to its potential. We will also be visiting several different energy sites in the Yukon Territory.

The final leg of the Canadian-U.S. Interparliamentary Group meeting may prove to be the most exciting. It is at this time that we will be traveling to Alaska to study and examine the oil facilities at Valdez and at Prudhoe Bay.

Work On Public TV Building Is Progressing

Work on the KAWE-TV transmitter building is proceeding on schedule at the tower site southeast of Blackduck. Hensel's Inc. of Bemidji is the general contractor on the project, and their blocklayers have nearly finished topping off the walls for the public television facility.

The building is designed to house not only the public television transmitters, microwave and remote control equipment, but also a 175 KW back-up diesel generating system. The system will provide the station with stand-by electrical power to stay on the air as an emergency broadcasting system station during power outages in conditions of severe weather and emergencies.

The diesel generator and transmitters will be remotely controlled from the KAWE master control room on the Bemidji state university campus.

The building will also accommodate two-way radio equipment of area businesses that will be renting space for communication antennas on the KAWE 1,000-foot tower. Other space in the building has been designed for radio station facilities in the future.

The transmitter building is scheduled to be completed by September 1 and the transmitters and diesel generator will be moved into the building at that time. The electrical and the heating and ventilating contractors will work on those systems in early September. As that work is completed, the building will be prepared for the actual transmitter installation and testing.

U.S. Senator
Rudy Boschwitz
reports to Minnesota

Once in awhile, the Senate overwhelmingly passes a law so sensible you start thinking that common sense may be wafting in the winds of Washington.

Such an event occurred last week when a measure called the "Equal Access to Justice Act" passed by a score of 94-3.

The Act will give individuals and small businesses protection they've lacked before against suits filed by government agencies — when those suits prove to lack justification.

But before getting into details, let's go over some background on this Act.

We now have a record-breaking 124 federal regulatory agencies with power to make rules that strongly and directly affect the private sector.

Three times as much shelf space is taken up by the accumulation of agency regulations issued since 1934 as by the entire collection of congressional legislation passed since our nation's founding.

These many volumes have been compiled by people who are not elected officials; they have no accountability to the electorate. Nor, many times, do they possess much practical knowledge about the areas in which they write regulations.

Because of this wild growth in the number of agencies and the amount of regulations they churn out, the individual and businessman have found themselves increasingly beset in recent years by cases brought against them by the government.

Even worse, the cost of fighting such actions is so great that, except for large corporations which can afford fulltime legal staffs, the typical attitude of those sued is, "I can't fight it. I can't afford to. It's cheaper to just give in now. And — even if I did win — the attorney and court costs would be so great, I'd be further ahead to quit now."

Because it has been so easy for the government to file cases and so costly for individuals and small businesses to fight them, our courts' books are full of irresponsible charges brought by agencies.

Now back to the Equal Access to Justice Act. This bill provides that the government must pay the attorney and court costs for the party sued — if the court determines that the government's case had no substantial justification.

It's an attempt to overcome the financial obstacles which have too often prevented citizens from challenging an unreasonable exercise of government authority.

And it will encourage people to contest actions which seem to be unmerited and irresponsible.

To quote one of my colleagues in the Senate, "If bureaucrats knew that more of their actions would be subjected to questions in court, I believe that their tendency to be careless, arbitrary, and irresponsible could cease."

The bill will have no effect on legitimate prosecution of cases where a party is in serious arrears with clearly stated regulations.

It will decrease those cases where agencies file a suit without carefully considering the justification for, and the wisdom of, their actions.

Compliance with the morass of regulations is difficult, even when an individual or business spends a great deal of time attempting to understand them all — and that's not an easy task when you realize that last year 61,000 single-spaced and fine-printed pages of them were issued.

The least we can do is provide some protection when an honest error or difference of opinion comes into the picture.

With the costs of lawsuits coming out of the operating budgets of offending agencies, unquestionably everyone concerned is going to think twice before trooping into court.

Prepare yourself for another big jump in the price of energy.

Build with Stran now.

You might as well get ready for it. Energy costs continue to go up. And most forecasters don't see them ever coming back down to earth.

All that stands between you and a small fortune in energy costs is a well-insulated building that holds utility costs to a minimum. A building like Stran builds.

You see, Stran has factory-insulated wall and roof systems, including our famous Stranwall 70 system, that can cut heating and cooling costs in half as compared to other methods.

Which is why some Stran wall and roof building products are specified for constructing refrigerated warehouses with temperatures held at -20 F or more. So we know how to keep you cool. Or warm, very efficiently.

As long as you're planning a new building, you might as well be prepared for the future. Give us a call. We'll show you why Stran buildings are looking better all the time.

"Woodburning Safety" Booth At State Fair

"Woodburning Safety" will be the theme of a 1979 Minnesota state fair booth display jointly sponsored by five government agencies. The display, showing proper and improper methods of installing a small wood-burning stove in the home, will be housed in the department of natural resources building at the state fairgrounds.

The booth will be manned with trained personnel from the participating government agencies who can answer questions and discuss a special slide presentation on wood stoves. "Woodburning Safety Through Cooperation" display will be open from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. each of the 12 days of the Minnesota state fair, beginning August 23.

Materials for the display are provided by funds from the federal consumer products safety commission under the direction of Ray Gildow of the Staples energy office. The booth idea and agency cooperation was spearheaded by Kris Sanda, director of consumer services, with technical assistance from Don Pates of the building code division of the department of administration and the educational assistance of the Minnesota energy agency.

The booth was invited to the natural resources state fair building through the cooperation of DNR commissioner Joseph Alexander, who told the group nearly one million persons tour the DNR log building at the fairgrounds every year. An order blank, listing free valuable consumer materials relevant to installation of home wood burning stoves, will be given to booth visitors at the fair.

Land Survey Completed By Commission

NWRDC has recently completed the analysis of the land management questionnaire that was mailed in May of 1979. The questionnaire was sent to the levels of government involved with land management in region I. The levels surveyed included: communities, counties, townships, soil and water conservation districts, watershed districts, Minnesota department of natural resources, agricultural extention agents and others.

Purpose of the survey was to determine land management concerns as well as the application and effectiveness of land management tools within the region. Information obtained from this survey will guide the commission's land management program update for the fiscal year 1980-81.

Results of the survey showed flooding, soil erosion and economic development to be some of the major concerns of the respondents. The greatest hindrances to land management in region I were considered to be a lack of finacial alternatives for proposals, a lack of technical staffs and a lack of information. Results of the survey are available in draft form from the NWRDC upon request. Contact Randall Johnson at 281-1396 for copies.

Address Change Kit Can Solve Mail Problems

Soon a new wave of students will be going off to college, and for many it will be the first time they'll have a mailing address away from home.

Many potential mail problems can be avoided by following a few simple suggestions, postmaster Art Buringrud says.

First, give the post office prompt notice of your new address at college, whether on or off the campus. There's a free "Change of Address Kit" available at the post office. This also contains cards with which you can notify those who send you mail regularly, such as newspapers and magazines, relatives, friends, clubs, banks and other businesses.

In most college housing, including dormitories, mail usually is distributed from a central mailroom, either on call over the counter or to individual boxes. Some college housing, however, doesn't have such mailrooms, and letter carriers deliver directly to student boxes in the building lobby. Make sure that any such box is properly identified with your name.

For students living off campus in apartments, rooming houses, fraternities or sororities, make sure there is a clear understanding of where your mail is to be delivered and how it is distributed.

If you change address while away at school, repeat the process of notifying the post office and your regular correspondents with another "Change of Address Kit." Also, tell the college mailroom.

When you leave school for short holidays or recesses, your best bet is to arrange for your mail to be picked up and held for your return by someone you trust. Or, you can ask the post office to hold your mail while you are away, or forward it to your home or wherever you will be.

Finally, when the school year is over, you can make sure that your mail will be delivered promptly by again notifying the post office of your address change.

Heart Ass'n. Raises More Than '79 Goal

American Heart Association, Minnesota affiliate, Inc., raised $1,893,000 to surpass its 1979 heart fund campaign goal of $1.8 million, according to Lance Crombie, Ph.D., 1979 state heart fund chairman.

"This enables the Minnesota affiliate to increase funds for heart research projects, community programs and professional and public heart education programs for the 1979-80 fiscal year," Dr. Crombie said.

He noted that to reach the goal, more than 60,000 Minnesota volunteers donated their time, energy and enthusiasm to collect money and to distribute information about heart attack and stroke.

Dr. Crombie added that in recent years, deaths due to heart disease have declined in Minnesota. However, heart disease is still the nation's number one health problem, affecting more than 40 million Americans.

Minnesota affiliate is a statewide health agency and part of the American Heart association which is represented by 55 affiliates in all states and territories of the U.S.

BSU To Offer ROTC Program For First Time

Beginning this fall, Bemidji state university will provide a program currently being offered at over 250 other universities throughout the United States. Reserve Officers' Training corps (ROTC) will open its first year on the northern Minnesota campus in September.

Available to men and women regardless of academic major, the program includes stydy during all four years of higher education, financial incentive and ultimately commission as an officer in the active services, national guard or reserves as he or she chooses.

Training received in ROTC is designed to supplement and enhance regular curriculum, according to coordinators. A no obligation program during the freshman and sophomore years, emphasis is placed on leadership, management and practical experience. Among the subjects covered are national security, map reading, military history, personnel management and such extracurricular activities as indoor rifle and pistol marksmanship, orienteering, cross country skiing and rappelling. All study and training materials are provided free of charge.

During a typical ROTC freshman year, a student attends class and leadership labs one hour a week each learning one credit a quarter. Up to two of the ROTC courses may be taken in lieu of two of the required five physical education courses.

As a sophomore, an ROTC student attends class two hours a week and lab one hour a week, with two credits per quarter awarded. As a junior ROTC enrollee, he or she is eligible for a $100 a month tax-free allowance during the academic year while completing requirements for commission. Juniors attend class three hours a week for three credits per quarter. At the completion of the junior year, students attend a six week advanced ROTC camp at Fort Lewis, Wash.

Senior ROTC students again receive $100 a month and attend classes three hours a week. At this point, the individual chooses the branch of the army he or she wishes to serve and either active duty or reserve component.

To supplement educational costs, students may apply for scholarships. High school juniors and seniors are encouraged to compete for four-year ROTC scholarships. Students currently enrolled in ROTC are eligible to compete for three-two and one-year scholarships.

Captain Christopher Crump of Bemidji state concluded, "ROTC is a program with a tremendous amount of flexibility. It allows a student to acutally work on two careers simultaneously — becoming an officer and pursuing another academic interest. I would personally urge anyone who has any questions about ROTC to stop by our office anytime, or call collect." $4,819,400 In Loans Approved For Companies

Paul W. Jansen, director of the Minneapolis district office of the small business administration, announced recently that $4,819,400 in SBA loans have been approved for 44 Minnesota companies, in July.

This includes five loans, amounting to $308,000, which were to minority owned firms, making the minority component of the July loan portfolio 11.4 per cent of total loans and 6.4 per cent of total loan dollars. The projected additional employment created as a result of these loans is 547 jobs.

Direct management assistance counseling was provided to 461 Minnesota firms through the small business administration's in house counselors or through support groups like the service corps of retured executives and the 10 colleges participating in the small business institute program. In July, 346 business persons or potential business persons participated in SBA sponsored training programs.

Letters to the Editor

Both of these articles were taken from the Wednesday issue of the Times:

"In action at the regular business meeting the board voted to enter into a 36-month lease with Bell Telephone company for a phone system for the AVTI. A pre-payment of $10,047 was authorized to reduce overall cost and is included in the AVTI budget."

"The Pigskin Preview, annually the Sports Boosters biggest money-making venture, takes on added importance this year since the club has taken on the task of underwriting the athletic program for boys and girls at Franklin middle school for the 1979-80 school year. Funds from the Pigskin Preview will be needed to cover a big portion of the estimated $9,200 needed to support the Franklin sports programs, victim of school district budget cuts."

Driving Rules Followed Can Help Save Gas

With experts predicting that gasoline will be more than $1 per gallon in Minnesota within the next several months, and with the threat of impending gasoline rationing, Minnesota drivers have ample incentive for conserving fuel.

You can cut your auto fuel consumption by as much as 30 per cent by following a few simple driving rules, according to the Minnesota safety council.

Start slowly and accelerate gently. Avoid unnecessary braking and tailgating. Avoid excess idling. Keep your car well tuned and in good running order and drive within posted speed limits.

According to the safety council, complying with the 55 mph speed limit is one of the most effective ways to cut down on gas consumption. Driving 55 can increase your car's mileage by 17 per cent to 40 per cent.

OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
August 7, 1979

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 9:00 A.M., August 7, 1979.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

The minutes of the meetings of June 5th and 15th and July 2nd, 9th and 24th were read and approved as read.

Wayne Alfveby, Director of the Northwest Regional Library and others of his Staff were present and presented the proposed budget for the fiscal year 1979-80 along with statistics from the past year. A State mandated minimum of $14,300.00 was paid by the County last year and is the minimum for the coming year. The Library request is for an appropriation of $18,619.91. After discussion the matter was taken under advisement to be considered with other requests for the County calendar year 1980.

A delegation from the Bray Twp. area with Lavern Johnson as spokesman appeared and asked for action of the plan for improvement of 4 mi. of SAH 12 from SA 3 North to where it intersects with SA 7. After discussion and a clarification of the base requirements for bituminous surfacing of County roads which requires a minimum of 100 cars per day, the advisability of grading the road to a 40 ft. width was questioned. A 40 ft. width without a black top is more difficult to maintain and if it is not to be 'black' topped it would seem appropriate to re-design the road to a 30 ft. roadway. The group was then asked to comment on the adviseability of developing the East-West road No. 7 to a higher level road to serve the area rather than connect to the black top North or South. CAH 7 is almost to the 100 car count now and may serve more people better than the North South road. Matter to be taken up again when the 5 year Road program is updated.

Reese Hall, Director of the Juvenile Training Center in Bemidji presented a request for the budget for the coming year for the Center. Fiscal year is Aug. 1 thru July 31. Total budget is for $352,623.00 compared to a total of $336,219.00 last year. The request is for $9,196.00 from Pennington County compared to $8,595.25 last year. Commissioner Tasa introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, that the budget of the Minnesota Juvenile Training Center of Bemidji be approved as presented with the amount of $9,196.00 being pledged to support the Center for the 1979-80 fiscal year. The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Stenberg and declared unanimously adopted.

The Board and Engineer then interviewed applicants that responded to advertisement for the position of General Foreman for the Highway Department. Five applicants were interviewed with more to be seen later. The Board then appointed Godfred Svir to be acting General Foreman on a temporary basis until the Board fills the position on a permanent basis.

The Auditor then appraised the Board of the financial condition of several ditches that have accumulated debt over a period of time to a greater degree than normal and that will take several years to collect under the present system. It was determined that Liens should be filed to reflect the individual obligations for payment of the repairs. After discussion, Commissioner Koop introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, that the cost of repairs of Judicial Ditch 13, Judicial Ditch 18, Judicial Ditch 30, County ditch 21, County Ditch 41, County Ditch 46 and Judicial Ditch 15 be apportioned over the benefited lands in proportion to the oroginal Lien and made payable in 10 annual installments with interest at 6 per cent according to Minnesota Statutes 106.471, Subd. 5, and further that the Auditor proceed to provide funds for these ditches by the sale of Ditch Bonds. The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Tasa and declared unanimously adopted.

The Title Atlas Co. with headquarters in Long Prairie and represented by Clarence Hess presented a proposal to publish a new Atlas for Pennington County by the end of December 1979. The Board offered some suggestions of how they thought the Atlas could be made more useful to persons that may purchase one and the Company was given approval by the Board.

Moved by Stenberg seconded by Grabanski that the sum of $2,808.00 be appropriated and paid from Revenue Sharing to the Tri-Valley Opportunity Council for bus services to July 31, 1980. Motion unanimously carried.

A copy of the Overall Economic Development Program of the Northwest Regional Development Commission was before the Board. the Board reviewed the Program and Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, Pennington county desires to improve the economic condition of its citizens and one way to do this is to selectively invest public money in community efforts to increase local employment in the private sector, and

WHEREAS, Pennington County completed an Overall Economic Development Program in 1972 and was subsequently designated as a Redevelopment Area by the Economic Development Administration, and

WHEREAS, Pennington County wishes to maintain this designation and become eligible for additional federal economic development assistance, and

WHEREAS, the Northwest Regional Development Commission has completed a District Overall Economic Development Program which is based, in part, upon input from Pennington County, and

WHEREAS, the Northwest Regional Development Commission has been designated a provisional Economic Development District by the Economic Development Administration and is the recipient of a planning grant from that agency to continue and strengthen its economic development planning program.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that Pennington County concurs with and endorses the Northwest Regional Development Commission's Overall Economic Program (OEDP), as it includes an accurate reflection of current conditions and the needs and priorities for economic development in Pennington County;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that Pennington County intends to actively plan for economic development at the local level and to coordinate these efforts and to support the Northwest Regional Development Commission program for the betterment of all of Northwest Minnesota;

BE IT RESOLVED FURTHER, that a resolution similar to this one will be presented to the Pennington County Board on an annual basis for their consideration in order to monitor yearly progress and revisions to the District OEDP. The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Koop and upon vote declared unanimously adopted.

The status of the State mandated Building Code was discussed. The Legislature designed a method of providing a means for the people to express their desire by having a vote throughout the effected area. Commissioner Tasa introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, that pursuant to the Laws of 1979, Chapter 287, a referendum to determine whether the State Building Code shall apply in the County of Pennington will be held at the first regular election to be held in the County, the Primary Election to be held September 9, 1980, and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the question on the ballot shall be:

"Shall the State Building Code be adopted in Pennington County?"

and shall be voted on by the entire County of Pennington except those voters residing in home rule charter or statutory cities that have adopted the State Building Code prior to January 1, 1977. The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Grabanski and upon vote declared unanimously adopted.

Moved by Tasa seconded by Koop that the Road Committee and the Bridges and Culvert Committee inspect roads, bridges and culverts at 9:00 A.M., August 30, 1979. Motion carried.

Moved by Tasa seconded by Koop that the County Engineer and Auditor be instructed and authorized to advertise for bids for construction of a new Motor Grader Shed to be constructed in the City of Goodridge with bids to be called and opened at 2:00 P.M., Sept. 4, 1979. Motion declared unanimously carried.

Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

WHEREAS, the passage of the Community Social Service Act, Minnesota Laws 1979, Chapter 324, provides that the County of Pennington must develop and update annually a plan relating to the identification, reduction, remedy and prevention of social problems; and

WHEREAS, the County of Pennington desires to work with other counties to cooperatively develop a planning approach which will be of benefit to Pennington County in the preparation of its own plan; and

WHEREAS, Minnesota Laws 1979, Chapter 324, authorizes the County of Pennington to enter into cooperative agreements under Minnesota Statutes, Section 471.59;

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that the Pennington County Board of Commissioners hereby agrees to enter into the Joint Powers Agreement on file in the Auditor's Office establishing the County Social Service Implementation Committee for the purposes of applying for available planning funds which will assist the parties to the agreement in developing their respective social service plans;

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that Commissioner Otto Stenberg is hereby appointed as the Pennington County representative on the County Social Service Implementation Committee.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that Commissioner Otto Stenberg is hereby authorized to sign the Joint Powers Agreement on behalf of the County of Pennington. The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Koop and upon vote declared unanimously adopted.

In a beginning effort to make the Courthouse energy efficient and barrier free for handicapped, and to complete necessary repairs it was determined that the windows and entrys be replaced according to the Architect's design and then continue to plan the next step of making the Courthouse accessible to the handicapped by adding an elevator or barrier free entry as mandated by Federal and State Laws.

Moved by Grabanski seconded by Stenberg that the Architectural firm of Foss, Engelstad & Foss be instructed to proceed with the repair project for replacement of windows, reduction of window area and replacement of the entrys, and schedule a call for bids at the earliest possible date. Upon call for the vote on the motion the motion was declared unanimously carried.

The house was built by the Petersons in 1967 when they moved to the farm from Earl's family home about two miles west. The Petersons have been selected by the Pennington soil and water conservation district as farm beautification award winners this year.

Football Season Nears

All the furor caused when East Grand Forks and Crookston announced their planned withdrawal from the Northwest Athletic Conference, and the subsequent Mid-State Conference applications made by the Green Wave and Pirates, along with Thief River Falls, has quieted on the eve of the 1979 high school football season.

Crookston, in fact, is considered a strong title threat this fall in the NWAC where Bemidji and Fergus Falls have been dominating the title scene; some say because of their bigger enrollment figures.

The Northwest Athletic Conference champion will earn a spot in the quarterfinals of the 1979 Class A state football playoffs, meeting the winner of a preliminary qualifying game matching conference champion from the Mid-State (Aitkin, Crosby-Ironton, Detroit Lakes, Park Rapids, Staples, Wadena) and Sea Range (Aurora-Hoyt Lakes, Eveleth, Greenway-Coleraine, Hermantown, International Falls, Proctor, Silver Bay, Two Harbors, Virginia).

A year ago the Northwest and Mid-State representatives met in that preliminary game as Bemidji beat Detroit Lakes 29-7. The Lumberjacks reached the playoff semifinals with a 21-13 victory over Silver Bay before bowing out of post-season play with a 30-6 loss to Fridley Grace.

In the other bottom bracket of the 12-team 1979 Class A state playoffs, the conference winners in the Don Bosco (Archbishop Brady, Fridley Grace, Benilde-St. Margaret's, Minneapolis De La Salle, Richfield Holy Angels, Rochester Lourdes, St. Paul St. Agnes and St. Paul St. Bernard's) and Rum River (Braham, Chisago Lakes, Foley, Milaca, Mora, North Branch, Pine City, Princeton, St. Francis and Sauk Rapids) meet in a qualifying game to determine a quarterfinal opponent for the Tri-Metro winner (Hopkins Blake, Brooklyn Center, Circle Pines Centennial, Golden Valley, Mahtomedi, Minneapolis Marshall University, Minnehaha Academy, St. Anthony).

In the upper brackets, conference champions in the Central Gopher (Albany, Glenwood, Melrose, Paynesville, Cold Spring Rocori, Sauk Centre) and Missota (Apple Valley, Farmington, Lakeville, Northfield, Prior Lake, Rosemount, Inver Grove Heights Simley, New Prague) will be seeded into the quarterfinals.

The Central Gopher foe will come from either the Suburban West (Buffalo, Chaska, Eden Prairie, Glencoe, Hutchinson, Mound-Westonka, Orono, Shakopee, Waconia) or West Central (Benson, Breckenridge, Litchfield, Montevideo, Morris, St. Cloud Cathedral).

Missota quarterfinal opposition will come from either the South Central (Blue Earth-Frost, Fairmont, New Ulm, St. James, St. Peter, Waseca, Wells-Easton) or Southwest (Jackson, Luverne, Marshall, Pipestone, Redwood Falls, Slayton, Windon, Worthington).

North Star Transport Second In State Class B Tournament

North Star Transport of Thief River Falls reached the finals Sunday in the 1979 Minnsota Class B state fast pitch softball tournament played at Hutchinson.

Duluth ended North Star Transport championship hopes with an 8-4 decision in the finals of the double elimination event. However, both teams earned spots in the Northern Region tournament at Austin August 25-26.

North Star Transport, District 7 champion, began state tournament play Saturday morning with a 9-3 win over Elk River American Legion and added a 15-1 conquest of Prairie House Restaurant of Hutchinson before losing to Windom 3-0.

Playing in Sunday's loser's bracket, North Star Transport battled back by beating Frazee 5-4, Reef Lounge of Duluth 4-0 and Windom 6-0 to reach the finals.

Marty Brown, a pick-up player from Williams, did a majority of the North Star Transport pitching.

First Federal, Consumer's Are Playoff Champions

First Federal Savings & Loan Association and Consumer's Co-op joined Jean Junction-Rundell Electric as post-season division playoff champions last week in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association.

However, the 1979 season did not end as scheduled Friday when manpower shortage forced a postponement of the Division I finals matching the TRF Merchants against the Rusty Nail Raiders. The game will be played tonight.

First Federal Savings & Loan Association, the regular season Division II pennant winner, also annexed the playoff crown with an easy 17-3 championship game victory over Home Lumber Wednesday. A four-run first inning, a two-run inside the park home run by Rick Reierson in the second and a five-run third made it an 11-1 rout by the third inning.

Home Lumber reached the finals of the double elimination event by outscoring the St. Hilaire Bears 12-7 prior to meeting the unbeaten First Federal Savings & Loan Association squad.

Consumer's Co-op also completed an unbeaten playoff trail in Division II with an 11-4 championship game victory over Phase II Thursday. Stewart Peterson homered for the winners, who finished in a three-way tie for second place during the regular season.

Division III pennant winner Schumacher's Tireland bowed out of the playoffs earlier in the night by losing to Phase II, another team involved in that second place regular season tie, 16-8. Schumacher's Tireland bounced back from a first round playoff loss with two wins Wednesday, outlasting first Northwestern Insurance Agency 12-11 in the completion of a game suspended after four innings the night before and then eliminating Great Northwest Agency, Inc. 20-9.

Jean Junction-Rundell Electric was the first post-season champion, winning the Division IV crown during a Sun., Aug. 5, playoff tournament.

SECOND BASEMAN Butch Newton of First Federal Savings & Loan Association completed a fourth inning force play on Home Lumber base runner Mike Jury during Wednesday's Division II playoff championship game in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association. The regular season champion First Federal Savings & Loan Association squad added the post-season playoff trophy to its collection with a 17-3 win.

Moum Is Narrow Winner Over Hoppe In Club Finals

by Mike Lee

Jay Moum hit 72 shots Sunday, but it was a 15-foot par putt on the 17th green that clinched him his fourth club tournament title at the Thief River Country Club.

In fact, it was his smooth putting stroke that led him all the way around the 3,027-yard course and a 1-up victory over Lincoln high school senior Wade Hoppe.

"I knew I needed it. I had no choice, so I knocked it in the hole," said Moum referring to that 17th hole putt which kept him one up and prevented a sudden death playoff.

Only once, a three-foot birdie putt on fifteen, did Moum's putter let him down. They tied that hole with par fours.

Precision putting on the slick, fast greens was the highlight of their games as both players had trouble controlling their tee shots. Moum hit just five fairways during the 18 hole match, while Hoppe had a slightly better percentage, hitting six fairways.

In the consolation match played with Moum and Hoppe, Marv Carlson's excellent play from tee to green led him to a 7 and 6 victory over Stewart Rugland. Carlson shot 3-under 33 on the front nine and went on to close out Rugland on the twelfth hole.

Moum had moved to the finals with victories earlier in the week over Dave Vogel 2-1 and Carlson 4-3.

Playing in the upper bracket of the championship flight, Hoppe scored victories over Jerry Imgrund 2-up and Tom Shetler 4-2.

President's Flight winner was Steve Waale who defeated Jerry Johnson 1-up. 1978 club champion Bob Forberg defeated Dick Skay 2-1 to win consolation honors in President's Flight.

Results in the other flights:

First—champion: Tom Williams over John Moum 2-1; consolation: Stan Sjoberg over Charlie Boyer 2-1.

Second — champ: Dave Kjos over Bill Penning 4-3; consolation: Monty Markstrom over Joel Carlson 2-up.

Third — champion: Bill Corliss over Art Welter 2-up; consolation: Dean Anderson over Milt Reierson 2-1.

Fourth — champion: Dave Peterson over Jay Narverud 1-up; consolation: Bob Flynn over Curt Geatz.

Fifth — champion: Wes Johnson over Mark Larson; consolation: Harold Storhaug over Myrle Carlson.

Sixth— champion: Ralph Foster over Norm Cruse; consolation: Charles Samuelson over Bud Evans.

Tournament Notes

+When Moum drained a 15-foot birdie putt on very first, the golfers and gallery knew what kind of match they were in for.

+Moum had 30 putts in 18 holes. Hoppe had 28.

+Under perfect golfing weather, it was the most exciting championship match seen in recent memory.

+Moum also won this year's Arctic Cat Golf Classic played one month ago.

+Although medal score doesn't count, scores by nine: Moum 35-37-72; Hoppe 38-35-73.

+Only five championship match holes were won by pars, otherwise birdies were needed to win.

+Highlights of championship and consolation matches to be featured on Cable 3 tonight (Monday) at 6:45 p.m.

Steel Shot Rule Includes Refuges

Final regulations that require hunters to use non-toxic (steel shot) shells for hunting waterfowl on certain national wildlife refuges in the Great Lakes region were recently announced by Harvey Nelson, regional director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS).

Nelson said steel shot will be required for hunting waterfowl on seven refuges in the region. Non-toxic shot also will be required for hunting waterfowl in designated zones which were described in the July 17, 1979, Federal Register.

On four of the regional refuges designated as steel shot areas, waterfowl hunters will be required to use steel shot shells with no exceptions. On the other designated refuges, and in the designated zones, hunters using shotguns bored larger or smaller than 12 gauge are permitted to use toxic shot shells (lead shot) during the 1979-80 waterfowl seasons. The exception will terminate after this season and steel shot will be required in all gauges of guns beginning in the fall of 1980, the FWS said.

National wildlife refuges where non-toxic shot must be used in all guns with no exceptions. (Waterfowl hunters may not be in possession of any shells loaded with lead or other toxic shot) include the Sherburne and Tamarac national wildlife refuges in Minnesota.

Regional refuges where steel shot is required in 12-gauge shotguns only. (Hunters may not be in possession of 12-gauge shells loaded with anything other than steel shot while hunting waterfowl.) include the entire Upper Mississippi river wildlife and fish refuge (from Wabasha, Minnesota, to nearly Rock Island, Illinois).

Nelson said waterfowl hunters should check zone regulations that describe other federal and state lands where non-toxic shot is required. The zones include, among other areas, all federal waterfowl production areas in Minnesota, as well as state wildlife management areas in some states, and other waterfowl hunting areas.

Portions of national wildlife refuges which are open to the hunting of migratory game birds are designated by signs and-or delineated on maps. Special conditions applying to individual refuges and maps are available at refuge headquarters offices or from the Area Manager, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, 530 Federal Building and U.S. Court House, 316 North Robert Street, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101 for the Sherburne, Tamarac, and Upper Mississippi river wildlife and fish refuges.

'79 Thief River Falls Football Schedule Is The Same - Tough

Optimistic as any coach worth his whistle this time of year, Lincoln high school mentor Gene Jurgens still admits that an unchanged nine-game schedule which produced a 4-5 finish a year ago remains a formidable barrier for the Prowlers who are looking for their first winning season since 1974.

"This time of the year everybody is optimistic," says Jurgens who began his fourth year as Thief River Falls coach Monday. "If we can stay away from injuries, especially in the line, we look for a successful year. But our schedule can still go either way. There used to be a time here when we could say that if the sun comes up tomorrow we'll win. But you don't have any guaranteed wins with the schedule we play now; they're all tough."

The 1979 Thief River Falls schedule opens Thurs., Aug. 30, against a Grand Forks Red River team featuring college-size linemen, and also features defending Mid-State Conference champion Detroit Lakes; perennially strong Crosby-Ironton; keen rival Staples; area power Moorhead; defending Northwest Athletic Conference champion Bemidji; Class AA-sized NWAC foe Fergus Falls; improved East Grand Forks; and highly regarded Crookston.

Jurgens and his assistant coaches — Charlie Cornell, John Schmitz and newcomer Tom Schafer — began preseason drills with a 63-man roster, including a strong 21-member senior contingent, 14 juniors and 28 sophomores. Fifteen of those players are lettermen.

Bigger size and an abundance of top-flight backs — both on offense and defense — should provide the Prowlers with whatever success they achieve this fall. Lack of depth in the line and inexperience at linebacker could cause problems.

"I would think we'll be bigger than we have been for a long time," pointed out Jurgens who will be able to call on four 200 pounders to start in the line if he so desires, headed by lettermen Jon Pinkerton, Dan Cullen and Wayne Huseth.

Backfield talent features senior lettermen Bill Jury, Tom Bjorkman, Jeff Ulrich, Dave Odegaard and Jim Thompson, along with non-lettering senior John Dillon. "They're all capable starters," reported Jurgens, "and in most years they all would start."

Jury, a halfback who averaged five yards per carry en route to 248 yards rushing, and Bjorkman, a quarterback who completed 16 of 46 passes for 239 yards, did start a year ago. Graduation took halfback Jeff Kosel, selected as the team's MVP award winner the past two years, and fullback Wayne Krueger.

Ulrich is challenging Bjorkman for the quarterback spot in the wishbone offense. "They're both quarterbacks, but they'll both learn other positions, too," noted Jurgens. "They're both good enough athletes to play somewhere for us. If they don't start at quarterback they'll have an opportunity to play another position."

That other position could be at an end. Both can pass the ball well, but Pinkerton is the only proven receiver. And at 6-5, he's an inviting target. The runningbacks will probably become frequent receivers, with converted runningbacks Dave Waale and Brian Culkins trying their hands as ends.

"We'll definitely pass the ball more than we have before," promised Jurgens. "Either one of those guys can throw the ball. All of our backs have good hands, and it would be pretty tough not to throw to a guy like Pinkerton occasionally."

Inexperience in the line worries Jurgens. "Hopefully some of the younger ones can come along," he said. "They'll have to prove themselves in the line for us to have a good year."

Thief River Falls' 5-2 defense features a solid secondary, led by Jury, a two-year starter and a 1978 Northwest Athletic Conference all-conference pick as a defensive back. "I think Bill will really solidify the secondary for us," mentioned Jurgens.

There are no experienced linebackers available, however, and playing behind an inexperienced line, that could present problems. The linebacking corps was further weakened when letterman Mark Schmitke underwent a recent appendectomy. He'll miss the Red River opener but may be ready for the Thief River Falls home opener Fri., Sept. 7, against Detroit Lakes.

HEAD COACH Gene Jurgens looked on as members of the Lincoln high school football team went through preseason practice drills Thursday. Sixty-three Prowlers went through five days of conditioning last week before donning full pads today (Monday). Thief River Falls' 1979 season opener is Thurs., Aug. 30, at Grand Forks Red River. Fans can get a look at the Prowlers Saturday during the sixth annual Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Pigskin Preview, scheduled to get underway at 1 p.m. on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

Waterfowl Season Will Open On Sat., Sept. 29

Minnesota's 1979 waterfowl hunting season will open at noon Saturday, September 29, and close at sunset Saturday, November 17, the Department of Natural Resources announced Friday.

Daily bag limit will be five with a possession limit of 10. No more than three mallards may be included in the daily bag, and of those no more than two may be hens. In addition, no more than one black duck and two wood ducks may be included with the daily bag.

Possession limit may include no more than six mallards (only four of which may be hens), two black ducks, four wood ducks, one redhead or one canvasback.

No hunting of canvasback or redhead will be allowed in the counties of Polk, Mahnomen, Douglas, Pope and Sibley. The Mississippi river bottoms from Hastings to the Iowa border will also be closed to hunting of canvasback and redhead.

Shooting hours, except for the noon opening, will be one-half hour before sunrise to 4 p.m. through October 19 and until sunset thereafter.

Throughout most of the state, the goose season will run concurrent with the duck season. However, an extra 20 days of hunting will be allowed in southeastern Minnesota.

Bag limit will be five, with restrictions on Canada and white fronted geese. A quota of 7,000 geese has been established by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for the Lac qui Parle wildlife management area in western Minnesota.

Joseph Alexander, commissioner of Natural Resources, said he was pleased that the federal government was allowing Minnesota to open the season on Saturday, September 29, instead of insisting on an October 1 opening, which this year falls on a Monday.

Alexander made a special trip to the annual meeting of the Mississippi Flyway council, held last month in Toledo, Ohio, to urge council officials to recommend a September 29 opening.

"The Saturday opening means that most hunters will be able to get out in the field and marsh on the first weekend of the season," he pointed out, "while a Monday opening would find most of them confined to their jobs."

He also noted that the earlier opening would allow hunters a better opportunity to harvest teal and several other species which migrate out of the state early in the fall.

Alexander said the state's mallard population continues to show the benefits of the bag limit restrictions and the effects of the 4 p.m. closure.

He said copies of the waterfowl hunting synopsis detailing the fine points of the regulations will be in the hands of license agents well in advance of the opening. He urged hunters to read the regulations carefully since they are rather lengthy and involved.

In addition to a small game license, hunters age 18 to 64 inclusive will require a state migratory waterfowl stamp and all hunters 16 years of age and older will also need a federal waterfowl stamp.

Officials said Minnesota produced a good hatch of ducks this year and the fall flight should be on a par with last season.

Alexander added that state regulations this year were finalized after listening to the views of a representative group of sportsmen, legislators and news-media personnel at a meeting held in St. Paul on August 16.

While it is improbable at this late date that there would be any change in the federal framework from which the state regulations are drawn, the deadline for change by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has not passed, Alexander noted. Therefore, changes are still possible, but not expected.

Cota, Coca-Cola Wrap Up 1979 Fast Pitch Crowns

Roger Cota and Coca-Cola were winners as the 1979 Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league season ended Friday. Cota, the league's leading hitter, went 4-for-4 and raised his batting average to .479 as Coca-Cola wrapped up a pennant-winning 15-1 campaign with a 7-4 win over Radio Shack.

Action Realty handled Melvies 13-5 in the first half of Friday's season-ending doubleheader. Coca-Cola edged Dallmann Athletic, Inc. 2-1 in a single Wednesday game.

The league will cap the summer schedule with a post-season playoff tournament Sunday on the fairgrounds diamond.

Coca-Cola 2
Dallmann Athletic . . 1

Dallmann Athletic, Inc. pitcher Mike Drury limited Coca-Cola to just a sixth inning bunt single, but the opportunistic Coca-Cola squad used that hit, along with three Dallmann Athletic, Inc. errors, to score two runs in a 2-1 victory.

Second inning walks issued to Randy Dallmann and Bruce Johnson, along with Steve Daley's bases-loading single into short center field and Drury's sacrifice fly to left field provided Dallmann Athletic, Inc. with a 1-0 lead.

Durry set down the first nine Coca-Cola hitters before Roger Cota reached base on a fourth inning error. Then in the sixth, Larry Coltom reached base on an error. Cota laid down a bunt single and when Rob Almquist bunted back to the pitcher, an attempt to nail Coltom at third resulted in a throwing error and the tying run. The winning run scored on an error on Tony Johnson's ground ball through the shortstop's legs.

Winning pitcher Tony Johnson, after giving up his third hit of the game — a one out third inning single to Gary Laidley — retired 14 consecutive Dallmann Athletic, Inc. batters to finish the game in impressive fashion.

Melvies 5

Action Realty scored five runs in the top of the fifth inning to come from behind and smash Melvies 13-5.

The winners started with a 2-0 lead in the top of the second on a walk to Mark Thorstad, a run-scoring sacrifice fly by Al Erickson, Brad Kosel's single to left and Scott Kleven's RBI double to center.

Melvies scored once in the bottom of the second, two in the third and one in the fourth on Karl Chromy's first home run of the year for a 4-2 lead.

However, Action Realty came up with three hits and Melvies committed four errors in the winner's five-run fifth.

Melvies added a run in the bottom of the inning to close the gap to 7-5, but Action Realty pushed two more runs across in the sixth and closed with a four-run seventh.

Coca-Cola 7
Radio Shack 4

Coca-Cola started with a bang Friday, scoring three times on four hits in the top of the first inning en route to a 7-4 victory over Radio Shack.

It became 5-0 before Radio Shack fought back, pulling within 5-4 in the third on back-to-back doubles by Jeff Hendrickson and Mitch Dicken.

But with pitcher Tony Johnson retiring the last eight Radio Shack batters he faced, Coca-Cola pulled away with single runs in the fourth and fifth.

Roger Cota's outstanding offensive season carried into the final game. In addition to lifting his league-leading batting average to .479, his perfect 4-for-4 finale also put him into the top position in runs scores with 20, hits with 23 and triples with two. He also finished in first place tie in doubles, homers and RBI's.

Error Noted On 1979 Deer Hunting Map

Department of Natural Resources reminded hunters that the 1979 big game hunting regulations and the antlerless permit applications have been shipped to license agents.

Roger Holmes, Chief of Wildlife, cautioned hunters to study the regulations before applying for an antlerless permit. Applications which are not properly completed will be rejected.

Deadline for submitting applications is Fri., Sept. 14.

Holmes also pointed out that antlerless permit area 15 is not numbered on the hunting regulations map. Permit area 15 is located northwest of Thief River Falls and surrounds permit area 11. It is bounded by areas 10, 13, 16 and 501. Permit area 15 has an antlerless quota of 300.

Harvesting Of Wild Rice Will Start Aug. 27

Wild rice harvesting season will begin Mon., Aug. 27, in Minnesota with ricing hours from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily, the Department of Natural Resources announced.

All lakes will be closed to harvesting on Sundays. Harvesters are required to have a state license (cost $4) which are available from county auditors offices.

Only persons of Indian blood or residents of Indian reservations who purchase special band permits may harvest wild rice within the boundaries of Indian reservations.

Copies of the wild rice law are available from the Department of Natural Resources Special Service Section, Box 37, Centennial Building, 658 Cedar Street, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Penn Swims Four State AAU Events

Tim Penn, Thief River Falls' lone entry in the 1979 state AAU swimming meet, swam four events during the post-season competition earlier this month at St. Louis Park.

Entered in the 11-12-year-old Class A competition, Penn tied for seventh in the 50-yard backstroke in 36.64; was tenth in the 50-yard butterfly in 34.76; placed 11th in the 100-yard freestyle in 1:09.02; and finished 14th in the 50-yard freestyle in 31.97.

He earned his state meet berths by matching AAU qualifying times during the regular season summer schedule. His 36.64 in the back stroke qualified for regional competition, but he declined the invitation to compete at Sioux City, Iowa.

Dan Vrudny, a Brainerd native, served as coach of the Thief River Falls AAU team.

NHF Day

September 22 is the date set for the 1979 National Hunting and Fishing day. This celebration started eight years ago with open houses at gun clubs around the nation. Last year there were organized shopping center programs and recently expanded school activities.

For additional information you may write to National Hunting And Fishing Day, 1075 Post Road, Riverside, Conn. 06878.

Our guest columnist is Dr. Joyce Tesarek of the Burnsville animal clinic who agreed to describe a common ailment of feline animals:

"One of the more common and frustrating medical problems facing cat owners and veterinarians has been called Feline Urologic Syndrome (FUS). Affected cats may show signs of bladder infection; frequent urination, bloody urine, straining in their litter box and urinating in abnormal places (in a sink or tub, or on a bedspread, in a corner on the carpet).

Male cats may form 'plugs' of mucus or small stones and be unable to ruinate. Owners often think these straining males are constipated and delay treatment, and this can be fatal for the 'blocked' cat.

Research into the cause of this syndrome is underway. Dirt, stress and viral infection may all play a part. FUS is a lifetime condition. Afflicted cats often have repeated episodes. There is no known cure. Special diets and medications are given to make cats more comfortable and to discourage formation of the mucus and stones that can cause obstructions.

A tomcat this is 'blocked' is an emergency. The obstruction must be removed usually under anesthesia, to allow him to urinate again. If this isn't done promptly, body wastes that normally are eliminated in urine, build up in the blood stream and the cat will die. Because, of the seriousness of this problem and the likilihood of it happening again, a plastic surgery has been developed to prevent males from obstructing. Unfortunately, the surgery will not cure FUS, and these cats again develop bladder infection, but it will no longer lead to a potentially life-threatening condition.

In animals and humans, urine is formed in the kidneys and stored in the bladder. When the bladder is full, urine leaves the body through a tube called the urethra. In female cats, the urethra is a short, wide tube. In males it begins wide, but at the end when it goes through the penis it narrows to about half its initial diameter. When male cats form stones, they pass out the bladder and through the wide urethra, but lodge where it narrows. This 'plug' prevents urine from leaving the body, which will eventually be fatal.

The surgery developed to help these cats involves surgical research of the narrow portion of the urethra, and is called a perineal urethrostomy. (PU). "A PU is a major surgery; sterile technique is used throughout. The patient is anesthetized, and its rear area and upper tail is shaved, cleaned, sterilized with a surgical scrub and draped. The urethra is located by the surgeon and dissected free from the other tissues past the point where the diameter widens.

The narrow portion is amputated. The wide portion is drawn to the rear and sutured to form a new, wider opening. This eliminates the point where obstructions occurred and gives the male a short, wide urethra, so future stones can be passed.

After-care involves careful attention to the incision, antibiotic and fluid therapy and a large collar for the cat to prevent his licking the incision.

FUS is an important condition for all cat owners to understand. In males, prompt recognition and attention to the problem can mean the difference between life and death."

Sioux Hockey Games Will Be On Television

Prairie Public Television will telecast 20 University of North Dakota home hockey games this season, according to an announcement made by Carl Miller, UND athletic director, and Dennis Falk, general manager of PPTV in Fargo.

The games will be braodcast via the Prairie Public Television network, which includes braodcast towers in Fargo, Grand Forks and Bismarck, and approximately 20 cable television systems in other parts of North Dakota (reaching as far north as Winnipeg, Manitoba).

All 1979-80 UND home hockey games, except the Minnesota-North Dakota series at UND Nov. 30-Dec. 1, will be telecast at 10:30 p.m. (a 2½-hour delay). The games against Minnesota will be telecast live.

UND is defending Western Collegiate Hockey Association champion, and was runner-up for the NCAA Division I hockey championship. The WCHA generally is recognized as the world's toughest collegiate hockey league, Miller said.

"We are extremely pleased to have North Dakota's public television stations pick up and telecast our home games this season," Miller said. "We've had tremendous fan interest from all areas of the state, and these broadcasts will allow fans in all parts of North Dakota to see the Fighting Sioux in action this season."

The UND television department will provide technical production for the telecasts, including a producer, director, engineer and technician. The speech department will provide play-by-play and color announcers and camera operators.

No road games will be handled by the PBS telecast crew.

Schedule of PBS telecasts of UND home hockey games includes Oct. 26-27 vs. Colorado College; Nov. 2-3 vs. Michigan Tech; Nov. 16-17 vs. St. Lawrence University; Nov. 30-Dec. 1 vs. Minnesota; Dec. 21-22 vs. Ohio State; Dec. 29-30 to be announced; Jan 11-12 vs. Notre Dame; Jan. 18-19 vs. Minnesota-Duluth; Feb. 8-9 vs. Denver; and Feb. 22-23 vs. Michigan.

Trapping Policy Proposed For Refuge System

Limited trapping of fur-bearing animals on national wildlife refuges would continue to be permitted under an updated trapping policy proposed by the Interior Department's U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The proposal makes no major changes in existing policy, but consolidates previous directives and clarifies administrative procedures for allowing trapping on national wildlife refuges. The proposal is consistent with recommendations which Secretary of the Interior Cecil D. Andrus approved March 29 for management of the national wildlife refuge system.

Furbearers are mammals whose pelts (and sometimes carcasses) generally have commercial value. Some of the more commonly harvested species are muskrat, nutria, raccoon, fox, mink, beaver and skunk. Trapping is presently permitted on about 20 percent of the 390 national wildlife refuges.

Under the proposal, the service would continue to permit trapping of furbearers where it contributes to or is compatible with the management objectives of the refuge. The proposed policy is based on the premise that furbearers often produce a harvestable surplus (more animals then are needed to maintain desirable breeding population levels).

"Under good habitat conditions and sound wildlife management practices, harvestable surpluses of furbearers are frequently produced on refuges," service director Lynn A. Greenwalt said. "Properly regulated trapping has no harmful effect on the long-term well-being of such wildlife populations or their habitats. The service also recognizes that trapping, along with hunting and fishing, is a necessary tool of effective wildlife management and a legitimate recreational activity."

Trapping on national wildlife refuges is sometimes necessary to manage furbearer populations. High concentrations of animals such as muskrat can devastate vegetation that is essential to a balanced ecosystem. Certain furbearing predators can also destroy waterfowl nests, eggs and young. The toll on duck nests by raccons, for example, can run as high as 80 to 90 per cent on some areas. Excessive numbers of furbearers also may increase the likelihood of rabies or other diseases that can be transmitted to humans, dmestic animals or other wildlife. The service's proposed trapping policy would include, but is not limited to, such situations.

The proposed policy requires the preparation of a trapping plan for each refuge trapping program. The trapping plan forms the basis for determining whether removal of furbearers is compatible with refuge objectives and which method of removal is most appropriate. Refuge managers are encouraged to require the most efficient and humane trapping techniques available for the target species and habitat of their refuges.

Applicants for refuge trapping permits must possess the required state licenses and permits and must have reached the age of majority in the state in which trapping will occur. Previous trapping experience and training are among other considerations which will affect the eligibility of permit applicants.

Notice of the proposed policy was published in the July 9, 1979, Federal Register. Additional information and copies of the proposal may be obtained from the Director (RF), U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240. Public comments on the proposal are invited.

STEPPING ON the plate ahead of a swiping tag by Home Lumber catcher Tom Barry, First Federal Savings & Loan Association base runner Rick Reierson completed a second inning inside-the-park home run in the Wednesday finals of the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association division II playoffs. Reierson rounded the bases when the leftfielder came up empty-handed trying for a diving catch of a sinking line drive. The ball rolled to the fence and Reierson scored. First Federal Savings & Loan Association was an easy 17-3 winner.

PLEASE DON'T TOUCH LAWRENCE

LAWRENCE THE LAKE TROUT, claimed to be the only talking fish in Minnesota, will be on display at the Minnesota state fair again this year from August 23 through September 3. The talking trout will discuss why fish have scales and topics such as state history, economics and littering. Lawrence is part of the University of Minnesota exhibit in the education building at the state fair. The display focuses on Minnesota water resources and projects to improve them — matters that the trout calls "almost as interesting as fish history." The exhibit, which is free, also contains pictures, computer games and working models that demonstrate the importance of water to Minnesota's environment, economy and recreation. —University News Service.

Fitness In Youth Promoted

Physical fitness is a way of life. Unfortunately, many children and teen-agers are not being taught to incorporate physical exercise and sensible eating habits into their life styles, according to physicians at St. Paul children's hospital.

Lack of physical activity is directly related to a number of organic diseases. For example, the mortality rate for degenerative heart disease is twice as high in sedentary persons as it is in persons who have been physically active throughout their lives. And many other conditions occur more often in inactive persons.

Dr. Russell LaBeau, medical director of emergency services and adolescent services at the hospital, says, "Preventing the onset of coronary artery diseases should begin during childhood with regular physical exercise and a diet that does not include excessive calories, carbohydrates and fats.

Recent studies show that when parents are concerned about good health practices their children will develop similar attitudes toward their health. Parents should cultivate good physical and nutritional practices within the family unit.

Before participating in athletics, especially highly demanding, competitive and contact sports, a child or teenager should have a complete physical examination with emphasis on nerve, muscle and heart conditions that could interfere with participation.

The physician can identify any limitations in physical capacity, suggest suitable exercise programs and activities, and recommend appropriate diet and rest needs.

"A physical fitness program should be tailored to the individual," LaBeau says. "If a child or teen-ager doesn't have the ability or desire to participate in competitive team sports, he or she can participate in intramurals or in individual exercise programs."

An exercise program should include activities that have good carry-over value for later life. Long-term physical fitness should be cultivated by encouraging participating in individual sports, in addition to team sports participation. LaBeau says, "The main idea is that young people do something that is fun because if they're not having fun, it won't be long before they quit."

Individual sports that are likely to lead to healthy activity patterns in adulthood include walking, running, swimming, racquetball, handball, tennis and biking. The individual's activities should be directed toward conditioning or toward the development of endurance. "Exercising vigorously three of four times a week is sufficient for cardiovascular benefits," LaBeau says. "But I feel strongly that exercising every day also helps a person's frame of mind.

"A physical training program should be preceded by appropriate physical examinations and fitness tests, and it should be individualized according to needs and deficiencies of the child or teenager, including consideration of his or her probable future exercise pattern and the opportunities for sports provided by the environment in which he or she lives," he said.

Health is an active state of physical and mental well-being. Physical activity and proper diet from an early age are significant factors in a healthy life.

State DNR Trout Brood Stock Stolen

Department of Natural Resources reports that 30 large trout used to propagate fish for stocking purposes were stolen from an outdoor pond at the Lanesboro fish hatchery in southeastern Minnesota the night of August 12.

Jim Schneider, DNR regional fisheries manager, said two of the fish were brown trout weighing about 12 pounds each and the others were a mixture of brook, brown and rainbow trout weighing between two and 12 pounds. Altogether, about 180 pounds of fish were taken, he said.

MAHA Meeting Set Saturday In Grand Rapids

With the start of the 1979-80 season, the Minnesota Amateur Hockey Association (MAHA) will be beginning its 33rd year of operation.

The season will begin with an annual meeting to be held at the Rainbow Inn in Grand Rapids Saturday, August 25 at 1 p.m.

The meeting is open to the public and anyone interested in amateur hockey in Minnesota is encouraged to attend.

This season over 4,500 teams involving more than 90,000 players from ages 6 to over 60 will participate in various programs with MAHA.

State DNR Sets Ginseng Season Dates

A newly established season for the harvest of wild ginseng began August 15, the Department of Natural Resources announced.

Federal export regulations required the state to initiate the season this year, said officials.

The roots of wild ginseng are traditionally dug, dried and exported to the orient where they are highly valued for their medicinal values.

Wild ginseng may be dug without limit and each plant dug must have at least three prongs (leaves) consisting of five leaflets each.

Immediately after digging a wild ginseng plant, the digger shall remove all of the seeds from the berries and plant them in the area where the plant was dug. Seeds must be planted by removing surface litter, planting each seed at a depth of one-half inch in the soil, and replacing the surface litter over the planting site.

Wild ginseng dealer's are required to have a dealers license (cost $5) which are available from county auditors offices. Diggers are not required to have a license.

Wild ginseng may not be dug on state park land, but it may be dug on state wildlife management areas if the digger first obtains a permit from the wildlife manager. It may also be dug on state forest lands without permits.

Diggers are reminded that they must comply with appropriate Minnesota trespass laws.

Copies of the ginseng law are available from the Section of Wildlife, Box 7, Centennial Bldg., 658 Cedar Street, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Interpretative Refuge News Made Available

How many times have you planned a trip to a new area and wished you could obtain some pre-trip information on natural features you might see?

Pre-trip information is now available through the combined efforts of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) and the Lake States Interpretative Association (LSIA). According to FWS sources, the information is in the form of a list of publications on natural resource concerns for each of three states: Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

The list provides reading suggestions on wildlife, ecology and natural features that people may encounter on their trips to national wildlife refuges or similar natural areas. The publications can be obtained at local libraries or bookstores. The list also contains a mail order form for people who would like to purchase books directly from LSIA.

Material identified by LSIA should prove a valuable aid to teachers, students, outdoor recreationists and other enthusiasts of outdoor oriented activities.

LSIA is a non-profit corporation governed by a board of directors composed of interested citizens. Any profits from the sale of material by LSIA will be invested in more publications and other interpretative programs for cooperators of the association.

Currently, three federal natural resource areas are cooperating units of the association: Seney national wildlife refuge in Michigan, Voyageurs national park and Chippewa national forest in Minnesota. Voyageurs national park provides the headquarters for the association.

Copies of the list of publications for Michigan, Wisconsin or Minnesota can be obtained from the nearest national wildlife refuge in those states or write:

Sports Too Early May Impair Bone Growth In Children

by Jeanne Hanson
"U" M News Service

It is a beautiful summer day at the local swimming pool, so the instructor has the young beginners swim four lengths during their half-hour lesson.

This seemingly harmless exercise could harm the youngsters' bone growth, perhaps permanently, according to biomechanics expert Lela Stoner.

"It's kind of insane," said Stoner, director of the biomechanics laboratory and assistant professor of physical education at the University of Minnesota.

Stoner has combined research on children's bone growth with her knowledge of sports training, and has come up with her own "prescription" for children's summer sports: Prolonged exercise, particularly repetitive drills and sports that only use part of the body, should not be practiced by children until after the age of 13 or 14.

Here's what can happen, according to Stoner:

—Emphasizing one of two muscles leads to a boost of bone growth near them, causing the pain and imbalance common in such conditions as "little league pitcher's elbow."

—A sport that exercises one side of the body more than the other can cause a difference in bone development from side to side. American soccer, for example, can make a child a bit "lopsided," Stoner said.

—Repetitive drills, such as swimming several laps, can cause "fatigue fractures." If fractures like these recur, a child could be unable to perform in his or her favorite sport by high school or college.

—A fracture at the "epiphyseal" center — the bone growth center — can disrupt growth, sometimes permanently. The change in the child's skeletal alignment may not be obvious but may continue to cause pain. These vulnerable points, one in each bone, do not close fully until age 18, Stoner said.

"A child with growing bones is not a miniature adult," Stoner said. The child should not "train" or even concentrate on one sport exclusively.

In swimming, for example, one or two-hour daily drills could damage a child's arm and leg bones, Stoner said. Even 10 to 15 laps of a single stroke are too many for a young child. Practice should be gradual and include a variety of strokes.

Baseball players of little league age should not be allowed to pitch more than two innings a game and should avoid throwing "curve" balls, Stoner said. Drills in hard throwing for any position should also be limited, she said. Practice in "giving" when catching a ball and in safe falling should be offered.

Tennis tends to develop the right arm and left leg, Stoner said, and tennis camps that don't allow time for other sports can be especially bad.

Ballet and gymnastics also can be quite stressful. Male ballet dancers, who usually begin training much later than females, have been found to have fewer skeletal abnormalities, Stoner said. "Toe" work is a bad idea before age 12, and women gymnasts who begin before age 14 develop smaller pelvises than later starters, even when their heights are the same, Stoner said.

Coaches should know about problems like these but often don't, nor do enthusiastic parents, or high school students drafted as part-time coaches.

"It's incredible how many coaches there are in recreation departments and even in the schools, who know nothing about children," Stoner said. She stressed the value of licensed coaches, who are required to learn training progressions appropriate for children.

Of course, Stoner said, children can injure their bones in spontaneous play with older or bigger children too.

"Don't panic though," she said. "Try to protect children from the pressure to do too much, and counsel them to remember that pain is the best signal to stop. Concentrate on a variety of non-contact sports, especially those that use the whole body, and keep drills short and varied. Make sure children wear equipment that fits, and play on safe areas. Adjust the game to the child — use an eight-foot basketball standard, for example."

Vigorous activity actually helps the bones to grow, as long as it is done safely, Stoner said.

Meyerhofer Receives UND Scholarship

Kay Ann Meyerhofer of Thief River Falls has been awarded a Maxwell M. Upson scholarship to attend the University of North Dakota at Grand Forks this fall, according to Dr. Gerald F. Hamerlik, director of student financial aids.

The scholarships were established by Maxwell Mayhew Upson, an 1896 UND graduate who won wide recognition as a businessman and engineering innovator in New York. The university's engineering complex is named in his honor.

Recipients of the scholarship are chosen on the basis of scholastic achievement, character, motivation and leadership.

Miss Meyerhofer was active as a flag-bearer in a drum and bugle corps in school, in addition to being a member of the Pep club and Usherettes. She is currently a reader during church services and was a campaign worker for the American cancer society and a member of the CYO.

Free Hotline Established To Aid Truckers

To provide up-to-date information on what fuel surcharge state-regulated motor carriers may assess, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) has established a toll-free hotline, according to commissioner Richard P. Braun.

This free service for motor carriers began August 13. Call (800) — 652-9747 and ask the operator for the truckers fuel surcharge message. Motor carriers may call this telephone number between 7:30 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Braun said Mn-DOT's action was taken in response to the state of emergency declared June 19 to alleviate conditions brought about by the truckers strike. Fuel surcharge is subject to change weekly. Current surcharge is 8 per cent.

Minnesota public service commission is allowing for intrastate traffic, the same surcharge the interstate commerce commission sets for interstate traffic.

Heavy Vehicle Owners Must File Tax Form

August 31 is the date by which most owners of large trucks, truck tractors, or busses in Minnesota must file a federal highway use tax return, Form 2290, according to the internal revenue service.

The tax year for the highway use tax begins July 1, 1979, and runs through the following June 30, 1980. Vehicles placed in service after July must have Form 2290 filed with the Ogden service center by the last day of the month following the month a vehicle is used on a public highway for the first time.

According to the IRS, the tax generally applies to single unit trucks weighing 13,000 pounds or more, 2-axled truck-tractors weighing 5,500 pounds or more, 3 or more axled truck-tractors regardless of weight, trucks of 9,000 or more pounds equipped for use in combinations, and busses with a gross weight of more than 26,000 pounds.

Revenue from the highway use tax program assists states in financing the interstate highway system, but the tax is imposed on those vehicles using any public highways, city streets, state roads and interstate roadways.

Form 2290 and the free IRS publication 349, "Federal Highway Use Tax on Trucks, Truck-Tractors, and Buses," are available from IRS district offices.

Grain Strike Affects Short Term Prices

Price differentials for corn on Minneapolis and Chicago markets indicate that the Duluth grain handlers strike is having a substantial impact on short-term grain prices, a University of Minnesota economist reports.

"The to-arrive truck bids for corn into Minneapolis river markets are running 40-41 cents per bushel under the Chicago September futures price," reports Will Anthony, extension agricultural economist. "Normally, those bids are about 10 cents under the futures price. This means we're looking at a price about 30 cents lower than it normally has been at this time of the year."

Part of the 30 cent gap could be attributable to slightly higher transportation costs in general, and to the large amounts of grain available for marketing. But the major impact comes from the strike, Anthony says.

Long term results are harder to predict and to measure, he adds. "Corn buyers will redouble their search to find supplies elsewhere. This has a discouraging impact, especially on foreign buyers."

Another loss to farmers results from what Anthony describes as "the degree to which the strike and other transportation problems are adding uncertainty to the market." Such uncertainty prompts country elevators to take more price protection and bid less aggressively for the farmers' grain.

"Now, all grain for export has to be moved to the waterways," he adds. "This is more expensive. All this uncertainty translates into a lower price for farmers."

HRI Students Employed In Local Firms

Three area students, all restaurant management majors of the hotel, restaurant and institutional management division (HRI) at the University of Minnesota-Crookston (UMC) are currently employed in Thief River Falls. The students are to learn all phases of the operation for nine credits in the HRI division.

Holli Drees, Thief River Falls, daughter of Harley and Barbara Drees, is currently employed at the Best Western motor inn.

Terry Oakland, Red Lake Falls, son of Harold and Velma Oakland, are currently employed at Kife's cafe.

Patricia Swedenburg, Thief River Falls, daughter of Donald and Dorothy Swedenburg, is currently employed at Lon's.

Each of the four academic, degree-granting divisions at UMC has an internship program designed to provide the student with practical knowledge and work experience in his field. Students usually complete their internship requirement during the summer between their freshman and sophomore years. The assignment enables the intern to gain college credits toward an associate in applied science degree. Internship coordinators work with their students, placing them into a position that is closely allied with their particular major subject.

Harry Sjulsons Return From Tour Of Alaska

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sjulson, St. Hilaire, recently returned from a 14-day tour of Alaska sponsored by "Successful Farming" magazine.

The trip included a motorcoach tour of the interior from Anchorage to Whitehorse via Mt. McKinley national park and Fairbanks; a narrow-gauge train ride along the storied gold rush route to Skagway; and a scenic cruise through Alaska's inside passage with stops in Juneau, Glacier Bay and Sitka.

They also inspected farms in the Matanuska valley near Anchorage and in the Fairbanks area.

Tim Schmidt Enlists In US Navy Program

Timothy Schmidt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Schmidt of Red Lake Falls, has enlisted into the U.S. navy's delayed entry program (DEP). DEP allows young men and women to enlist, but not report to active duty for up to a year.

Timothy is scheduled to report to Great Lakes next June to begin recruit training. He was enlisted into the navy by Mike Barrett, the navy recruiter in Grand Forks.

"Everybody is Somebody in Thief River Falls"

Published Twice A Week

THIEF RIVER FALLS TIMES 15c

Volume 68, (USPS 627-360) Thief River Falls, Pennington County, Minnesota Wednesday, August 22, 1979 Number 66

4-H CLUB MEMBERS from Marshall and Pennington counties who attended the Washington citizenship focus in Washington, D.C., July 28 to August 4 learned about their country's history and operation of their government. Left to right are Donna Nelson, Cedar 4-H club, Marshall county; Jim Rooker, New Solum club, Pennington county; Sue Spengler, Silverton club, Pennington county; and Jim Moe, Holt club, Marshall county.

Four From Area Make 4-H Trip To Washington

Four Pennington and Marshall county 4-H club members returned recently from the Washington citizenship focus program held at the 4-H center in Washington, D.C. They were among 99 people from Minnesota and over 600 from 11 states to attend the event.

Attending were Sue Spengler of the Silverton club and Jim Rooker of the New Solum club in Pennington county, Donna Nelson of the Cedar club and Jim Moe of the Holt club in Marshall county.

Emphasis at the Washington, D.C., session, known in prior years as the citizenship short course, was on energy conservation. "It's a Time for Decisions" was the theme of the program.

Asked about individual impressions of the July 28-August 4 week, Sue Spengler said she was impressed with being able to meet Senators Rudy Boschwitz and David Durenberger and Congressman Arlan Stangeland, as well as the information received on energy conservation.

Donna Nelson thought Capitol Hill was the most impressive and that it was interesting to see the buildings often pictured in newspapers and television as part of government events.

Jim Moe said he enjoyed the tours and stopping to see an uncle who is employed in the interstate commerce department. Jim Rooker thought the opportunity to visit historic sites was worthwhile, as well as seeing the stage production of "Peter Pan" and getting autographs from star Sandy Duncan.

Tours and activity schedule allowed the group to view Gettysburg, have a night view of Washington with a stop at the Lincoln memorial, and visit Kennedy center and Eisenhower theatre, Arlington national cemetery, Washington cathedral, Mount Vernon, Washington monument, national archives, national gallery of art and national zoo.

Energy Costs Are City Council Topic

A load management system to reduce energy costs for the city, preliminary report on water main replacement and service connection repairs, and a request for a study to determine the feasibility of adequately remodeling and enlarging the city's off-sale facility or constructing a new facility on the same site were among the topics of discussion at an adjourned regular meeting of the Thief River Falls city council held Tuesday.

Superintendent of utilities John T. Anderson and city distribution engineer Arlo Rude were in attendance to present a packet of information regarding the city's present energy costs and alternative load management systems.

Briefly, the city receives power from two sources, Western Area Power Administration (W.A.P.A.) and Red Lake Electric Cooperative (R.L.E.C.). Thief River Falls purchases as much power as W.A.P.A. will supply at an approximate cost of eight mills per kilowatt hour. Whatever power the city needs beyond what W.A.P.A. will furnish is purchased from R.L.E.C. at higher rates.

At certain times, particularly as a result of electric and water heat loads, energy useage increases beyond normal limits necessitating a purchase of greater amounts of power from R.L.E.C. at even higher rates. This "peak energy" is the most costly to purchase since suppliers must invest in expensive equipment just to meet peak demands. To regain the capital investment, producers rates for the peak energy supplied by the equipment are set very high. Each kilowatt of peak energy supplied by R.L.E.C. to the city costs approximately $6 a month or $72 a year.

Philosophy behind the load management system is that if the city could hold the peak demand at the lowest possible level it would not have to purchase as much power at the higher rates. Method used to do this would be to predict a peak and then shed as large a load as necessary to prevent the power demand from going into the peak levels.

A computerized system being recommended by the utilities department, for example, would automatically, reduce or shut off (interrupt) power going to home heating systems during peak periods. Customers who chose to participate in the interruptable installation program would then receive a lower rate for electric heat

DU Chapter's Annual Dinner Slated Tuesday

Northwest chapter of Ducks Unlimited is making final preparations for its annual banquet to be held Tuesday at 6 p.m. at the national guard armory in Thief River Falls.

All current members of the organization have been sent renewal notices for membership and are urged to send or bring renewals to Stan Upham or Dennis Wojahn at Thune-Upham Insurance agency.

Because of the expanding membership and large participation in the annual dinner meeting, the change was made to the armory location this year. Lon's restaurant will cater the meal. Availability of the larger meeting place means that additional memberships may be accepted this year, Upham said, and persons who have not been members but would like to join in the conservation effort may contact him or Wojahn at 681-1714 or Stan Sjoberg at 681-3044.

School Report Included With Shoppers Guide

With Thief River Falls public schools scheduled to open on Wednesday, August 29, School District 564 has prepared an annual report with back to school information which will be distributed Monday with the Northern Minnesota Shopper's Guide.

Anyone who does not receive a Shopper's Guide with the annual report supplement may receive a copy of the supplement at the school district service center office.

TRF Designated Region's Economic Growth Center

Recently completed overall economic development program (OEDP) for region one designates Thief River Falls as the primary economic growth center in the region. The plan, which was approved at recent Pennington county board and Thief River Falls city council meetings, intends to offer guidelines for development in Kittson, Marshall, Norman, Pennington, Red Lake and Roseau counties with Thief River Falls named primary economic growth center over Crookston and East Grand Forks because of its central location and transportation system.

The OEDP describes Thief River Falls' transportation system as including regional air service, a network of all weather nine-ton roadways and two railroad freight operations. The local road network consists of U.S. highway 59 running northwest and southeast, state highway 1 running east and west and highway 32 running north and south and the freight operations consist of service by Burlington Northern and Soo Line. These systems provide ample shipping methods for regional goods.

Also taken into consideration in designating the primary growth center were population and per capita income growth rates over the past 40 years. Thief River Falls ranked high in continued growth while most other cities showed fluctuating growth rates.

Also mentioned as attributes of Thief River Falls was its location in the center of region one and on the Red Lake river at the confluence of the Thief River. Because of its central regional location the city is easily accessible to surrounding secondary growth centers and as a result of its location on the two rivers, Thief River Falls is a minor tourist attraction with opportunities for water-based recreational activities.

Arctic Enterprises was also acknowledged in the OEDP as providing major employment opportunities for those residing in the central area of region one.

The 146-page OEDP has been developed by the Northwest Regional Development Commission (NWRDC) through funding from the federal economic development administration and the Upper Great Lakes Commission. An excess of 50 persons had input in the development of the plan representing cities, counties and public interest groups in the region.

Those serving on the 33-member Northwest Regional Development Commission from Pennington county were Don Grabanski, Thief River Falls, Pennington county board member; Norma Hanson, Goodridge, public representative; Richard Kruse, Thief River Falls, township representative; Norm Cruse, Thief River Falls, public representative; and Ambrose Wysoski, Thief River Falls, Thief River Falls city council member. Also involved in the development of the OEDP were Carol Belland, Thief River Falls, and George Schwartz, Thief River Falls, both members of a 14-member economic development committee.

Key objectives of the OEDP are to present an overview of the region, outline economic problems and prioritize proposed projects based on the positive effects they would have in the region, especially in the area of employment and per capita income.

NWRDC has been designated as a clearinghouse for region one, giving it the authority to review all applications for federal funding prior to grant approval or disapproval. Through the review process NWRDC hopes to be able to identify possible conflicts of inconsistencies in the applications and to make some judgement on the impact of the project on regional Screening schedule for four-year-olds at Plummer, Middle River and Goodridge schools was incorrectly reported in Monday's issue of the Times, due to receipt of inaccurate information.

Schedule as corrected will include testing at the Faith Lutheran church in Goodridge on Monday, August 27; Immanuel Lutheran church of Plummer on Tuesday, August 28; First Lutheran church of Middle River Wednesday, August 29; and Grace Lutheran church in Grygla Thursday, August 30.

Appointments for the screening have been made with the testing schedule to begin at 9 a.m. at Goodridge and 8:30 a.m. at each of the other sites. Purpose of the screening is to provide the school system in each community with a complete health history on each child and identify children who may have health or developmental problems.

Chamber Names Dale Dillon As President-Elect

Dale Dillon, owner of Paint & Glass supply in Thief River Falls, was elected to the post of president-elect on the Thief River Falls chamber of commerce board at a meeting of the board Tuesday evening.

The advancement was made to fill the position left vacant by the resignation of George Schwartz from the board. Schwartz, president of First Northwestern state bank in Thief River Falls, will leave the community this fall to head a bank in Fargo, N.D. He resigned from the chamber of commerce board effective with the July meeting.

Bob Kosel was elected to the board to fill Schwartz' unexpired term as a director. The term will expire in 1980. Kosel, vice president-marketing at First Northwestern bank, was also elected treasurer of the organization to succeed Dillon.

Board president Richard (Bud) Evans presented Schwartz with an appreciation plaque from the organization at last night's meeting in recognition of his service to the community.

Nursing Shortage - National Problem Becomes Local

25 Beds Closed At NW Hospital Due To Staffing

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Shortage of registered nurses termed "critical" by Mrs. Marilyn Wigness, director of nurses at Northwestern hospital services in Thief River Falls, has resulted in the closing down of 25 beds at the hospital to "match patients to the amount of nursing care available."

Cut-back is primarily in the medical-surgical area where elective surgeries are being limited to slow down patient flow. Adjustments are also being made in other areas such as intensive care and medical areas where cut-backs are being made in services offered so that patient needs can be met.

"We've never been in such a tight bind," Mrs. Wigness said. "At present we are short 16 full and part-time registered nurses for authorized staff positions. We would hire to fill almost all of those positions if we could, although it is true that we have never had all of the authorized positions filled in the past.

"During the period from May of 1978 through August 15 of this year we have lost 26 registered nurses from our staff. We have been able to replace only 18 of those, and we did not have all authorized positions filled back in May of 1978. Inability to replace nurses who have left our employ combined with unfilled positions in 1978 has created the local shortage and made it necessary to curtail certain services."

The nursing director said that many of the 26 nurses who resigned did so because their husbands were relocating in other communities. Several graduate nurses failed to pass state board examinations to become registered nurses. Other losses were due to nurses quitting work to attend more closely to home and family needs, taking promotions or transfers within the nursing profession such as government or quasi-government service, or going back to school for additional training.

As might be expected, the shortage of nursing personnel has placed unusual stress on the remaining nurses during their regular shifts. "There is the same amount of work to be done but fewer hands to do it," is the way Mrs. Wigness described the situation. As a result, nurses are frustrated at not being able to do all they would like to do to assist their patients. Necessary care is still being given, but nurses frequently must cut corners in EMPTY BEDS in a hospital are in a way like empty shelves in a supermarket — they produce no income. Trustees responsible for affairs of Northwestern hospital services in Thief River Falls have nearly constantly sought greater utilization of hospital beds to provide the necessary revenue for operation. Now, although the demand has been created, 25 beds at the hospital have been idled because of lack of adequate nursing staff to provide proper nursing care. The local hospital is feeling the effects of a nursing shortage with nation-wide implications.

National View Presented At Board Meeting

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Discussion of the nation-wide shortage of registered nurses and its relationship to hospital operations was presented by Barbara Donaho, executive director of nursing at Abbot-Northwestern hospital in Minneapolis, at the monthly meeting of the Northwestern hospital board of trustees Monday evening.

Mrs. Donaho pointed out that the U.S. department of health, education and welfare (HEW) position is that there is no shortage of registered nurses in the nation and as a result some subsidies for nursing programs have been withdrawn. Reduction of available funds has caused cut-backs in nurse training programs at a time when hospitals across the country are experiencing a short supply of registered nurses.

Expressing the opinion that HEW "has very poor information on need", she pointed out that the department uses as its base figure the total of all registered nurses licensed to practice in each of the states. No allowance is made for nurses holding licensure but not practicing, nor for nurses who maintain licenses to practice in more than one state.

"Just as an example," Mrs. Donaho said, "I have license to practice in five states. I am counted five times in the HEW statistics."

Speaking from the experience she has gained in studying the situation, Mrs. Donaho listed reasons for the shortage she has found to exist wherever she has made contact with hospital nursing administrators.

Demand has increased for registered nurses in several areas. More technical types of services offered in hospitals has resulted in prior nursing care staffs comprised of 50 per cent registered nurses now consisting of 75 per cent RN's.

Nurses are being drawn into other fields, including government and quasi-government agencies, medical doctor's offices, specialty areas and even into equipment sales and risk management or insurance areas.

In addition, colleges and universities are being en-

DUTIES ARE THE SAME but there are fewer hands to do the work when shortage of nurses strikes a hospital. Remaining nurses are called upon to perform under a good deal of stress as they attempt to take up the slack of vacant positions. As the illustration above attempts to portray, the vacant position leaves necessary work to be done by someone else. Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls is now short 16 registered nurses from its authorized staff complement.

Joy Grant-Scott Reed Marriage Vows Spoken

Miss Joy Irene Grant and Scott C. Reed, both of this city, exchanged marriage vows recently at Trinity Lutheran church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Fred P. Grant and Mr. and Mrs. Carl L. Reed.

Rev. Marden Wickman, pastor of the Evangelical Covenant church, officiated at the double ring ceremony. Organist was Mrs. Carl Nordvall. She played "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," as the bride was escorted to the altar by her father. During the ceremony, John Hustad sang, "Because," "Evergreen," and "The Lord's Prayer."

For her wedding, the bride selected an Alfred Angelo original of white polyester crepe. Wide lace, dotted with pearls, formed the cuffs on her long, fitted sleeves and enhanced the mandarin collar on her deep, U-shaped, gathered plastron. Matching lace edged the slightly gathered skirt which flowed back into a chapel-length train. A coordinating headpiece held her fingertip veil of bridal illusion. She carried a bouquet of peach roses, white daisies and babies' breath together with a linen handkerchief edged in tatted lace, made by the groom's grandmother.

Jean Prichard, Bismarck, N.D., attended her sister as matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Carla Reed, sister of the groom, and Karen Ferguson and Chery DePetro, friends of the bride. Their identical, peach colored gowns with keyhole necklines, accented by Peter Pan collars, were styled with pleated bodices and belted waistlines. They carried bouquets of peach and white daisies, miniature yellow mums, and peach streamers.

Attending the groom as best man was his brother, Kirk Reed of this city. Groomsmen were Mark Zanaria, friend of the groom; Jim Grant, brother of the bride, and Gordon Prichard, brother-in-law of the bride. The ushers were Ron and Rudy Stark and Rob and Steve Blanc. All wore gray tuxedos with white ruffled shirts and peach carnation boutonnieres.

The mother of the bride wore a mint green gown with a corsage of white daisies, small yellow mums and babies' breath. A similar corsage was worn by the groom's mother, who was attired in a beige and rose print gown.

Special guests were Mrs. Ellen Mortenson, Devils Lake, N.D., grandmother of the bride; Mrs. Pauline Culver, Thief River Falls, grandmother of the groom; and Joanne Zanaria, the bride's personal attendant.

A reception in the church parlors followed. Highlighting the serving table was a three-tiered wedding cake, iced in white with delicate stringwork and garlands. Daisies, matching those in the bride's bouquet, decorated the cake and accented the wedding bell ornament that topped the upper tier.

Serving as host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Neal Fox and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Shea of Fargo, N.D., godparents of the bride. Jody Dallmann registered the guests as Wayne and Laura Ortloff served the punch.

The wedding cake was cut and served by Mrs. Gordon Game, Glyndon, and Mrs. Douglas Peterson. Pouring coffee were Mrs. Everett Amundgaard and Mrs. Sonia Blanc, Minneapolis. Waitresses were Jeannan Blanc, Stacey Game, Maree Gloger, Lexy Gloger, Robyn Dallmann and Frances Kuyath. Tammy Folger and Deb Williams arranged the gifts.

The bride is a graduate of Lincoln high school and St. Luke's school of Nursing, Duluth. She is employed by St. Mary's hospital in Minneapolis. The groom, a graduate of Lincoln high school and Bemidji State University, is employed by FMC, Minneapolis.

The couple is at home at 4344, Third Street, N.E., Columbia Heights. Photo, Neal Fox Studio, Thief River Falls.

Catastrophic Insurance Opposed By NREA Group

Catastrophic insurance was discussed at the meeting of the Northland Retired Educators association (NREA) held Wednesday at the Public Library meeting room.

In the discussion, it was learned that due to loopholes and exceptions in policies, the insured could, in a catastrophic illness lose their life savings. It was also felt that that type of health insurance would raise hospital charges, physicians' fees and skyrocket insurance premiums. Following the discussion, it was decided that the insurance was inadequate and members agreed to write senators asking them to oppose any bills proposing catastrophic health insurance by itself.

A special feature at the meeting was a floral arrangement demonstration by Ruth Shefveland. In giving the demonstration, she traced the history of floral art in America. She stated that the four necessary materials are form flowers, line flowers, filler flowers and greens, and the requisites are composition, focus, balance and unity.

Research Team To Study Heart Attack Victims

Can heart attacks be prevented by lowering cholesterol? That is the question posed by a team of University of Minnesota doctors conducting a study of the relationship between cholesterol and heart disease.

"Heart disease is the leading cause of death and disability in the United States," said Dr. Henry Buchwald, head of the Twin Cities based study. "Nearly all heart disease results from atherosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries — the tubes which must continually supply blood containing life-giving oxygen and nourishment to the heart and other organs. Atherosclerosis gradually thickens and narrows arteries until blood can no longer flow through them; the result of this narrowing is usually acute illness, the most prevalent of which is a heart attack."

According to Dr. Buchwald, cholesterol, a fatty substance, is found in diseased arteries and may represent a clue to the cause of atherosclerosis. Also, the amount of cholesterol found in our blood can predict, somewhat, how likely we are to have heart attacks. Facts such as these have led many doctors to use various means to lower blood cholesterol in their patients; it is still uncertain, however, whether such lowering can actually prevent heart attacks.

University of Minnesota research team is now seeking individuals from 25 through 59 years of age who have had only one heart attack in the past five years. Such individuals may obtain more information about the study by calling the University of Minnesota hyperlipi[illegible] study collect at [illegible]

50th Anniversary Is Noted By Ernest Corks

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Cork of Thief River Falls were honored at an open house on Sunday, July 1, on observance of their 50th wedding anniversary. The event, held at St. Bernard's church parlors, was preceded by a Mass with Rev. James Bernaurer and Rev. Leon Rausch as celebrants.

Planning and hosting the observance were the couple's children: Mr. and Mrs. Howard (Alice) Hasby, Mr. and Mrs. Robert (Lillian) Glonek, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cork and Mr. and Mrs. Milt (Della) Burstad.

Tribute to the couple was given by the eldest grandson Gary Burstad of Waubun. He also read congratulatory letters from President and Rosalynn Carter, Gov. Quie and Congressman Strangeland.

For the reception, the three-tiered anniversary cake was cut and served by Mrs. Della Burstad and Mrs. Lillian Glonek. Coffee was poured by Mrs. Marion Cork and Mrs. VyAnn Feragen. Diane Cork and Patti Burstad ladled the punch. Scott Meltz presided at the guest book and gift table, and Pam Burstad, Janeen Kalsness and Donna Cork served as waitresses. All are children and grandchildren of the couple.

Approximately 150 guests attended. Among them were Mrs. Cork's brother and sisters: Frank Dobias, Mrs. Inar Mikkelson of Thief River Falls and Mrs. James Denina of Montgomery; and Cork's borther and sisters: Bernard Cork, Chicago, Ill.; Mrs. Sylvia Spohn, Mendota, Ill., Mrs. Stan Petroveskov, Cape Coral, Fla., and Mrs. Ken Dolberg of this city.

Unable to attend, due to illness, were the couple's attendants of 50 years ago: Mrs. Vicky Means, Ridgecrest, Calif., and Arnold Cork of Bigfork.

Relatives and friends attending were from Chicago and Mendota, Ill., Cape Coral, Fla., Superior, Wis., Marshall, Mich.; Twenty-nine Palms, Calif.; Waubun, Gonvick, Goodridge and Thief River Falls.

Among the many cards, gifts and congratulatory messages received was a telephone call from grandsons David and Dan Cork of Anchorage, Alaska.

83 Attend Two 4-H Day Camps In Pennington

Sixty-eight boys and girls attended 4-H day camp in Thief River Falls at the Pennington county sportsmen club park August 4-7. Fifteen attended camp in Goodridge August 14-17. Activities included archery, canoeing, nature study, entomology, orienteering, firebuilding, creative drama and crafts including soap carving, plastic braiding and making feelies.

4-H junior leaders worked as camp counselors. They were each responsible for a group of campers, taught the classes, supervised recreation and led opening and closing ceremonies.

Those that worked as camp counselors in Thief River Falls were Dale and Roy Dobias of Black River, Kerry Madunich of Happy Acres, Starr Johnson and Kim Koropatnicki of Kratka, Peggy Hamre of Smiley, Tom Colby, Doug and Mary Courneya and Jill Stenberg of Steiner. Camp counselors in Goodridge were Starr Johnson of Kratka, Kerry Madunich of Happy Acres and Deb Panek of Mavie.

For some of the campers the opportunity to raise and lower the flag was a highlight of camp, for others canoeing and archery were important, and others just enjoyed playing games and doing things with other boys and girls, according to Beattie Mickelson, youth program assistant for the county extension service.

Day camp is sponsored annually by the Pennington county extension service and is offered to anyone ages eight to 12 whether or not they are 4-H members.

Over 80 project proposals were considered for ranking in the OEDP with 10 chosen as top priority, first year projects; and eight chosen as second year priority projects.

City bridges in Thief River Falls were ranked seventh in the ten first year projects. The OEDP recognized a need for two bridges in the city to tie the northeast and southeast sections and southwest and southeast sections of town. The streets to be tied together, according to the project plan, include county road 78 and Greenwood St. The bridge constructions would, the OEDP indicates, serve industrial development and alleviate traffic congestion on downtown streets. An estimated five million dollars would be needed for the project with HUD (housing and urban development authority) and EDA (economic development administration) listed as possible sources of funding to supplement local contributions.

Other nine first year projects listed are: 1) gasahol plant in Red Lake county, 2) bridge in Warroad, 3) storm sewer construction in Roseau, 4) potato packing plant in Oslo, 5) sunflower oil processing plant in region one, 6) industrial park in Warren, 7) industrial park in Ada, 8) grocery store in Grygla, and 9) business district renovation in Red Lake Falls.

Second-year Northwest district project priorities are not numerically ranked but include: a firehall in Grygla, street improvements in Plummer, water system in Holt, water sewer system in Brooks, new water mains in Middle River, recreational facilities in Plummer, street improvements in Brooks and sewer and street paving in Strandquist.

Thief River Falls projects listed in the OEDP but not given first or second year priority include highway 59 improvements, downtown redevelopment study, an outdoor pool, and improvements in Tessum's addition.

Project ranking by the OEDP is not meant to predict actual progress but projects ranked high will receive priority from district staff, given equality in application development.

Energy Costs Are Topic For City Council

than the customer whose system was uninterruptable.

The report presented to the council Tuesday outlined many factors to be considered in designing a load shedding system involving rates, origin of the load shedding controls, costs and labor involved in installation and maintenance, and amount of savings to be generated to the city by the system's use.

The system being given consideration by the utilities department would involve the installation of injectors at the city's four substations, a master controller and receivers in participating households at a total cost of approximately $191,000. During the first year in operation, if the city shed a total of 1,000 kilowatts savings would total $73,099. If 2,000 kilowatts were shed savings would reach $146,245.

At the council meeting Tuesday it was suggested that simply raising the rates might be an alternative to becoming involved with a load shedding system, thereby raising the income of the department rather than reducing the costs. However it was the general feeling of the council that a rate increase would likely be required in utility rates in the near future regardless and an investment in the loading shedding system would help keep the increase at a minimum.

Anderson was instructed to undertake a rate study taking into consideration variable rates for interruptable and uninterruptable systems and to prepare plans and specifications for load shedding equipment that would be required by the city.

Preliminary report from the city engineer's office on water main replacement, service connection repairs and sanitary sewer repairs indicated that the recommended projects would cost approximately $586,000. Of the $586,000, $120,000 would be for sanitary sewer repairs and replacement, $240,000 would be for water main replacement, and $220,000 would be for water service connection repairs. The engineers report, which outlined project locations, was referred to the tax and assessments committee for determination of what portion of the project should be assessed back against property owners. The committee will report back at the August 28 meeting.

The liquor committee recommended that a study be undertaken to determine the feasibility of remodeling and enlarging the city's off-sale facility and the feasibility of constructing a new facility on the same site. Stewart and Walker were engaged by the council, at the committee's recommendation, and will determine whether there is adequate land to facilitate a new or remodeled structure of at least 5,000 square feet. The engineer's office was given the go-ahead for the study with a ceiling cost of $2,000.

In other business, the date was set for a public hearing on Wagner Corporation's request to issue commercial revenue bonds for a project on highway 59. The hearing will be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, September 18.

Highway Official Concerned About Cutback In Funds

Recently announced statewide cutback of $122.5 million in highway improvement projects for 1980-81 will seriously affect transportation in northwestern Minnesota, according to Bob Wolfe, engineer for the highway department in northwestern Minnesota.

The original local program totaling over $26 million has now been cut 80 per cent to only $4.8 million. Scheduled projects unaffected by the program cutback include one upgrading job (T.H. 9 south of Ada) and two maintenance resurfacing projects (T.H. 11 — Indus to Pelland and T.H. 2 eastbound roadway between Erskine and Fosston).

Wolfe confirmed that projects which had been planned and are no longer scheduled include:

T.H. 2 — Final base and surfacing on the Bemidji bypass;

T.H. 11 — Surfacing of between West Roseau county Line to Greenbush (emergency 10-ton route);

T.H. 71 — T.H. 1 to Northome and Margie to Big Falls (initial stage of upgrading to 10 ton route);

T.H. 32 — St. Hilaire to Thief River Falls (widen and overlay);

T.H. 87 — Resurface between T.H. 64 and T.H. 71;

T.H. 113 — Resurface between Syre and Waubun;

T.H. 1 — Resurface between Red Lake and T.H. 72 (Busy Corner);

T.H. 220 — Resurface between Oslo and seven miles north; and

T.H. 59 — Initial upgrading to 10-ton route between the south Polk county line and Thief River Falls.

Richard Braun, commissioner of the department of transportation, announced earlier this month that new priorities will have to be determined on a state-wide basis once the future funding picture becomes clearer. Meetings are planned the next few months with legislators and local leaders to develop an appropriate future program and investment strategy, Wolfe said.

Wolfe also expressed concern about Mn-DOT's ability to adequately maintain the existing state trunk highway system in view of the over 400 miles of road that currently are in need of a bituminous overlay. He noted the importance of moving agricultural products and the need to have roadways that will carry the heavy truck axle weights associated with sugar beets, potatoes, grain and timber products.

"Settlement of the current Duluth-Superior elevator strike will initiate extreme pressure to raise axle weight restrictions on a road system that no longer has assurance of future improvements," he said.

In addition to deferrals in 1980-81, all state trunk highway upgrading and resurfacing projects in 1982-1985 have been placed in an unscheduled status. In northwestern Minnesota this will involve 12 projects totaling $28 million and including:

T.H. 2 — Resurfacing and widening of the eastbound roadway between T.H. 32 (Marcoux corner and Erskine);

T.H. 11 — Upgrading to 10-ton west of Karlstad;

T.H. 32 — Regrading between T.H. 2 and Red Lake Falls;

T.H. 59 — Final upgrading to 10-ton route between Mahnomen and Thief River Falls;

T.H. 71 — Upgrading to 10-ton between Bemidji and Kabekona corner (T.H. 200); Reconstruction and raising to 10-ton route between Itasca park and Kabekona corner (Lake George project included); final upgrading to 10-ton between T.H. 1 (south of Northome to Big Falls);

T.H. 75 — Widening and resurfacing between Shelly and Climax;

T.H. 171 — New crossing of Red river at St. Vincent-Pembina; and T.H. 219 and 89 — Upgrading to 10-ton route between Goodridge and Grygla.

"Also affected will be long range plans to develop an integrated system of 10-ton routes throughout the state, additional maintenance overlay projects on roadways previously unprogrammed and the addition of second roadways such as on T.H. 2 between Bemidji and Cass Lake," Wolfe said. "Considering that six to eight years are required for major projects, some of these additions appear too remote even for design studies to continue."

SHORTAGE OF NURSES throughout the country was discussed at a meeting of the board of trustees of Northwestern hospital Monday evening by Barbara Donaho (center), executive director of nursing at Abbott-Northwestern hospital in Minneapolis for the past four years. She is pictured with Curtis L. Charlson, chairman of the local hospital board of trustees and Marilyn Wigness, director of nursing at the hospital.

areas which might have made the professional performance better.

Ironically, attempts by the health community to improve health care have contributed in part to the present problem. Construction of the new medical office building and recruitment of additional medical personnel have increased the hospital utilization as it was hoped they would. The increased utilization has compounded the problem of nursing shortage, and the cut-backs in such areas as elective surgery have restricted medical practice.

In an attempt to relieve the shortage, recruitment efforts have been intensively conducted by the hospital for some time. Advertisements for nurses have been run in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Montana and Nebraska. Letters have been sent, personal contacts made, career days attended. Mrs. Wigness even spent a day in the Twin Cities to interview any applicants who might respond to an advertisement placed in the newspaper there. Nobody showed.

Recruitment has not been totally unsuccessful, however, although the response in relation to effort expended has not been too gratifying. The hospital has hired one RN from Minnesota and one from North Dakota and is optimistic about another North Dakotan and one from Nebraska who have indicated high interest. Several others have been scheduled for interviews.

It had been hoped that the LPN-RN program of the area vocational-technical school and Northland community college here would help the local nursing situation. The impact has not been great, particularly in the RN field.

"Three years ago I hired 15 of the 19 graduates of the AVTI's licensed practical nurse class," Mrs. Wigness said. "Of the three graduating classes from the RN program at the college, I have hired nine of the 30 graduates and five are still employed here."

It must be noted that the college has not restricted its RN enrollment to students from this geographical area, nor graduates of the local LPN program. Therefore, a number of graduates of the RN program have their historical roots in other communities. Efforts are being made cooperatively by the college, hospital and others to develop a program to help non-practicing nurses reenter the nursing field.

Mrs. Wigness said one of the difficulties in recruitment has been in the general shortage of acceptable rental housing in the community. Another has been the accelerated recruitment by other hospitals also affected by the shortage, and the diversion of RNs into non-hospital fields. Northern location of the community has also been a problem in recruiting nurses who are not accustomed to or familiar with the community and its medical facilities.

To assist in encouraging more young people to enter the nursing field from this area, the hospital's board of trustees has re-capitalized its scholarship fund in the amount of $20,000 to assist nursing students with their costs of schooling. Consideration is being given to a forgiveness feature which would reduce or eliminate loan repayment in exchange for employment at the local hospital.

Hospital officials are unsure of the future availability of nurses and the resulting impact on local programs. Recruitment efforts are being continued and filling of positions accordingly will result in reinstitution of curtailed services.

couraged to recruit women into non-traditional fields, reducing the number being recruited for nursing, a traditional female classification. This societal adjustment is not likely to reverse itself soon.

Use of registered nurses on a part-time basis to alleviate the shortage has also met with difficulty, Mrs. Donaho said. Union contracts frequently tie the hands of hospital administration in allowing flexibility and creativity in scheduling. It is often difficult, she said, for nurses to work part-time, pay union dues and improve themselves financially.

Attitude in professional nurses is changing, she added, with nurses becoming more assertive and insisting on greater roles in decision making. This has brought them in conflict with physicians in some instances and adding to the stress of employment. Formation of committees to work out hospital policies and role definitions has taken place in a number of hospitals.

Mrs. Donaho briefly discussed recruitment efforts, noting that the hospital she served in the Twin Cities has offered its staff members a financial reward of $500 for each full-time RN and $250 for each part-time RN they are able to recruit. Flexibility in scheduling within the confines of the union contract and providing of day nurseries for nurses with young children are also being offered.

Further discussion on the nursing situation will take place at the annual meeting of the hospital association to be held Monday evening, September 10. Several speakers are scheduled on the program for that meeting to provide further information on the problem.

USDA Makes School Lunch Pattern Change

Students and parents will have a stronger voice in school lunches under U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations to take effect this fall. Regulations announced recently also provide new menu options for school lunch managers, according to assistant secretary Carol Tucker Foreman.

Foreman said the regulations are part of a major change in school lunch patterns proposed almost two years ago. Based on interim regulations published last August, the department has conducted field tests of the new patterns and schools have been free to use them on a voluntary basis.

The department planned to publish final regulations as a unit. However, contractor delays in providing results from the field tests made this impossible. Also, the department prefers to take into account an expected revision in the recommended dietary allowances published by the national academy of sciences that may affect proposed portion sizes.

"We need complete information on the impact of new meal patterns on nutrition, administration and cost before any further regulations are issued," Foreman said.

In the meantime, based on comments received, the department has issued the following rules in final form:

—Rice and pasta and cereal grains such as bulgur and corn grits may be served as bread alternates. This will increase menu choices, particularly in areas where rice or pasta are staples of an ethnic diet. New rule does not alter the number of servings required to meet the minimum bread requirement.

—Schools must serve unflavored lowfat milk, skim milk or buttermilk. They may offer other choices as well. This will help schools reduce the percentage of lunch calories derived from fat. Schools that have already entered into milk contracts for 1979-80 may request a temporary exception for their state agency.

—Schools must involve students and parents in school lunch activities. Schools or state agencies may design their own programs for this purpose. This involvement helps increase student participation, acceptance of foods and nutrition awareness, Foreman said.

—It is recommended that schools offer food choices or, if choices are not offered, that no one form of meat or meat alternate be served more than three times a week. Recommendations to help schools increase the use of foods rich in vitamins A and C, and to keep fat, sugar and salt at a moderate level will be issued later as guidance materials.

Under the school lunch program, meal patterns are used to insure that lunches served across the nation meet nutritional requirements. The approved pattern, formerly called type A, includes meat or meat alternate, fruit and-or vegetable, bread or bread alternate and milk. These requirements are reviewed periodically to reflect new nutritional knowledge and eating habits. Regulation is scheduled to appear in the August 17 federal register.

Price Increase Adds To Farm Value Of Milk

An increase in the wholesale price of milk averaging 14 cents a gallon higher than last year has added over $90 million to the farm value of Minnesota's milk production during the first seven months of 1979, agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin reported recently.

Minnesota's January-July milk production is estimated at 665.9 million gallons with a gross farm value at average monthly prices of $632.5 million. For the seven-month period the average farm price per gallon was 95 cents, compared to 81 cents for that period in 1978.

July milk production this year was 90.25 million gallons, identical to the Minnesota dairy farms output a year ago.

Milk cows on Minnesota farms this July totaled 830,000. A cut of 3,000 from the state inventory during the two preceding months, but 5,000 more milk cows than the nation's fourth leading dairy state counted in July of 1978.

Average milk production per cow this July dropped, as it always does from the annual May-June efficiency peak, to 100 gallons. That was down 12 gallons from the June average, but was within one-third of a gallon of matching the July 1978 average for Minnesota milk cows.

Last year, January-July milk production totaled 670.6 million gallons with a gross farm value of $542.2-million.

State Service Receipts Rise 72.5 Per Cent

Data from the 1977 census of service industries show that Minnesota's 34,168 establishments in the "selected" service industries had receipts totaling $2.8 billion, an increase of 72.5 per cent over receipts reported in 1972, according to the bureau of the census, U.S. department of commerce.

This initial report is confined to those "selected" service industries included in the 1972 census. A later report will cover additional service industries included for the first time in 1977.

Among the kinds of business for which data are presented for the state, the percentage change in receipts ranged from an increase of 168 per cent for computer and data processing services to 24.9 per cent for laundry, cleaning and garment services.

Measured in dollar volume of receipts, legal services was the largest of the selected service industries in the state with 1977 receipts of $295.4 million, followed by hotels, motor hotels, and motels with $277.1 million, and automotive repair shops with $211.8 million. These three industries accounted for 28.2 per cent of total receipts of the covered industries.

The 1977 payroll of covered establishments in the state amounted to $881.6 million, up 77.5 per cent from 1972. Management, consulting and public relations services showed the largest increase in payroll, with an increase of 164.5 per cent.

There were 109,630 paid employees (full and part-time) engaged in the covered industries in the state as of mid-March 1977. Hotels, motor hotels and motels were the largest employers with 16,356 employees, followed by legal services with 6,890 employees, and services to dwellings and other buildings with 6,381 employees.

Hennepin county led the counties in the state, accounting for 50.4 per cent of total receipts of selected service industries. Minneapolis had the largest receipts among the cities in the state, accounting for 26 per cent.

Alcohol Found To Adversely Affect Behavior

Alcohol has a significant impact on human behavior, altering sensori-motor processes and adversely affecting attention span, memory, conceptual processes and emotions, reports the Northwest mental health center at Crookston.

Unsteady balance, staggered walk and slurred speech are probably the most obvious behavioral characteristics of intoxicated people.

Low doses of alcohol prolong the time required for recovery from glare, producing a period of relative blindness. Alcohol also reduces the eye's ability to adapt to variations in light, and impairs peripheral vision and visual search behavior. Such conditions are particularly hazardous to the intoxicated driver. Alcohol also affects performance on tracking tasks that involve eye-hand coordination such as is required by drivers and pilots.

Drinking impedes the ability of the brain to absorb information from more than one source simultaneously and decreases the capacity to switch from one source of information to another. Heavy doses of alcohol also affect the ability to process new information and recall it later.

Sober alcoholics often display serious deficits in cognitive functioning. A direct relationship has been demonstrated between such deficits and the number of years of drinking.

Recent evidence indicates that alcohol affects even the sober cognitive functioning of social drinkers. In a study of middle-class social drinkers, this effect was especially noticeable among heavy drinkers, but it was also seen in light and moderate drinkers.

Social drinkers have been shown to consume more alcohol in stressful situations where they feel their self-esteem is threatened, but studies on whether alcohol relieves tension and anxiety in such drinkers have produced conflicting results. Among alcoholics, men have been found to become more anxious, depressed and angry when drinking, but such effects have been seen less in women.

Regarding the alcohol aggression link, it has been shown that when male social drinkers are in a competitive group situation, interpersonal aggression increases considerably. In other studies, persons who believed they had drunk alcohol acted more aggressively than those who tought they had consumed a nonalcoholic beverage, regardless of the actual contents of the drink.

Check Right Of Way Limits Before Building

Commissioner Richard Braun, Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT), advises that anyone planning private construction along a trunk highway should contact Mn-DOT's Bemidji district headquarters office to determine the limits of the highway right of way.

In the past, illegal fences, buildings, signs, etc. have been erected on the right of way. This causes inconvenience and added expense to the offender since illegal structures must be removed at the owner's expense, Braun said.

Illegal structures on highway right of way often cause road construction problems, particularly when federal funds are involved. Project delays and cancellations often occur because the federal highway administration requires that the right of way be clear of obstructions before authorizing highway improvements, he added.

Many cities, counties and townships have adopted zoning regulations which control land use along highways. Braun said that permits are required before entrances may be constructed to the highway. Mn-DOT determines where entrances may be constructed.

For further information, contact the right of way engineer or the surveys engineer at Washington and 4th Street S., Bemidji, MN 56601, phone 218-755-3809 or 218-755-3818.

USDA Requests Comments On Its Estimates

U.S. department of agriculture (USDA) has called for public comments on the methods used in preparing U.S. crop and livestock estimates.

John W. Kirkbride, acting chairman of USDA's crop reporting board, said the comments will be used by an outside, independent group of statisticians who will evaluate the methodology and procedures used in the statistics unit of the economics, statistics, and cooperatives service. The department engaged the services of an outside review group on the recommendation of its inspector general and the general accounting office, which reviewed USDA's statistical operations in 1977 and 1978.

The statistics unit estimates production, supplies, use, and prices of major crop and livestock products, reports livestock inventories and publishes data on related items such as farm labor, fertilizer and farm numbers. Data is collected through personal interviews, mail and telephone surveys and actual measurements in fields as crops develop. Final estimates are summarized and released by the crop reporting board in Washington, D.C., and through the agency's field offices.

Kirkbride noted that the estimates form the basis for setting agricultural policy, measuring supplies of agricultural commodities and determining deficiency payments under existing legislation. Because the data may at times significantly affect farm product prices, it's necessary that the estimates by obtained by sound statistical techniques.

Respondents have 60 days to submit comments and suggestions regarding current data collection and estimating methods or any other information considered useful for the evaluation. Written comments may be addressed to the Statistical Review Group, P.O. Box 23271, Washington, D.C. 20024. For further information, contact John W. Kirkbride, ESCS-Statistics, Room 5865 South, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250.

IRS Suggests Filing Ideas For Couples

Working couples, especially those with few or no dependents, more often than not will owe tax when they file their annual tax return, unless they have paid additional taxes during the year, the internal revenue service said.

The reason for owing additional tax is the withholding rates which are based solely on each individual's wages, and do not take a spouse's wages into account. Withholding rate is lower for married persons than for anyone else.

For example, the highest tax rate applicable to a couple filing a joint return with only one wage earner making $26,000 is up to 32 per cent. The withholding would be adequate. But a working couple — one spouse with total wages of $10,000 and the other with total wages of $16,000 — might have insufficient withholding to cover the tax rate on their combined total wages of $26,000.

There are several alternatives for a working couple to combat a large tax bill at filing time.

Generally, filing separate returns is not the answer, because those rates are higher still, according to the IRS. Yet it is good tax planning to consider the possibility. Filing separately might be a tax advantage, but if it is not, there are two other choices.

One way to confront underwithholding is to pay the additional tax by means of estimated taxes. This means that the amount is paid in quarterly installments directly to the IRS using vouchers that come with Form 1040-ES, "Ceclaration of Estimated Tax for Individuals."

Another choice is to file a revised Form W-4, "Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate," with the employer claiming fewer or no allowances or requesting additional withholding. Also, married taxpayers may choose to have taxes withheld as if they were single. Both Forms 1040-ES and W-4 are available from local IRS offices. Most employers have supplies of Form W-4.

While most employers are willing to honor the wishes of employees by withholding additional income tax, they are under no obligation to do so. If an employer refuses to withhold additional tax, the best choice then may be to pay estimated tax.

Additional information may be found in the IRS Publication 505, "Tax Withholding and Declaration of Estimated Tax," available free at IRS offices.

SPECIAL BOOK of prayers and devotions was prepared by the American Legion auxiliary of Thief River Falls and presented Tuesday to Valley home in Thief River Falls. Unit president Constance Driscoll (right) and Eileen Horejsch of the auxiliary made the presentation to Mrs. Mildred Brekke, administrator of the home for the aged. The book was compiled by the auxiliary through contribution of items by members and is available to all residents of the home who would like to use it.

Health Advisory Groups Appoint New Members

State health commissioner George Pettersen, M.D., has announced plans to appoint members to newly established environmental health specialist sanitarian and emergency medical technician advisory councils. The seven member councils will advise the commissioner on all matters related to the regulation of emergency medical technicians (EMTs) and environmental health specialists, or sanitarians.

EMTs are specially trained to provide medical treatment in emergency situations, usually as members of ambulance crews. Environmental health specialists are responsible for tasks like the inspection of food and beverage establishments, the regulation of water supplies and waste disposal systems, and the control of environmental pollution.

State law requires that a number of interested groups be represented on each advisory council. The proposed members of the Emergency medical technician advisory council include Kevin Powers, St. Paul and Monte Hammitt, director of the Comprehensive Health service at the Red Lake Indian Reservation, both of whom will represent the general public on the council; physicians G. Patrick Lilja, Minneapolis, and Roger D. White, Rochester; Dennis Swilling, R.N., of the emergency department at St. Cloud hospital; and EMTs Tom Steil and Gordon Vadnais. Vadnais is chief of the fire department and rescue squad in White Bear Lake.

Handicapped To Benefit From Fair Program

Minnesota state fair, August 23 through Labor Day, September 3, will offer a wide range of services and facilities to make the exposition accessible to handicapped visitors.

Parking facilities will be provided in a number of areas including curb parking at five locations near the east Commonwealth gate. Additional curb parking has been added this year on Commonwealth avenue near Heritage square and the west Commonwealth gate. In addition, parking for handicapped visitors will be available in a fenced lot behind the ticket audit building west of the grandstand. Also, a drop-off point where drivers a can discharge handicapped passengers will be located on Commonwealth avenue near the grandstand.

To make use of these parking facilities, handicapped visitors' vehicles must be identified by a Minnesota public safety parking certificate or a handicapped owner-operator license plate.

Restroom facilities equipped with ramps, widened doorways and handrails are located around the grounds and are all marked with the wheelchair accessibility symbol.

To ease wheelchair travel around the grounds, numerous curb cuts have been made between the paved streets and sidewalks. In addition, low-mount telephones have been installed at the south side of the food building, east entrance to the grandstand, midway entrance and east Commonwealth gate.

Special seating accessible to wheelchairs is available for all grandstand and coliseum shows upon request and a wheelchair rental service is provided at the child care center on Underwood street. A limited number of wheelchairs is available so persons are advised to check availability and deposit requirements in advance by calling (612) 645-2781.

Maps with locations of all facilities for the handicapped will be available at any of the fair's seven information booths. For more information, contact Minnesota State Fair, St. Paul, Minn. 55108; phone (612) 645-2781.

State Gov't. Said To Favor Businesses

Minnesota adults who think that their state government has a generally favorable attitude toward business outnumber those who disagree nearly two to one.

In the second-quarterly Minnesota PROBE omnibus survey by a Minneapolis survey firm, 52 per cent of those surveyed said Minnesota state government is "generally for business." Twenty-seven per cent said "against" and 21 per cent said "don't know." The poll was conducted in May among 997 adults chosen at random across the state.

Compared with a poll taken in 1976 by the same research firm, these results represent some deterioration in Minnesotans' perception of the way state government regards business. The current poll, however, indicates a slight improvement over opinions measured a year ago, the survey firm said.

In the 1976 poll, 63 per cent of those surveyed thought the state was generally "for" business, and 20 per cent "against." A year ago those answering "for" stood at 52 per cent, the same as the current figure, but those answering "against" were at their highest. Each poll was conducted with a different sample of approximately 1,000 adults.

In all three polls, adults with annual incomes of over $15,000 were the most pessimistic about the state government's attitude toward business.

Interviews were conducted at the respondents' homes by experienced interviewers. With the PROBE sample of 1,000 there is virtual certainty that the answers given by all Minnesotans, were they to have been asked the same questions, would have been within three percentage points either way of the total recorded by the survey sample, according to the research firm.

USDA Boosts Child Care Food Payments

U.S. department of agriculture recently increased payments to states under the child care food program, according to assistant secretary Carol Tucker Foreman.

Payments have been increased 6.73 per cent to reflect the rise in the consumer price index series for food away from home for all urban consumers.

The increase will be effective from July 1, 1979 until Dec. 31, 1979. It follows an increase made in March for the first six months of this year.

Payments to states are based on need and on the number of meals served by participating child care institutions. Higher rates of reimbursement are provided for meals served to children whose family income meets the criteria for free or reduced-price school meals.

New payment rates for paid meals are 13.5 cents for each breakfast served, 17 cents for each lunch or supper, and seven cents for each snack. These rates are up from 12.75 cents, 15.75 cents, and 6.50 cents, respectively.

For meals reimbursed at the reduced-price rate, the payment is 39 cents for each breakfast served, 83.25 cents for each lunch or supper, and 21.25 cents for each snack. Previous rates were 36.50 cents, 77.25 cents and 19.75 cents, respectively.

For meals reimbursed at the free rate, the payment is 47.25 cents for each breakfast served, 93.25 cents for each lunch or supper, and 28 cents for each snack. Previous rates were 44.50 cents, 87.25 cents, and 26 cents, respectively.

Instead of keeping records on actual costs of food served, sponsors of family and group day care homes may choose to make payments to homes based on a food cost scale established by USDA's food and nutrition service. This rate has been increased from 28 cents to 30 cents for each breakfast, from 50 cents to 53.5 cents for each lunch or supper, and from 17 cents to 18.25 cents for each snack.

New Variety Of Peas Attracts Gourmet Eaters

A new edible podded pea, the sugar snap, is now becoming available where local produce is sold, according to Deborah Brown, extension horticulturist at the University of Minnesota.

The new variety will appeal to gardeners and chefs who enjoy "snow peas" for stir frying or steaming. Unlike flat podded sugar or snow peas which are best eaten when the pods are small, sugar snap peas stay in prime condition for days.

Brown says the peas can be eaten when fully mature, 2½ to three inches in length. Mature pods require stringing, but this can be done quickly when snapping the pods into bite-sized pieces. Pods that have begun to turn yellow may need to be discarded, but the peas remain edible and can be combined with younger edible pods in recipes.

According to the All-American selections committee, which cites outstanding new vegetable varieties each year, the peas are gaining popularity because of their high yield compared to garden peas. The gardener gets about twice as much food per foot of vegetable row as he or she would from peas that have to be shelled.

The committee advises that sugar snap peas should be lightly steamed or stir fried to retain crispness. Overcooking will make the pods come apart. The peas can also be eaten raw or combined in salads.

The snap peas freeze satisfactorily, but the All-American selections committee advises against canning them because high temperatures will destroy pod structure.

Gospel Concert To Be Presented In Erskine

Most Traffic Routes Open To State Fairgoers

Fairgoers should experience minimal delays in the Twin Cities during the 1979 Minnesota State Fair running from August 23 through September 4 according to Department of Public Safety Commissioner John P. Sopsic.

"Most direct routes to the fair will not be under repair, but motorists should be aware of the locations that will be involved with construction," said Sopsic.

Persons approaching the Third Avenue Bridge on Highway 65 should prepare to slow down. Bridge construction will reduce traffic flow to one lane in each direction beginning around August 23. Construction continues on the I-94 bridge over Highway 53 in Brooklyn Park, and traffic flow is reduced to a single lane in each direction. Motorists who usually take Highway 14 between Waseca and Owatonna will be detoured 15 miles on Highway 13 across Highway 30 to I-35.

Road construction, with the exception of work along the sides of the road, will be halted on Snelling Avenue for the duration of the fair to allow normal traffic flow. Fairgoers from southern and southeastern Minnesota should prepare for occasional delays on weekends near Shakopee due to crowds attending the Renaissance Festival south on Highway 100.

"Motorists are urged to drive defensively and reminded to obey the 55 mile speed limit so that we all may enjoy the 1979 Minnesota State Fair," said Commissioner Sopsic.

Hints For Homeowners

Home Improvement, Safety And Economy

PLAY IT SAFE AND SAVE

Do-it-yourselfers can avoid doing themselves in if they follow some safety precautions.

In this era of escalating costs, more and more people are doing it themselves with tools ranging from a hammer and screwdriver to power tools.

To make home repair pay, you've got to be able to do it for less, and do it with safety. It's no fun—and it can be costly—to unnecessarily injure yourself while doing that odd job around the house or apartment.

Organize! If you have a screwdriver in a kitchen drawer, a saw in the garage or basement and a pair of pliers in the car, valuable time will be lost looking for the tools you need to do the job. And as confidence and skill grow, so does your arsenal of tools. So create a place-for-everything place for all your tools.

You don't need a lot of tools—just the right ones. For example, the Weller Mini-Shop, one of the tools by Cooper The Toolmaker that include Crescent, Lufkin and Nicholson, is a power unit with accessories to do almost every job. To the Weller Model 601K, you can attach everything from drill bits and brushes to sanders and grinders.

As with any power tool, there are basic safety rules to follow. Most important, power tools should be grounded to avoid electric shock. Use only three-wire cords that have three-prong grounding-type plugs and three-pole receptacles. Replace or repair damaged cords.

Here are some other basic safety tips:

- Keep work area clean. Clutter causes accidents.
- Use safety glasses. A face or dust mask is also a good idea if the job calls for it.
- Use the right tool. Don't force a small tool or attachment to do the job of a heavy tool.
- Don't abuse cords. Never carry a tool by the cord or yank it to disconnect it from a plug. Keep the cord away from heat, oil and sharp edges.
- Secure work. Use clamps or a vise to hold the work in place. It's safer than using your hand, and it frees both hands to operate the tool.

Keep tools sharp, clean and properly serviced for best and safety performance.

Tranquilizers And Alcohol Dangerous Mix

Benzoiazepines are the most frequently prescribed and used minor tranquilizers. The most common ones used are diazepam (valium) and chlordinzepoxide (librium).

One of the difficulties with convincing the public and, possibly, physicians, of the particularly hazardous results of combining alcohol with diazepam is that earlier studies did not show negative combination effects when it was taken with alcohol, nor additive effects at clinical dose levels. Indeed, one study found enhanced performance levels in certain mental tests when diazepam and alcohol were combined in human subjects. Apparently these preliminary findings were misleading, the national institute on alcohol abuse and alcoholism points out.

The majority of recent studies on the alcohol-diazepam combination indicate that the combination of these drugs is dangerous. Investigators have found that reaction times are slowed considerably in subjects given both diazepam and alcohol, compared with alcohol alone. Furthermore, test subjects who combined alcohol and diazepam did not realize the extent to which their judgments had been affected. These subjects also showed increased deficits in coordination tasks without negative changes in mood level and ignored steering instructions in driving simulation tests, making increased steering errors. In all the studies cited here, diazepam and alcohol together produced greater mental and motor impairment than alcohol taken alone.

One of the most important findings from these studies is that subjects may be deceived as to the correctness of their judgments when taking alcohol and diazepam together. It would appear that individuals are much less able to judge the degree of their impairment from alcohol ingestion if they have taken diazepam. Indeed, it has been shown that using alcohol and this drug (e.g. in the form of Valium) together increases intoxication at lower levels of blood alcohol without the user's awareness of the effect the alcohol may be producing.

Accidents from increased polydrug use or abuse seem to occur with greater frequency during predictable times of the year, such as holidays.

Wood Burning Systems Shown At Seminar

A Monroe, Wis. firm has developed a unique commercial woodburning system that can be used with existing 100-200 horsepower boiler systems, typically found in schools, hospitals and commercial buildings.

The woodburning unit is unique in many ways. It involves relatively low capitol investment, rolls in and out of the boiler room on wheels, operates by gasifying wood and moving the gas into the existing boiler operation, and it is designed to allow existing boiler systems to continue burning traditional fuels.

The system is one of many unique alternatives being presented at the wood energy seminar being held at Madden's resort in Brainerd August 30 and 31.

The seminar is designed for middle and small scale industries and institutions, including public facilities like schools and hospitals.

Seminar participants will be introduced to many developed and tested wood energy systems as well as current information regarding availability of wood, state and federal programs and ideas on how to begin the search for funding.

Al Johnson, director of the Minnesota Energy agency, one of many featured speakers at the seminar, will discuss state and federal policies regarding wood energy.

According to Ray Gildow, director of the regional energy information center in Staples, the seminar is going to be very practical. "This seminar is not about woodburning theory," he said. "This seminar is for people who want to know what wood systems are available, how much they cost, how well they work and how much money can be saved by using them. We have some of the leading experts in the country conducting this seminar, and participants will be given every opportunity to interact with them. Participants will also gain valuable information about how the various woodburning systems work by evaluating actual case studies."

The seminar is sponsored by the Crow Wing environmental education council, Brainerd, and the regional energy information center, Staples.

Conference fee, without room and board, is $15. Reservations for the seminar can be made by contacting Betty Holden, Reservation Manager, Madden Inn and Golf Club, Box 387, Brainerd, Minnesota 56401.

Energy Crunch Bites Down On Rural People

Energy shortages tend to cause greater transportation and housing hardships for Minnesotans living in rural communities than for city dwellers, two university of Minnesota sociologists report.

"Rural people are more dependent on the automobile than people in large cities," says Carl Fredrickson, extension family life specialist. "Their sensitivity to increasing gasoline prices makes problems caused by the energy crisis particularly severe in rural Minnesota."

Randy Cantrell, extension specialist in community resource development, gives his view: "People in rural communities tend to travel farther to work, farther to shopping places, but have less public transportation available to them. A recent survey showed that only 318 of the thousands of communities in this country with a population of less than 50,000 have a public bus system. In the last 15 years, 146 bus systems have folded, primarily in towns of less than 20,000 people."

People most affected by the paucity of public transportation are the elderly and the poor, Cantrell adds. Nationally, about one-third of poor rural families do not own an automobile. Approximately one-half of the elderly do not have access to a car.

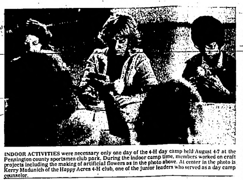
"The greatest single difficulty encountered by rural elderly is inadequate transportation," Fredrickson says, drawing from results of the White House conference on aging. "This problem will become more severe as the cost of private transportation increases."

Rural areas have more than their share of substandard and older housing. Such structures are likely to be poorly insulated. Many rural communities and most individual country residents are not served by natural gas pipelines. As a result, their housing is likely to be heated by more expensive fuel oil and even highter priced propane.

Both the rural individual and his or her community can take steps to deal with these problems. "Conservation becomes important for the individual," Cantrell says. "Residents may have to take fewer trips and shop closer to home. Homeowners certainly have more incentive to upgrade their property through insulation and other conservation measures."

Communities that are equipped to apply for federal programs could take advantage of funding available to improve housing. "Rural communities will have to make a special effort to find these programs," Cantrell says. "Their availability is not as well advertised in rural areas as it is in the cities."

Long-term energy crisis could benefit the small trade center, Fredrickson adds. "The demise of some trade centers has come about because of low-cost transportation. These bypassed towns may experience at least a modest resurgence of trade."



INDOOR ACTIVITIES were necessary only one day of the 4-H day camp held August 4-7 at the Pennington county sportsmen club park. During the indoor camp time, members worked on craft projects including the making of artificial flowers as in the photo above. At center in the photo is Kerry Madunich of the Happy Acres 4-H club, one of the junior leaders who served as a day camp counselor.

Bean Producers Okay Order To Help Research

Producers of dry edible beans have approved a marketing order checkoff payment to support research and promotion by a more than two to one margin — 118 to 50 — in a mail referendum conducted by the Minnesota department of agriculture.

Certification of the referendum approval means, that, effective September 1, all dry edible beans sold by Minnesota growers will be subject to a checkoff deduction of five cents per 100 pounds at the first point of sale.

Funds derived by the checkoff will be remitted to and administered by the five-member Minnesota dry edible bean research and promotion council elected in mail balloting conducted during early July under Minnesota department of agriculture supervision.

Initial marketing promotion order now approved limits the checkoff payment to a maximum of five cents per 100 pounds during the first two years of implementation. Enabling state law also restricts the checkoff to a maximum of one per cent of the market value of dry edible beans.

Dry edible bean producers are the ninth Minnesota farm commodity group to establish a research and market promotion program that is self-financed under state agricultural market development laws. The other farm commodities with established research and promotion councils are wheat, soybeans, paddy wild rice, turkeys, potatoes, beef, eggs and dairy.

While the checkoff deduction is required at the first point of sale, as with the other promotion commodities, individual producers do have the option of obtaining the refund of their deductions by filing a written request containing marketing transaction details with the Minnesota commissioner of agriculture, attention: Marketing Services, State Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

Gasohol Will Be Explained At State Fair

Are you interested in learning more about how gasohol could help our nation's energy shortage? Information on gasohol, which is a blend of 10 per cent ethyl alcohol with 90 per cent unleaded gasoline, will be available at the Minnesota state fair at the Minnesota gasohol commission's booth on machinery hill and at the Minnesota state automobile association's (AAA) booth in the grandstand building. The fair runs from August 23 through September 3.

An operational ethyl alcohol still will also be demonstrated by the Minnesota gasohol commission. The still is designed for use on farms, and information on how to set one up will be available. Alcohol produced from these stills could be blended with gasoline or diesel fuel to stretch those supplies. With slight modifications to equipment the pure alcohol could be burned, explained Glenn Kiecker, secretary of the commission.

AAA, a strong advocate of gasohol, has long lobbied in Congress and at state levels for governmental support of the alcohol fuels industry. Recently the U.S. department of energy released a report that strongly encourages development of alcohol fuels, acknowledging that both ethyl and methyl alcohol can contribute significantly to U.S. energy resources by the use of domestic renewable resources.

"The studies have all been done — now it's time we start producing the alcohol," said Kiecker. "Not only are there abundant resources for producing alcohol, but an alcohol fuels industry would also help boost farm incomes."

Alcohol can be made from grain, sugar beets, sugar cane, crop residue and a wealth of other agricultural products, Kiecker explained. In addition, AAA points out that garbage, wood, cheese whey and coal are other abundant sources for alcohol production.

"Although most of the gasohol now used in the U.S. contains only 10 per cent alcohol, higher concentrations of alcohol have been used successfully," said Diane Nelsen, spokeswoman for Minnesota AAA. In Brazil, which has a national commitment to alcohol fuels, many cars are run on a blend of 20-80 ethanol and gasoline, added Nelsen.

Gasohol is currently sold in many midwest states, and approximately 65 stations in Minnesota, many of them farm co-ops, are selling gasohol.

Use $230,000 To Teach Kids About Eating

Approximately $230,000 in grants will be awarded to state agencies, universities and state and national non-profit groups for projects that are designed to expand the school breakfast program, assistant secretary of agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman announced recently.

"Organizations awarded grants for these projects will develop various techniques and methods of teaching children the nutritional value of breakfast and the importance of good nutrition to health," Foreman said.

Public information programs and projects designed to expand the school breakfast program to all children who need it are required by the national school lunch and child nutrition act amendments of 1975.

Grant proposals may include projects that initiate and support community efforts to expand school breakfast participation. Proposals may also include innovative public information campaigns that emphasize the need for and nutritional value of breakfast.

Applications for the grants may be obtained from: contracting officer, administrative services division, food and nutrition service, U.S. department of agriculture, room 790, Washington, D.C. 20250, (202) 447-8179. Completed applications should be submitted to the same address by August 24, 1979. Grants will be awarded by Sept. 28, 1979.

AAA Says Gas Price, Supply Remains Stable

Slow-down of gasoline price increases continues, according to the latest survey of 66 stations throughout the state by the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA). "In fact, prices at a few stations even decreased slightly," according to Bonnie Morrow, Minnesota AAA spokeswoman.

Gasoline supplies also remained adequate. Forty per cent of the stations are open Sundays, 26 per cent are open after 8 p.m. weekdays, and 41 per cent are open after 6 p.m. Saturdays.

Prices increased an average of six-tenths of a penny per gallon at full-service stations and only three-tenths of a penny at self-service pumps. Currently, the average price per gallon at full-service stations is 98.2 cents for regular, $1.01.9 for premium, $1.01.7 for unleaded, $1.04 for premium unleaded and 93.7 for diesel fuel.

At self-service pumps, the average price per gallon is 95.2 cents for regular, 96.6 cents for premium, 99.1 cents for unleaded and $1.03.8 for premium unleaded.

Four stations reported running out of fuel in the past week (regular grade), and only two stations were limiting gasoline purchases.

Three From TRF Accepted At St. Olaf College

Three students from Thief River Falls have accepted offers of admission to St. Olaf college in Northfield.

They are David A. Beito, 2211 Nelson drive; William A. Saetre, route 5; and Daniel J. Winjum, Trinity Park road.

St. Olaf's fall enrollment is expected to be nearly 3,000 with about 900 of the total being new students. New students will come from approximately 35 states and seven other countries.

Homeowners Eligible For Tax Refunds

"Minnesota renters and homeowners who haven't filed their property tax return had better hurry," reports LaVerne D. Swan, senior citizen coordinator, Northwest Community action, Inc., Badger. Form M-1PR is available from the Pennington county treasurer's office in Thief River Falls and answers to questions may be obtained there.

Most Minnesota homeowners and renters are entitled to a property tax refund. Even if you do not have to file an income tax return, you may be entitled to the refund. The purpose of the property tax refund is to help reduce the burden of high property taxes for both homeowners and renters," he said.

"Renters also pay property taxes, because landlords use a portion of the rent to pay the property taxes on the buildings renters live in. The amount of the refund you will get depends on the amount of your income and on the amount of property tax or rent you pay."

The property tax refund is designed so that people whose property tax is a high percentage of their income will get a greater refund than people whose property tax is a low percentage of their income. Property tax refund return must be postmarked no later than August 31. If you need more time to file your return, because of sickness, absence, disability or other good reasons, you can request an extension of time to file your return by obtaining and filing form M-522E.

If you file your return after the deadline or after the period of extension, the amount of your refund will be reduced five per cent for each month it is late up to a maximum of 25 per cent.

For help in filing your property tax refund return, please contact: LaVerne D. Swan at Northwest Community Action, Inc., Badger, 528-3258; or in Hallock, 843-5275. Discovery Made At U of M On Infant Vision

By Jeanne Hanson
'U' M News Service

Babies as young as three weeks old can sometimes see well enough to blink at a black triangle moving toward them.

This discovery about infant vision, made at the University of Minnesota Institute of child development, is a new piece in an old puzzle — the question of what babies can see. Research will eventually establish how neurons in the human visual cortex develop, why vision develops slowly or not at all in some children, whether a "seeing computer" could be invented, and to what extent visual responses are learned or built into development.

"Depth perception is not well developed until a baby is about 10 weeks old," said Al Yonas, professor of child development on the Twin Cities campus. But by the age of eight weeks, babies can distinguish shapes. Babies do not even begin to understand that pictures are three-dimensional, however, until they are about six months old.

Throughout early visual development, girl babies, bigger babies, and babies born after their due dates tend to do better. Babies whose mothers had a local anesthetic or a pain killer do no worse, indicating that the drugs do not harm the babies' development in this area, Yonas said.

Differences among babies of varying sizes indicate that visual development is built into the maturing of the brain rather than learned, Yonas said. Babies don't need to get bumped on the nose to realize that they should try to defend themselves against an approaching object.

Development of vision is slower than that of hearing, smell and taste, according to Yonas. Perhaps babies don't even need their vision at birth — they can find food and attention in other ways.

Hearing is well developed at birth, Yonas said, and there is some evidence that babies can hear loud noises even before they're born. Smell is quite advanced too: babies as young as 16 hours old will turn away from the smell of ammonia. And newborns can taste the difference between sugar water and quinine water, he said.

Such findings are hard to come by. Yonas's work on vision requires rooms full of equipment, all needed because a few-week-old baby can't say, "Oh, yes, that triangle looks like it's coming right at me, fast." For example, pressure sensitive backings are inserted in infant seats to measure the backward movement of a baby's head. And all moving objects must be exactly reversible so that researchers can show that babies don't blink at an object moving away from them.

State's Farm Production Is Another Record

Minnesota's agricultural industry achieved another economic milestone during 1978 when the farm value of total food and fiber production topped the $6 billion mark for the first time, agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin reported recently.

That reflected an increase of nearly $270.7 million or 4.6 per cent greater than the estimated farm value of Minnesota 1977 production of field crops, livestock, dairy and poultry products.

Field crops harvested last year accounted for nearly $3.5 billion or 57 per cent of the $6.1 billion farm value of total farm production.

Farm value of 1978 Minnesota production of meat, milk, eggs and other livestock products was over $2.6 billion, nearly a $367 million increase over the previous year due primarily to strengthen commodity prices.

"Production value is not farm income," commissioner Seetin pointed out. While livestock, dairy, poultry, vegetable and other perishable farm food products are marketed on a continuing basis, farmers can and do hold many storable commodities — grains and oilseeds — for what they hope will be more favorable market conditions.

Commissioner Seetin said that Minnesota grain stocks in storage this June 30 included substantial quanities for 1976 and 1977 crop wheat and feed grains that had been "banked" by farmers either in the national grain reserve or by individual choice to await more favorable market prices. Such favorable conditions were experienced early this summer. However, more recently fuel shortages, transportation bottlenecks, the grain truckers slowdown, and the grain handler's strike have offset earlier favorable conditions for the marketing of agricultural products.

An initial estimate of Minnesota's 1978 gross and net farm income will be available from the U.S. Department of agriculture in late September.

Minnesota's cash receipts from farm marketings during 1978 have been estimated by the federal agency at $4,894,300,000 with $2,674,200,000 coming from the sale of livestock, dairy and poultry products, and $2,220,100,000 from crop sales.

GOOD PSYCHOLOGY

Things go better when you're ready for whatever happens. A good while before an important occasion, inspect the outfit you'll wear. Not having to make frantic, last-minute repairs will help the evening get off to a better start.

Things should also go better in marriage if you're ready for the effects of aging or of occasional stress. To be sure you'll have extra lubrication when you need it to make marital relations more pleasurable, keep greaseless, nonirritating ORTHO® Personal Lubricant on hand.

Sports Boosters Start Season This Week

Most ambitious season in the history of the Thief River Falls Sports Boosters club officially gets underway this week with a 12 noon luncheon meeting Thursday at the Rex Cafe, followed by the Sports Boosters-sponsored football Pigskin Preview Saturday on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

It's been reported before that the Sports Boosters Club last spring voted to finance the Franklin middle school athletic programs for boys and girls during the 1979-80 school year after School District budget cuts eliminated sports for the sixth, seventh and eighth grade students.

Cost of the project to the Sports Boosters is estimated at $9,200, which would cover intramural football and volleyball in the fall, basketball in the winter and track in the spring.

A big portion of the funds needed to sponsor the Franklin sports will come from Saturday's Pigskin Preview. Tickets, priced at $3 for adults and $1.50 for children under 12, are being sold for the Pigskin Preview charcoal beef barbecue, a delicious bill of fare that will be served about 6 p.m.

Other planned Sports Boosters Club fund raisers this season include the familiar fall pie and ice cream social and the winter sports warm-up. The club will likely also handle the sale of season hockey tickets in the sports arena and the program sales for the 1980 Section 8 high school hockey tournament scheduled to be played here.

Plan to become involved in the Sports Boosters activities this season.

Miscellaneous

+Scheduled appearance of North Star Transport in the 1979 Northern Region Class B men's fast pitch softball tournament this weekend at Austin, along with several other player shortages throughout the league, has cancelled Sunday's scheduled Thief River Falls fast pitch softball playoff tournament.

+Detroit Lakes high school football coach Dick Riedberger told Ralph Anderson of the Becker County Record that his Lakers had an "excellent" opening week of practice. Sixty-five players reported for the start of drills, headed by co-captains Rick Melbye and Dave Norby who saw extensive action with the Lakers during their 1978 Mid-State Conference chaapionship season. Thief River Falls opens its 1979 home football schedule Fri., Sept. 7, against Detroit Lakes.

+Former Crookston athletic standout Brent Reichert, still a familiar figure to area tennis followers, was recently named to the 1979 NAIA academic All-American tennis team. One of 16 players named to the honor squad, Reichert compiled a combined 162-27 record in singles and doubles during his four-year tennis career at Concordia college in Moorhead where he served as captain of the Cobbers while winning one MIAC singles title and a two-time conference finalist in both singles and doubles. He also earned three varsity basketball letters at Concordia, earning all-conference honorable mention recognition last winter when he averaged 10.5 points per game. A recipient of the 1978-79 Concordia outstanding student award, Reichert will attend the University of Minnesota law school this fall.

+Sixty-three candidates — the largest turnout of football players in the last 10 years — drew equipment and participated in the first East Grand Forks high school football drills. The group included 19 seniors, 22 juniors and 22 sophomores. With 19 lettermen on hand, Green Wave coach Gary Berg says, "We expect to be much better than a year ago," when East Grand Forks finished 2-7.

Deb Jacobson Wins Ladies Golf Crown

Deb Jacobson defeated Marge Corliss 2 and 1 Monday in the 18-hole match play finals of the 1979 Thief River Falls ladies city golf tournament at the Thief River Country Club.

Vi Johnson beat Keks Lee 1-up to win the championship flight consolation title.

Medalist honors were shared by Sylvia Sjoberg and Sylvia Olson at 84. But Sjoberg lost to Jacobson and Olson fell to Corliss in earlier semifinal matches.

Marvel Van Rooy beat Yvonne Bredeson 2-up in the finals of the first flight, with Gladys DeBrlyn winning consolation honors over Gladys Narverud.

It was Butch Kosel over Darla Twomey in the finals of the second flight, with Eunice Flynn beating Marge Halvorson in the consolation match.

In the third flight, it was Valerie Larson over Marcia Padilla for the championship and Carole Ihle over Linda Murray for the consolation title.

All Thief River Falls sports fans are invited to attend the luncheon meeting.

Take Doubleheader From TRF Merchants Monday, 12-11, 7-4 . . .

Raiders Win Division I Title

Rusty Nail Raiders made amends for failing to win a regular season pennant for the first time in their six-year history by winning their first post-season trophy Monday with a 12-11, 7-4 doubleheader sweep over the rival TRF Merchants in the finals of the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association Division I playoffs.

It was a remarkable comeback by the once-beaten Raiders who found themselves trailing the unbeaten Merchants 10-0 early in the first game finals of the double elimination event.

A division pennant winner every summer since they were formed in 1974, the Raiders failed to extend that string this year when they finished behind the Merchants and Tony Dorn, Inc. in the Division I standings.

However, the Rusty Nail regular season success has never carried into the league playoffs. The perennial post-season failures for the Raiders began in 1974 when a 21-0 season was shattered by a 35-1 playoff loss to Hartz.

And post-season success looked dim again this year when Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. upset the Raiders 9-0 in a first round playoff game back on August 6. But Rusty Nail battled back, beating Wagon Wheel 7-2, Hartz 16-6, Hobo Haus 16-0, Furuseth-Nelson, Inc. 12-6 and Tony Dorn, Inc. 11-9 in eight innings to reach the finals; rallying from a 6-3 deficit with two out and nobody on base in the top of the seventh to overtake Tony Dorn, Inc.

Meanwhile, the Merchants, after a first round playoff bye, needed only to beat Hartz 19-4 and Tony Dorn, Inc. 14-4 to reach the finals.

Raiders 12, Merchants 11

Pitcher Brian Nelson delivered a couple of key blows at the plate to lift the Raiders past the Merchants 12-11 in a nine-inning struggle that evened the series and forced an immediate doubleheader rematch for the title.

Trailing 11-10 going into the bottom of the seventh, the Raiders received a break when Tom Williams led off with a base hit that went for a bad bounce triple on the unpredictable outfield surface. Nelson then tied it with a sacrifice fly.

In the bottom of the ninth, Jack Petrillo singled to right and Bruce Johnson's potential double play ground ball to shortstop was thrown away for an error. Williams received a bases-loading intentional walk and Nelson singled home the winning run.

The hits were even at 15 apiece. Don Grabowska hit two home runs for the Merchants who built a 10-0 lead through 3½ innings. Paul Williams banged out five doubles for the Raiders who got back in the game on the strength of a seven-run third that featured a two-run, two-out, inside-the-park home run by Gary Lavalley. The Merchants' Rick Easthouse also legged out a four-base hit.

Raiders 7, Merchants 4

It came down to the final out in the final inning of the final game before a Division I playoff champion was named as the Raiders held long ball-hitting Don Grabowska to a season-ending fly ball out — to the left field fence with two on in the bottom of the seventh — in a 7-4 championship game victory.

The Raiders built a 5-0 lead, which included Paul Williams' home run down the right field line in the third, before the Merchants, with Tom Bendickson scoring from second base on a sacrifice fly to left field, cut it to 5-3 in the bottom of the fifth.

But the Raiders out-scored the Merchants 2-1 in the seventh to join three other divisional playoff winners — First Federal Savings & Loan Association in Division II; Consumer's Co-op in Division III; and Jean Junction-Rundell Electric in Division IV.

Hartz Holds Trap Edge

A narrow 119-118 victory over Northern State Bank Monday kept L. B. Hartz Wholesale atop the Thief River Falls trap league point standings as the only unbeaten team through seven weeks of second half season shooting.

Elsewhere, Hydra-Mac beat the Viking Varmints 120-112, Northland Realty edged Service Master 111-110, Bjorkman's tripped Sjoberg's 108-107, Arctic No. 3 defeated Arctic Spirit 119-115, Peterson-Biddick Co. handled The Times 118-109, Soo Line Hot Shots got by the Cat Busters 108-105, Pizza Hut topped Wilson Brothers Co. 118-114, Marshallton Gun Club shot up Triple J Trap Co. 121-101, American Legion shaded H & B Oil 114-113, Sethre's Hartz gunned down First Northwestern State Bank Southside 120-113, Auto Body Repair downed Pepsi-Cola 120-108 and Hible's Standard shot a 110 against an absent Noreen Development squad.

Two weeks of regular season shooting remains, with the top six second half season finishers joining the top six first half finishers in the post-season club shoot.

Fall Bowling Program Plans Are Announced

Plans are underway for the establishment of a new businessman's league at the Thief River Falls Family Bowl this fall. Manager, Tom Greelis, is scheduling a 5 p.m. league on Tuesday evenings for interested Thief River Falls area businessmen.

Beginner bowling classes for ladies are also being scheduled for Wednesday afternoons with lesson times to be announced at a later date.

Greelis also stated that the bowling program for young bowlers is being expanded with Bantam and Junior leagues available for 5 to 12 year olds and 13 to 18 year olds, respectively. Certified junior instructors will also be available for students desiring lessons.

Lessons will also be available for senior bowlers from an A.M.F. certified instructor.

Melvies Wins Vassar Title On Sunday

Bolstered by the addition of pitcher Al Erickson who tossed three shutouts, Melvies, a last place finisher in the Thief River Falls men's fast pitch softball league this summer, won championship honors Sunday in a 16-team invitational tournament at Vassar, Man.

Erickson's two-hitter, along with two double plays, carried Melvies to a 1-0 first round win over Miller's Restaurant of Steinbach.

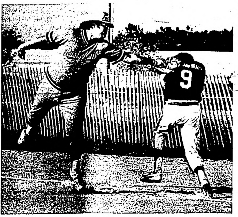
Rick Kolstad's RBI single in the fourth provided Melvies with a 1-0 second round decision over Rainy River-Straton as Erickson scattered six hits and benefited from another double play.

Roger Cota, another pick-up player, tripled and doubled as Melvies overcame Vassar 5-2 in the semifinals.

Another 1-0 game, this time a five-hit Erickson shutout over Steinbach, completed Melvies trophy performance. The championship game's only run was scored in the first inning when Cota opened with a single that was followed by an error, a sacrifice bunt and a sacrifice fly by Del Ray Belto. Two more double plays aided Erickson who struck out 16 batters in the four games. Belto, his catcher, threw out three would-be base stealers.

Friday Mixed Bowlers Meet

Friday night mixed doubles league bowling meeting will be held Friday at 7:30 p.m. at the Family Bowl.



A WIDE THROW pulled Rusty Nail Raiders first baseman Tom Williams off the bag and his reach for TRF Merchants runner Glen Nesland came up short Monday in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association Division I playoffs. The play occurred in the first inning of the first game of the championship doubleheader in the double elimination event. The Raiders swept the Merchants 12-11, 7-4 to win the trophy.

North Star Transport Is Headed For Region Meet

Post-season play continues for North Star Transport this weekend as the Thief River Falls team competes in the 1979 Northern Region Class B men's fast pitch softball tournament at Austin.

Eight teams will take part in the double elimination event, including two South Dakota entries, one from North Dakota, two out-state Minnesota teams, city champions from Minneapolis and St. Paul and a host Austin squad.

North Star Transport draws the St. Paul team in first round play Saturday at 10:30 a.m. Finals will be played Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

A second place finisher in the Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league this summer, North Star Transport earlier won the District 7 tournament played here and then placed second in last week's state tournament played at Hutchinson.

"We hit the ball fairly well and we got pretty good pitching from Tom Neibauer and Marty Brown," said North Star Transport manager Maynard Moen of his team's state tournament performance where they beat the Elk River American Legion 9-3, ripped Prairie House Restaurant 15-1, lost to Windom 3-0, edged Frazee 5-4, got by Reef Lounge of Duluth 4-3, reversed Windom 6-0 and lost to Charlie's Dutch Room of Duluth 8-4 in the finals.

Moen's state tournament roster will include Nick Neibauer, Tom Neibauer, Ron Ostby, Darrell Stromlund, Marty Brown, Bruce Johnson, Steve Daley, Jim Hopper, Howard Dalager, Bruce (Bennie) Johnson, Kevin Sethre and Mike Carriere.

Dalager, however, isn't likely to play this weekend after suffering a shoulder injury in the state tournament. Moen hopes to add Frazee's Bruce Ferguson, an outstanding pitcher-hitter, to his squad for the trip to Austin, although Ferguson himself is nursing a finger injury.

"I would hope that we'll be competitive," said Moen as he looked ahead. "All the teams we face will be tough, but we should be on par with them."

In addition to the Class B event, Austin will also be hosting the Class A and Class AA Northern Region tournaments this weekend.

Texas Golf Is Featured Here On Saturday

An 18-hole Texas golf tournament will be played Saturday at the Thief River Country Club. Tee-off time is 10 a.m.

Under Texas rules, golfers are divided into four-member teams. Each golfer hits one tee shot and all four advance to the best drive to play their second shots. This procedure continues until the foursome has completed the hole, each shot coming from the best-placed ball.

Tournament entry fee is $4, which includes a lunch between nines.

Men's Golf League Starts Final Week

With only one week of regular season play remaining in the men's golf league at the Thief River Country Club, just one of the three divisional races remains close.

That lone title race is in the Demaret Division where the Arctic Swingers have a four-week total of 729 and a two-stroke lead over former division-leading Elks. KOSN is eight shots back at 737.

Arctic Swingers include Jon Bolen, Bob Carlson, Harvey Ebbighausen, Chuck Follett and Bob Kuchowicz.

At 722, Pepsi-Cola owns a comfortable 12-stroke lead over Doctors, Inc., in the Hogan Division, with Miracle Water another three shots back.

The Pepsi-Cola line-up features Elton Cummings, Don Goodrich, Charles Samuelson, Bob Anderson and Clayton Hefty.

Snead Division is still subject to the domination of Wennberg's four-week total of 712, best score in the league and good for a 16-stroke lead over Home Box Office. Blue Cross is a distant third, 25 shots off the pace.

Wennberg's team members are Dale Wennberg, Curt Geatz, Gus Holmes, Larry Spong and Russ Lane.

Division winners qualify for the August 29 post-season playoffs.

At 36, Bob Forberg, Marv Carlson and Steve Waale all shared low gross honors in last week's league play. Bob Carlson's 31 was the low net score.

Changes Are Made In Deer License Laws

Starting with the 1979 deer season, hunters will no longer be able to buy a license on the first day of the hunt, the Department of Natural Resources announced recently.

A bill passed at the 1977 legislative session requires hunters to purchase their license no later than the day before the season opens. Although the law was passed two years ago, it provided that it would not take effect until 1979.

The law also provided that bow and arrow deer hunters will have to buy their licenses no later than the day before the opening of the firearms season.

The new regulation means that this year all deer licenses must be purchased no later than Nov. 2.

Prior to this year, licenses could be purchased as late as the first day of the season — a provision that enforcement officials say lead to abuses.

Vandals Kill 25,000 Trout At Hatchery

Vandals killed 25,000 brown trout valued at more than $7,000 at an experimental hatchery of the Interior Department's national fisheries center in Leetown, West Virginia.

The vandals entered the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service facility between midnight and 5 a.m. on August 7. They pulled the drain pipes on two 100-foot-long outdoor raceways, causing the water to drain out. The fish were left to suffocate in the air.

Bobcat Study Will Be Subject Of Conference

North America's smallest native wild cat, the bobcat, will be the subject of a research conference cosponsored by the National Wildlife Federation and the endangered species scientific authority (ESSA), October 16 through 18, at the Smithsonian research center in Front Royal, Va.

More than 40 experts will meet to discuss methods and techniques for assessing the population status and management of the bobcat.

"The bobcat has become a very controversial cat," explained Claudia Kendrew, resource specialist with NWF. "Because its pelt has become so valuable, the fur industry would like to see more of the cats being trapped. But some biologists question how long the bobcat population could sustain heavy trapping. We hope at the conference to come up with some answers, so we can make intelligent decisions about how the cat should be managed."

The bobcat was not always such a controversial cat. A small animal, weighing up to 25 pounds, the stealthy bobcat is found in nearly all of the lower 48 states.

Although the bobcat's usual fare is mice, rats, squirrels, birds and rabbits, it may attack farm animals. This tendency led some states to classify the cat as a varment, with a bounty on its scalp.

Then, in 1975, an international treaty — the convention on international trade and endangered species (CITES) — banned all commercial trade in the furs of big spotted cats. With their old supply cut off, the once-scorned bobcat pelt, which is tan to reddish brown, looked quite attractive to European furriers. Prices soared — one pelt sold for as much as $400 — and in the 1976-77 trapping season, more than 100,000 bobcats were taken.

Some biologists began to worry about the bobcat population, but information was scarce. In 1977, ESSA, which was established to direct U.S. compliance with CITES, proposed that all exports of bobcat fur be banned. In the face of loud protests from some state and game agencies, ESSA backed down, but did place the cat on appendix II of CITES. This means ESSA must review the bobcat population and management status for each state before exports of pelts are allowed.

Some states have gone so far as to ban bobcat hunting and trapping altogether, but many officials argue that this is a mistake. "Most of our bobcat information is derived from hunting and trapping," Chet McCord of the Massachusetts fisheries and wildlife division recently told National Wildlife magazine. "Without this information, we can't manage the animals."

But Maurice Hornocker, of Idaho, one of the country's best-known wildlife biologists, does not entirely agree. "Trapping information has its place," he explained to National Wildlife, "but too many states use it as a crutch — an easy way to manage bobcats without doing the necessary in-depth studies."

Kendrew hopes the research conference can help settle these arguments. Among the issues to be discussed at the conference are survey techniques, harvest reports, pelt trade and utilization, factors affecting harvest level, response of population to harvest and the relationship of habitat studies to census techniques.

PITCHER Tom Neibauer and his North Star Transport teammates will be competing this weekend in the 1979 Northern Region Class B men's fast pitch softball tournament at Hutchinson. The Thief River Falls team will face a St. Paul entry in its first round test at 10:30 a.m. Saturday. Championship game of the eight-team double elimination tournament will be played Sunday at 2:30 p.m.

Bear Hunting Regulations Are Changed

Department of Natural Resources officials reminded Minnesotans of the change in bear regulations which will be in effect this year.

New regulation requires all baiting stations to be registered with the local conservation officer or the DNR Director of Enforcement, Box 47 Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155.

Registrations must be made before the baiting station is established. Registrations must include the section, range and township of the baiting site along with the operator's name, address and telephone number.

Although present law prohibits the use of bottles, cans, plastic, paper, metal or other nonbiodegradable materials to lure or attract bear, some people have been using nonbiodegradable materials in establishing their stations. These materials have been deposited in both public and private lands without obtaining permission.

Another bear hunting regulation announced last week prohibited the placement of bait prior to August 25. Due to the late notice to the public on this regulation, the DNR officials have decided to drop the regulation for this year and to allow placement of bait prior to August 25.

The 1979 bear season begins September 4 and closes October 23.

Size Limit Is Maintained On Frog Specimens

Although anglers and bait dealers will still be allowed to gather frogs for bait purposes, the Department of Natural Resources announced that the ban on taking of frogs six inches or more in length will continue until further notice.

Taking of the larger frogs, used primarily for school study and medical research purposes, was halted in 1974 and has been prohibited since that time.

A massive die off of frogs, caused by "red leg" disease, occurred in 1974 and recent surveys by the DNR indicate that the frog population has not recovered.

DNR Taking Tree Orders September 1

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources issued a reminder that orders for tree planting stock to be shipped next spring will be accepted by the DNR forestry division starting September 1.

Orders will be taken until March 15, 1980, or until supplies are exhausted. In 14 southeastern counties, however, orders will be taken only until January 31, 1980.

The seedlings are sold for the purposes of reforestation, windbreaks, shelterbelts, erosion control, soil and water conservation and for permanent food and cover for wildlife.

The trees may not be planted for ornamental purposes nor can they be resold, given away or be removed with the roots attached.

Most species of evergreen (conifer) seedlings are available from DNR nurseries, said forestry officials, but there has been a slight price increase from last year. The conifer seedlings will sell for $50 per thousand.

Some species of leaf-bearing (deciduous) seedlings are also available and they will remain at the same price as last year — $60 per thousand.

Orders are accepted on a first come first serve basis. However, some conifer orders will be restricted to a maximum number in order to spread the available supply as far as possible. Those planning to order trees should send their order in as soon as possible, foresters advised.

Minimum order is 500 trees.

Price lists and order blanks can be obtained from DNR forestry offices, ASCS (Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service) offices, SCS (Soil Conservation Services) offices, county extension offices or by contacting DNR-Forestry; Centennial Building, St. Paul, Minnesota 55155. Phone 612-296-4479.

State Fishing Records Must Follow Rules

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has announced rules concerning verification of potential state angling records.

Although the department has maintained angling records for many years, there has never been an official procedure for fishermen to claim a state record.

From now on, the following requirements must be met before any fish is granted "state record" status:

+The fish must be legally taken by angling in Minnesota waters.

+The weight must be verified as soon as possible on a state certified retail scale and witnessed by at least one observer.

+This information, along with other pertinent data, must be recorded on a "Minnesota state record fish application" — available at any section of fisheries office. The form must be signed, notarized and then submitted to: Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, Section of Fisheries, Box 12 Centennial Office Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

+The fish must be retained by the angler for possible inspection by section of fisheries officials until state record status is either granted or denied.

Section of fisheries officials noted that all fish presently considered state records will remain so unless someone comes forward with information proving an existing record invalid. In that case, the second largest fish on the list will become the new record.

Duluth Hosts 1979 National Trail Meet

Impact of gasoline shortages on the future of many types of recreational activities will be one of the major topics under discussion at the fifth national trail symposium at the Radisson in Duluth September 4-7.

Those who use recreational trails — hikers, bicyclists, cross-country skiers, snowmobilers and horseback riders — are invited to discuss common concerns — such as the problems of liability on trails that cross private property, railroad right-of-ways and the challenge of sharing common trails between different users such as snowmobilers and skiers. There will also be pointers given on new trail building techniques and maintenance.

Plans for national trails in the U.S. and Canadian parks and forests will be discussed by a panel including Chris Delaporte, director of the Heritage conservation recreational service in Washington and Robert Marois, director of agreements to recreation and conservation parks in Quebec, Canada.

Wayne Olson, former commissioner of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources, will moderate a panel on liability questions. Attorney General Warren Spannaus will join representatives of the private sector in discussing the impact of lawsuits on trail programs.

Separate presentations will be made on some of the common concerns of those who construct trails. Snowmobilers, skiers and horseback riders will discuss how to use common trails.

"Ours is a symposium for private citizens as well as government agencies who have an interest in trails," said Don Ledin, trails coordinator for the DNR.

Those interested in more information about the program and registration procedures should contact Don Ledin, National Trail Symposium, Box 39 Cent. Bldg. St. Paul, MN 55155. 612-296-4494.

DNR Firearms Auction Nets Record Total

An auction of firearms and other items of hunting and fishing equipment in St. Paul on Aug. 11 netted the Department of Natural Resources $17,687.

The guns and equipment were confiscated during the past year from violators of the state's hunting and fishing laws.

The total return from the auction was $3,000 higher than last year, Tarte said. The receipts are deposited in the state game and fish fund and used for management purposes.

School Safety Urged By MN. Commissioner

Motorists, school children and parents should take specific steps to bring about a "safe-accident-free school year," according to John P. Sopsic, commissioner of the Minnesota department of public safety.

"Parents can play a great role in teaching children good traffic safety habits," said Sopsic. "They should teach small children the basics, such as walking on sidewalks or, where there are none, walking on the left side of the road, facing traffic."

He said parents also should teach young children the meaning of traffic signals and the importance of crossing at corners.

"It's very important for parents to help children map out a safe route to school," Sopsic said. "This means making use of low-volume traffic streets and making few crossings."

In late fall and winter, parents can also protect their children by providing reflective tape on their outer garments.

Motorists must be watchful for children during early morning and mid-afternoon hours, especially near school grounds, the commissioner said.

"Drivers must recognize and obey school patrols and school speed zone signs," Sopsic said. "They must remember to obey the extended school bus arm, which means cars must sto, no closer, than 20 feet from the bus in both directions."

He added that motorists should be careful not to intersect a column of children crossing a street or road and to give pedestrains in corsswalks the right-of-way.

School children, too, must do their part to prevent accidents, Sopsic said, by learning and obeying traffic signals, using sidewalks whenever possible, looking both ways before crossing, not playing in the streets and obeying the school patrol.

"A good school year begins with sound traffic safety principles," the Commissioner said. "Everyone can do something to help prevent traffic accidents."

Alliance Made Among State Worker Groups

An organization of state employee organizations — the Minnesota alliance of united labor (MAUL) — has elected its first slate of officers.

President Donald C. Hill of the Minnesota Education association, (MEA) is president. Vice president is Lawrence M. Bastian, a business agent and vice president of Teamsters union local 320. Secretary-treasurer is Ralph S. Chesebrough, executive director of the Minnesota community college faculty association (MCCFA).

MAUL, which represents employees of the state of Minnesota, was organized, according to Hill, "for the purpose of providing an organization through which they may work in concert for the benefit of all state employees." MAUL worked closely with MCCFA and MEA during the community college faculty strike earlier this year.

MAUL's membership includes — in addition to MEA, MCCFA and Teamsters local 320 — Independent Minnesota association of government employees (IMAGE), Inter Faculty organization (IFO), MEA affiliate of faculty on the seven Minnesota state university campuses, Minnesota association of hearing officers, Minnesota government engineers council, Minnesota nurses association, Minnesota state fire-arson investigators (IAFF Local S-13), Minnesota state patrol officers association and state residential schools education association (SRSEA—an MEA statewide local).

Other organizations that represent state employees, Hill said, have expressed interest in joining MAUL.

Clint Eastwood finds himself behind bars at the toughest prison in the world in "Escape From Alcatraz." Starts Fri., Aug. 24, at the Galaxy Twin Theatre.

INFLATION-FIGHTING IDEAS

Fill'er Up Lightly

Higher octane gasoline will not automatically give your car more power and better mileage.

Like many Americans, you may be operating your car on gasoline with a higher octane rating than you really need.

Do you know which octane number gas to choose? If your car was built since 1975, it's probably equipped with a catalytic converter that requires you to use unleaded gas to meet current exhaust emission standards. But all unleadeds are not the same. You may be buying one with an octane that's too high.

About 70 percent of the cars that require unleaded gas run satisfactorily on regular unleaded. The remaining 30 percent "knock," and may "run on" after the engine is turned off. Only these require higher-octane fuel.

Older cars sometimes do need a higher-octane fuel due to deposit build-up inside the engine, but nearly two-thirds of the cars burning leaded premium gas today could switch to an unleaded premium of at least 92 octane.

To help in another way too, don't "top-off"—don't fill up a more than half full tank in order to keep it brimming. There are 112 million passenger vehicles in the U.S., and many are now being driven on almost constantly full tanks because owners have an exaggerated fear of running out of gas. This form of hoarding not only may deny someone else (including an emergency service—such as police and fire departments) the needed fuel but also may help create temporary shortages.

For answers to other questions about gasoline, write for "The Gasoline Book," Answer Books, Shell Oil Co., P.O. Box 4315, Dept. N, Houston, Texas 77001.

Asking Support For Nicaraguan War Victims

Minnesotans who want to help victims of the Nicaraguan civil strife disaster are urged to make cash donations to the American National Red Cross or other voluntary agencies, Roy Aune, acting director of emergency services, a division of the Minnesota department of public safety, said recently.

"The office of U.S. foreign disaster assistance has informed Aune, who also is a director of the Minnesota foreign disaster relief council, that the new government of Nicaragua has appealed for assistance and that the various organizations have relief programs in the disaster area such as American Red Cross and CARE.

"To ensure that relief channels do not become overloaded and to guarantee the standardization and quality of needed items, the Minnesota council strongly emphasizes that contributions of food and other materials should not be made unless a specific request is received and organized. The international organizations are working with the Nicaraguan government, and whatever aid may be needed can best be supplied immediately through these organizations."

The June-July fighting in Nicaragun, a continuation of the September, 1978, civil strife, resulted in thousands being displaced. According to the office of U.S. foreign disaster assistance approximately 72,000 people are located in red cross camps in and around the capitol city of Managua. An additional 48,000 fled to Honduras, 42,000 to Costa Rica, and presently 250,000 people in Managua depend upon the red cross for food. The number of needy throughout the nation is estimated at 350,000 to 500,000.

For additional information contact Roy Aune, Acting Director of Emergency Services, B-5 State Capitol, St. Paul, 55155, 612-296-0451.

GT QUICK-BIN

The fastest bin in the West! 2 men can set it up anywhere in 1 hour. No cement pad needed.

Boxcars are becoming increasingly scarce and elevators are filling up. Avoid being forced to pile grain on the ground and incurring grain spoilage. QUICK-BIN protects 2,500 bushels (or 5,000 bu.) from snow, moisture, wind and insects.

Take QUICK-BIN wherever you're harvesting even by car. Beats hauling grain if you fill directly from a combine. Unloads easily by auger/elevator. Then fold it up ready to relocate anywhere for the next crop.

Materials are steel and cross woven fabric that's tougher to tear than a phone book. QUICK-BIN folds when emptied to be used again. Replacement liners available.

QUICK-BIN is the least expensive, most convenient, and in so many respects the safest grain storage available for short-term or years-long use. $695 complete with illustrated instructions and all materials. ($1,165 for 5,000 bu. size)

Harvest Slow Due To Cool Temperatures

Abnormally low temperatures held back small grain harvest and slowed row crop development throughout the state last week, according to the Minnesota crop and livestock reporting service. The season's first frosts occurred last week in a few extreme northern localities. Damage generally appears light but the extent of the injury to late season crops is not fully evident yet.

With moderate rainfall in most areas, soil moisture remained adequate to surplus in the southern half of the state and short to adequate in the northern half.

Low temperatures limited growing degree day accumulations — setting the corn crop further behind normal and making it potentially more vulnerable to frost damage. To date, 62 per cent of the corn is in or past the milk stage and 11 per cent is in dough — one to two weeks behind normal.

Soybeans need warm weather and more sunshine to aid in good pod set. Excess moisture is also stunting growth in some southern soybean fields. About 69 per cent of the crop is setting pods. Late growing weeds are becoming a problem in some fields.

Small grain harvest lagged last week. Light showers, heavy dews and cold weather restricted combining time to a few hours in the afternoons. Quality and test weights of the grain already harvested varies greatly. About 11 per cent of state's spring wheat, 34 per cent of the oats, and 29 per cent of the barley is combined. Meanwhile, farmers have combined 64 per cent of the winter wheat and 62 per cent of the rye.

Sunflowers are blooming in all but the extreme northern growing areas.

A few flax fields were swathed last week but harvest continues well behind normal. About 58 per cent of the acreage is turning ripe.

According to crop reporters, farm diesel fuel availability eased somewhat last week while gasoline supplies remained adequate to tight.

$1,072,000 In Farm Purchase Loans Approved

Five additional applications recommended by the Minnesota farm security advisory council at its August meeting for state guaranteed farm purchase loans totaling $1,072,000 have been approved by agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin.

August farm security loan approvals increased the volume for the model program now in its third year of implementation to 158 loans totaling over $25.3 million for the purchase of 25,292 acres of farm land in 51 Minnesota counties.

Approved as new Minnesota farm purchasers under 90 per cent loan guarantees and four per cent interest adjustments are:

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Gall, Rogers, $114,000 loan on the purchase of a 336-acre dairy farm in Morrison county; Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Boody, Foley, $133,000 loan on the purchase of a 160-acre dairy farm in Morrison county; Tracy Booth, Tracy, $286,000 loan on the purchase of a 160-acre hog and beef farm in Murray county; Mr. and Mrs. Ross Bierbaum, Eyota, $350,000 loan on the purchase of a 280-acre dairy farm in Olmsted county; and Mr. and Mrs. Kevin Anderson, Ada, $189,000 loan on the purchase of a 151-acre cash crops farm in Norman county.

The Bierbaum loan is sponsored by the seller and a commercial lender. The other four loans are seller sponsored.

"BLAST TO BROOKS" queen candidate, Vicki Lynn Grove, is one of six girls competing for the Miss Brooks title. Fifteen-year-old Vicki is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sherlen Grove of Brooks. She will be a freshman at Plummer high school this fall and her hobbies include swimming, dancing, arts and crafts, babysitting and sewing. Vicki is sponsored in the contest by the Cozy Bar. Miss Brooks candidate that sells the most "Blast to Brooks" buttons will be crowned Miss Brooks at the community's September 8 celebration.

Mn Homeowner Tax Refunds Can Be Claimed

Some $40 million in property tax refunds is waiting to be claimed by state homeowners and renters, the Minnesota department of revenue has announced.

Revenue commissioner Clyde Allen said the state expects to pay out over $199 million through the refund program this year. But, he added, by July, refund returns totaling only $150 million had been processed.

Homeowners and renters who haven't filed yet still have another month — the deadline is August 31. Those who apply later are still eligible for a refund, but by law it will be reduced by five per cent each month after August 31, up to a maximum reduction of 25 per cent.

Based on the returns processed so far, refunds are averaging around $218, close to last year's final average of $212, Allen said.

Last year, around 936,000 Minnesotans applied for the refund, Allen said, and about the same number are expected to file again this year. Over 752,000 have already done so, he added.

Most Minnesotans who own or rent their homes are eligible to apply for a refund under the state's program to ease the burden of property taxes. And, Allen continued, the forms and instructions for applying should already be in the hands of most Minnesota taxpayers. The yellow property tax refund booklets were in the income tax instruction booklets mailed to taxpayers last January. But, he added, Minnesotans who did not file income tax returns may still be entitled to a property tax refund.

To get a property tax refund form or information about the program, Twin Cities area residents may call 296-3781. Those outside the metro area may call the Revnue department't toll-free number, (800) 652-9084. Deaf, hearing-impaired, and speech-impaired Minnesotans may call the department's TTY number, 297-2196.

Many of those who have already applied for the property tax refund are renters, senior citizens, or disabled persons who sent their forms in when they filed their 1978 income tax returns, according to Allen. Under state law, people in those groups have the choice of using the refund as a credit on their income tax return, or of taking a direct cash refund. Homeowners under age 65 who are not disabled can apply only for the refund.

Those homeowners should start looking for their checks around the middle of October, Allen said. Since the refund program is designed to help the property taxes, state law calls for the checks to be mailed out two to three weeks before property taxes are due. And, he added, October 31 is the date that the second installment of the property taxes are due.

Energy To Be Major Issue At MN. State Fair

Energy issues. . .supplies, costs and alternatives. . .will be a major area of interest at the 1979 Minnesota state fair, August 23 through Labor Day. Representatives from the Minnesota energy agency will be on hand at two separate energy exhibits to answer questions and offer assistance on energy related matters.

One MEA exhibit is "Energy Encounters," a unique trailer exhibition containing the energy story through the use of colors, lights, illustrations and audience participation exhibits. "Energy Encounters" is designed to demonstrate which segments of American society use the most energy, the urgency of energy problems in the U.S., and some of the technological developments necessary to solve these problems.

Part of the display looks at energy problems and potential solutions through new developments in such areas as conservation, oil, natural gas, cola, geothermal, wind, solar, ocean thermal energy and nucleear fusion energy.

"Energy Encounters" trailer will be located right across from the DNR building on Clough street on the Fairgrounds. A MEA staff member will be on hand to answer questions, as well as a representative from the American museum of science and energy.

"Energy Encounters" is on loan to the Minnesota energy agency from Oak Ridge associated universities and is the newest traveling exhibition of the U.S. department of energy.

Recognizing that many Minnesotans will not get to the state fair, MEA has arranged for "Energy Encounters" to be in Moorhead, Wednesday and Thursday, August 15 and 16; Duluth, Sunday and Monday, August 19 and 20; Mankato, Wednesday and Thursday, September 5 and 6; Austin, Saturday and Sunday, September 8 and 9. Information on exact location in these cities may be obtained by calling the energy information center at 296-5175 or toll-free 800-652-9747.

In addition to "Energy Encounters," Minnesota energy agency is one of four cooperating state agencies hosting a woodburning exhibit at the state fair.

Quie, Seetin To Stage Duel At State Fair

Governor Al Quie has accepted the challenge of agriculture commissioner Mark Seetin to determine in a duel at the Minnesota state fair Tuesday, August 28, which of the two farming public officials has the most "pull."

The duel at 11 a.m., will be fought with milk stools, pails and Holstein cows. . . a special added attraction to the annual milking contests promoted and supervised at the state fair by the American Dairy association of Minnesota. Schedule conflicts made a "high noon showdown" shift necessary.

Official site for the top level milking contest will be the WCCO radio outdoor amphitheater on the state fair grounds — or for fairgoers more romantically oriented, just west of the Old Mill.

In challenging his boss to the milking contest, commissioner Seetin pointed out that he had "heard and read much about Governor Quie's enthusiasm for and proven skills in horsemanship," but he questioned "how long it has been, considering your long and dedicated full time public service in both state and federal government, since you have tested and demonstrated one of your skills acquired as a dairy farmer? Like milking cows by hand, as modern dairy farmers still must do when the electrical power service is knocked out by Mother Nature?"

Holsteins were selected by both contestants from three breeds of dairy animals that will be available at the state fair August 18. The governor's dairy farm in Rice county currently is stocked with Guernseys, but earlier, including his pre-public service farming career, he maintained a herd of Holsteins. The other two breeds available August 28 are Ayrshire and Milking Shorthorn.

Commissioner Seetin's current farming enterprise in Faribault county is committed to corn and soybean production, but he does have dairy farming experience.

All in fun and in the spirit of the state fair the purpose of the duel is to emphasize the importance of dairy farming to Minnesota agriculture and to the health of the state economy. Milk production is the single leading source of Minnesota gross farm income in this fourth-leading dairy state.

THE DEVELOPMENT

The attractive sign on the highway says "Glenview Estates" or something like that. But to folks in the older part of town it is just "the development."

And to the folks who live here it is home!

Before the builder completed his development a group of the neighbors got together and built a church here. It's a small church, and it took a lot of financial help from denominational headquarters to build . . . but it's here!

And now that the developer has left, our little church has become The Developer. It is bringing to life in Glenview Estates (or something like that) essential ingredients that architects, builders and landscapers cannot provide . . . the Faith around which to build a home . . . the Truth by which to raise a family.

In or near every development there is a real Developer. Thank God! And thank also the earnest people who establish, attend, support and serve our churches!

SAY "PUDDING" FOR THIS PIE

When you're short on time and dessert belongs on the menu, it's remarkably easy to bring a Pudding Cheese Pie to the table. Whatever your selection of flavors, Jell-O instant pudding and pie filling combines deliciously in a mixture with cream cheese and milk. Pie filling mix is the start of this homemade pie, and you can vary this recipe with a variety of flavors. Plan ahead by having a packaged crumb crust on hand, too.

PUDDING CHEESE PIE

1 package (8 oz.) cream cheese, softened
2 cups cold milk
1 package (4-serving size) lemon, coconut cream, vanilla, or pineapple cream flavor instant pudding and pie filling
1 baked 9-inch graham cracker crumb crust, cooled

Beat cream cheese until very soft. Gradually add 1/2 cup of the milk and blend until smooth. Add remaining milk and pie filling mix. Beat as directed on package. Pour immediately into crust. Chill until firm, at least 2 hours. Garnish with lemon slice, if desired.

Note: Filling may also be chilled in crumb-lined 8-inch square pan, using amount of crumbs as for 9-inch crust. Or omit crust and chill in individual dishes.

Great Government Thinkers

Columnist Bob Johnson had the following comments in a recent issue of the Wadena Pioneer-Journal:

It's heartening to know in these dark and troubled times that our government is taking the bull by the horns. . .or vice versa.

Take President Carter's recent order that buildings be air-conditioned to no cooler than 78 degrees, for instance. The director of conservation in New York state's energy office summed the order up this way: "This is a voluntary program, even though it's mandatory."

I mulled this over for a long time. Voluntary, but mandatory, "It's brilliant," I finally said to myself. In fact, I think the government's new voluntary-but-mandatory system should be carried over to the private economy.

I can hardly wait to get a bill from Ma Bell that says, "We will disconnect your service within five days, unless you don't want us to." Or the parking ticket I get on my next trip to the Twin Cities that will read, "Please circle amount of fine you want to pay: $5, $2, None."

And then think of all the work provided when they change highway signs to read: "Speed limit 55 miles per hour unless you want to go faster."

It gets better and better. I get on the bathroom scale in the morning and instead of the discouraging truth, I'm greeted with a dial that flashes a little message, "What am I bid?"

I'm really waiting for next April 15 when the IRS checks the bottom line on my tax return and says, "Look at it this way, it's only 75 per cent of what you made last year." I'll just lean back and say, "I don't wanna. New policy — mandatory but voluntary, just like the president's energy order."

While all this has been going on, researchers on the scientific front have now made an important breakthrough. They've come up with the startling news that if the temperature is over 78 degrees, you should wear less clothes.

Now this breakthrough ranks right along with a tip I read last winter: "To be more comfortable in very cold weather, dress warmly."

Now I don't want you to get the idea I go around making fun of the great government thinkers of our time. Far from it. After all, I've been a card-carrying member of the Flat Earth society for years.

Views On Energy

W. M. Buescher of Grass Roots Communications, Inc., in Pigeon Forge, Tenn., wrote the following comments which appeared in a recent issue of "Nation's Business" magazine:

"If we had wanted an energy crisis in this country, we could not have orchestrated it better.

Five years ago, politicians were introducing legislation to prohibit the small car because it was dangerous.

We banned drilling for oil in Alaska because it would disturb the love life of the caribou.

We banned drilling in the Santa Barbara channel because it might get the beach dirty.

We forbade drilling on government land because "that belongs to the government, not the people."

We took a partisan position in the Mideast, and the Arabs did just what you and I would have done under the same circumstances.

We ordained unleaded gasoline that takes more fuel stocks than leaded and produces a more deadly poison.

We continued a government mandate to drive trucks home empty.

We prevented a pipeline from being built inland from California.

We insult Mexico with its large reserves of petroleum.

We freeze prices to discourage expansion of the oil industry at home.

We make it next to impossible to open a coal mine.

We stall nuclear power and eliminate the breeder reactor.

We penalize the automobile even though some get 28 to 40 passenger miles per gallon compared to 20.7 for the airlines and 9.89 for mass transit.

We make no serious moves to break up the OPEC cartel, but instead hire 17,000 people in the Energy Department.

"Energy Mayday: Is Anybody Listening?" Yes, Washington is listening. And they'll be listening when it is Juneday and Julyday and Augustday. Next year, expect 37,000 in the Energy Department."

The tragic part of the energy crisis is that through American industry, business or the free enterprise system we have people who could present viable solutions. It is very sad that this brainpower, this resource, obviously isn't tapped.

How will future generations regard the failure of our government today to draw on this means by which relief or solutions could have been advanced and utilized?

Treasury of Trivia

Following is a collection of bits of information which you probably never wanted to know and will likely soon forget but which provide interest for the moment:

In the Middle Ages, King Charles I of England was so impressed by an attractive platter of beef that he touched it with his sword and dubbed it, "Sir Loin." That is how the term 'sirloin' for a cut of beef originated.

The tipping custom originated in England when small sums of money were dropped into a box marked, 'T.I.P.S.'—To Insure Prompt Service.

The barber pole began its career in the middle ages, when the art of surgery and the trade of the barber were combined. Blood-letting was then a great cure-all: a vein, usually in the arm, was opened and the patient was given a stick or pole to grasp tightly, thus making blood flow more freely. When not in use, the stick was hung outside the shop; a white bandage wound around it in a spiral ready for use. But the sight of the gory pole was discouraging to the squeamish, and so in time barbers replaced it with a pole painted red and white.

Among the ancient Greeks there was a class of men who learned how to make themselves welcome at the tables of rich men by providing entertainment of a flattering nature. To such a man was applied the term, 'parasitus,' made up of the preposition, 'para', meaning 'beside', and 'sitos,' meaning 'food'. The term was translated into Latin as 'parasitus' and into English as 'parasite.'

"To the bitter end" has a nautical origin. A ship's anchor chain, at the point where it was fastened to a vertical timber called 'bitt,' was known as the 'bitter end.' Thus, when the chain had been played out to the 'bitter end,' there's nothing more that can be done.

In the late 19th century, Evanston, Illinois, nicknamed, "Heavenston' by Frances Willard, was so pious that town fathers, resenting the influences of the soda fountain, passed an ordinance forbidding the sale of ice cream sodas on Sunday. Some ingenious confectioners, obeying the law, served ice cream with syrup but without soda. This soda-less soda was the Sunday soda, and became so popular that orders for "Sundays" crossed the counter every day of the week. When objection was raised to christening the dish after the Sabbath, the spelling was changed to Sundae and became one of America's most characteristic dishes.

The phrase "giving him the cold shoulder" dates back to a medieval French custom. Honored guests were served hot meat dishes, but when they overstayed their welcome or became otherwise unpopular, their host literally gave them a "cold shoulder" of beef or mutton.

Borrowed Nonsense:

"Now that we've struck oil on the farm," the happy North Dakotan said to his wife, "you've got to go out and get some decent clothes."

"Nothing doing, Henry!" she replied. "I've been wearing decent clothes all my life. Now I'm going to dress like other women!"

"Your loan application looks complete," the banker said to his prospective client. "In fact, you have been very candid. In that question where it asks your relationship to Mrs. Smith, it would have been quite sufficient for you to state 'wife' rather than 'strained'."

Johnny's mother threatened her young son that if he used profanity again she would toss him out of the house. Scarcely a day had passed before she once again heard him swear. Dutifully she packed up his clothes and put him out the back door. While she watched from the window he spent an hour on the back steps in contemplation. Believing he had time to consider the error of his ways, she opened the door and asked why he hadn't left. "I was just wondering," he said, "where the hell I would go."

As a man and his small son squeezed into a crowded elevator, a matronly passenger asked the man if he didn't fear his son would be squashed. "Not a chance," he said. "The little rascal bites."

U.S. Senator Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

Another Insidious Bureaucratic Increase

It would be nice to think that the financial mishaps of the Upper Great Lakes Regional Commission (UGLRC) are an isolated instance of questionable government spending.

Two audits suggest otherwise. The Inspector General of the Department of Commerce and the General Accounting Office (GAO) studied Regional Commissions nationwide and their conclusions indicate:

—The commission's programs are not distributing funds in the way they were supposed to under the law which created them.

—The commissions have been ineffective in coordinating and directing their operations.

—Many of the commissions are overlooking the purposes for which they were originally established.

Clearly, the UGLRC is not alone as a subject for criticism.

Yet, when S.835, the Regional Development Act of 1979, was recently debated in the Senate, it was decided. . .not to seriously reevaluate the whole Regional Commission program and get it straightened out. . .but to drastically enlarge its scope and dramatically increase its funding.

This is a sad story of the way bureaucracy proliferates.

The Regional Commission idea started out small and fairly innocently. In the beginning, the goal was to help out the Appalachian area. Said the sponsors of the original act, certain impoverished areas could best be helped if their economic problems were dealt with in a regional, coordinated manner.

Overnight, we've seen the concept mushroom; today, the entire area of 40 states and at least part of every other state except Alaska and Hawaii are within one of these "regions".

But, beyond providing employment for thousands of bureaucrats, exactly what the commissions may have accomplished is unknown. They've never been required to evaluate consistently the reusults of their programs and projects.

With the passage of S.835, however, a really monstrous adolescent has evolved from the offspring of the first Regional Commission Act.

Instead of "targeted" areas of certain states under commission jurisdiction, the entire area of the United States will now be included.

Three new federal offices will be created to deal with the commissions' added responsibilities.

Practically all restrictions on their authority to fund projects have been removed.

The commissions' decision-making powers will now supercede those of the states and the other federal agencies in many cases.

I co-sponsored an amendment that would at least have deleted part of the bill which sets up a super-structure for a national growth policy with all kinds of power resting in the hands of the Regional Commissioners.

The amendment was defeated, though narrowly. Its defeat is especially upsetting in light of the serious criticism leveled against the commissions that already exist.

The good news? Though the bill passed the Senate, it faced a fight. In previous years, no one had raised any objections to the Commission concept.

By next year, if only a very few more have seen the light, we can turn this program around.

MEATLOAF IS A CROWD PLEASER

Eating outdoors is the ideal way to feed a hungry crowd after a strenuous day in the sun and fresh air. And Barbecued Meat Loaves go a long way toward satisfying ravenous appetites. With the baked-in flavor of Open Pit barbecue sauce as both ingredient and topping, they are prepared inside and brought outdoors for the gang. Count on about twenty slices from the two loaves. Served with a crock of steaming baked beans, creamy coleslaw, crusty bread and assorted "nibbles," they're tailor-made to please the troops.

BARBECUED MEAT LOAF

- 1 bottle (18 oz.) all purpose barbecue sauce, any flavor
- 3 eggs, slightly beaten
- 3/4 cup milk
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 tablespoons dried parsley flakes
- 1 cup chopped onion
- 2 cups fine dry bread crumbs
- 5 pounds ground beef

Measure 1/2 cup of the barbecue sauce and set aside. Combine eggs, milk, salt and parsley; add remaining barbecue sauce and the onion. Stir in bread crumbs. Add bread mixture to meat; mix thoroughly. Divide mixture in half and shape each into two loaves in a large shallow baking pan. Brush lightly with part of the measured barbecue sauce. Bake at 350° for 50 to 60 minutes, brushing occasionally with remaining barbecue sauce. Makes 20 servings.

Army Reserve Stretchers a Helping Hand

Army Reservists, from the 307th General Hospital, lend a helping hand with critical care equipment during recent hospital move on Staten Island, New York.

Brilliant red strobe lights blitzed the eyes. The wail of sirens assaulted the ears. And, everywhere one looked, military and medical personnel were pushing stretchers and wheel chairs laden with the ill, injured, and infirm.

While this sounds like the scenario for a modern disaster film, it was nothing of the kind. It was, in fact, the Army Reserve doing something it does very well indeed, helping out.

The operation was dubbed "Helping Hand" and took place recently on Staten Island, New York. Some 80 members of the 307th General Hospital of the Army Reserve's 8th Medical Brigade were helping in the transfer of over 200 patients from Staten Island's 100-year-old hospital to a brand new medical facility about six miles away.

The Army Reservists combined their efforts with civilian authorities and ambulance services to prepare and transport all patients to the new, modern hospital. The move included the critically ill, infants in isolettes, surgical and maternity patients, as well as ambulatory patients. It was all accomplished by mid-afternoon, with none the worse for the experience.

Hospital director John F. Miller reacted to the Army Reserve's help by saying, "...we had almost reached a standstill when the people from the Reserve arrived. Then things got going again."

The operation is typical of the many Army Reserve projects undertaken throughout the year as part of its ongoing service to communities across the country.

Mrs. Herb Holthusen visited Saturday afternoon at the Clifford Anderson home.

Hints For Homeowners

BE WISE...ECONOMIZE!

If you're like most Americans, you are really beginning to "think economy." There's a new and increasing awareness among all that we won't be able to enjoy forever the fruits of the world's highest standard of living, unless we do.

Fortunately, economizing has become not only popular but a proud achievement. Husbands and wives are doing their own home repair and improvement work, cutting outside-help costs and practicing economy in the purchase of quality, lifetime tools with famous names like Crescent, Nicholson and Wiss. Home-sewing is on the rise, too.

Saving money by doing-it-yourself is becoming increasingly popular.

With gasoline both short and expensive, Americans are driving less by planning their car use—car pooling to school and work, making one "downtown" trip accomplish the results of two, using public transportation more. We've readjusted our home heating and cooling levels, insulated attics and are using home appliances sparingly, with forethought, to economize and conserve.

There is hope. Inflation and shortages can be controlled if we're wise and economize!

Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Tim Lundeen and Shannon, Mr. and Mrs. Merle Lundeen, Perry, Jeff and Dale and the exchange student Yusushi from Japan, and Mr. and Mrs. Greg Hilgeman enjoyed a sight seeing trip at Lake Itasca. EXPERIMENTAL PROJECT in home heating and cooling using the earth's nearly constant temperature is being undertaken at the Douglass Steiger farm home west of St. Hilaire. A demonstration on installation of the system was given Thursday. The machine at right drives sections of metal pipe deep into the ground, after which sealed plastic pipe is inserted and the metal pipe pulled to be used again. The plastic pipes will be connected to create a sealed system just below ground level and liquid will be circulated throughout the system in coordination with a heat pump in the home. Rather than heating the cold outside air in the winter and cooling the hot outside air in the summer, the heat pump will be supplied with liquid of a nearly constant temperature year-around.

Enrollment Decline Seen For Wed. School Opening

Continued decline in enrollment for School District 564 is expected as local schools will open for classes Wednesday morning. Enrollment in pupil units for the 1979-80 school year is predicted at 3,370 in comparison with 3,489 a year ago. The decline in pupil units is projected to continue at 3,256 in 1980-81 and 3,203 in 1981-82.

All emententary schools in Thief River Falls and St. Hilaire will begin at 8:25 a.m. Wednesday when a full day of classes will be held and school lunch programs will be in operations. Thief River Falls schools will dismiss at 3 p.m. and the St. Hilaire school at 3:20 p.m.

Kindergarten classes for the first half of the year will start at 8:25 a.m. and dismiss at 11 a.m. for morning sessions and will operate from 12:25 to 3 p.m. for afternoon sessions. Kindergarten information and schedules for the second half of the year will ebe announced later in the year.

Franklin middle school classes will start at 8:25 a.m. Wednesday while Lincoln high school classes will begin at 8:20 a.m. Franklin school will house grades six, seven and eight with grades nine through 12 attending Lincoln again this year.

On Wednesday at Lincoln school, students in grades nine and 10 are to report to the auditorium by 8:20 a.m. while those in grades 11 and 12 should go to classrooms designated on sheets posted by the entrance doors. Cafeteria will be open at noon and lunch will be served at a cost of 65 cents per student.

Classes at the area vocational-technical institute will not begin until September 4. Construction work on the new additions is continuing at a rapid rate but only a portion of the buildings will be used at the start of the school year.

Official deducation is planned for October 11, the 30th anniversary of the designation of the Thief River Falls AVTI.

Bus schedules have been changed with consolidation of routes this year. Parents of bus students are advised to check the schedule published in a special annual report supplement prepared by the school district and distributed in today's issue of the Northern Minnesota Shoppers Guide. Anyone who does not receive a copy of the annual report and is in need of the information may obtain a copy at the school district service center.

Lunch prices this year will be 60 cents for kindergarten through fifth grade, 65 cents for sixth through 12th grade, and $1.15 for AVTI students and all other adults. Extra half-pints of milk will be available at five cents for kindergarten through grade 12 students and 20 cents for all others. Free and reduced price meals are available to children in families with low income in accordance with federally-established guidelines.

After three days of classes this week, students and school personnel will have a day off Monday for the Labor day holiday. Classes will then continue daily until the teacher convention closing October 18-19. Thanksgiving holiday recess will include November 22 and 23 with the last day of school prior to Christmas vacation being December 21. Classes will resume January 3, 1980.
